FLORAL ARRANGEMENTS.

We present in this issue engravings from a number of photographs of floral arrangements by Mr. Samuel Murray, Kansas City, Mo., that we believe will be of general interest. All are good, and the use of the iris blooms in the cross seems to us particularly commendable.

We shall be pleased to have from others similar photographs of their work.

CARNATION NOTES.

The Stem Borer.

Wm. Freytag writes: "I send specimens of worms that are destroying my carnations in the field. They bore a hole in the side of the plant above the soil and eat upwards, killing the plant. Please let me know what they are and how to destroy them."

I have never been troubled by the worm of which he complains but have heard others complain of it. Have never heard it called anything else but stem-borer and have never heard of a remedy. Like all worms and insects that come out of the ground it will be sure to be hard to reach and I am at a loss to know just how it could be done successfully and expeditiously. To soak the ground with anything strong enough to destroy the pest would be certain death to the plants, and to poison them above the ground is almost out of the question as they only come up as high as the base of the plants. I believe it would pay W. F. to transplant his carnations to another field which he may have good reason to believe free from the pest. It is early enough in the season yet for the plants to take hold and grow right along and it will only cost him the labor it takes to transfer the plants. I would also plow the ground as late in the fall as possible every season, as I am inclined to think the severe freezing would destroy a large part of the worms or their eggs. It may take several seasons to do it, though. Would also suggest to W. F. to capture a few of the worms alive and put them in some soil into which some lime or wood ashes has been added and see if it has any effect on them; also try some with tobacco dust mixed with it. It will be well worth the trouble of finding a remedy and if he does find one let us hear what it is. If any of the Review's readers can give any light on this subject let him come forward at once and help W. F. out of his trouble.

Topping Field Plants.

One of the most important tasks we have during the summer is the process of pinching or topping the plants in the field to make them grow into nice, shapely plants which will carry themselves upright without any support. In order to do this intelligently you must thoroughly know each variety you are growing and top accordingly. Some varieties need really only one topping and after that an occasional flower shoot cut off toward fall, while others need to be topped every week or two during the growing season, not because they would run into bud quicker than the other, but because some varieties have a tendency to run along on the ground like a grapevine instead of forming a bushy, compact plant such as we desire. The sooner we work this straggling habit out of our carnations the better it will be for all of us, but at present some of our most profitable varieties are of that kind.

If your plants were propagated in good time they were large enough to be topped before planting in the field, but they will by this time need topping again, here and there, the tip taken out to keep the plant well balanced and shapely. During the spring months you top altogether to put shapeliness into your plants but later on you should have another object in view. Do you know that you can make your carnations bloom altgether in crops or you can make them bloom steadily along through the early winter? If you go over the plants once each week and top only the shoots that really need topping and leave the next size until the next week you will get your plants so that they will always have shoots in all stages, from the shoots with the bud peeping out down to the eye that is just breaking through, and don't it stand to reason that a plant in such a condition will bloom more steadily than the one that has a lot of shoots all of one size?

With our present method of planting in our carnations very early there is less danger of topping the plants too late than there was when we housed them in September. This is a point you must watch if you are a believer in late planting. After August 1 you should top only when a shoot shows inclination to run up into bud and if you do that there is little danger of throwing a naturally late bloomer still farther into the season with its first crop of blooms. So many are complaining of Prosperity coming into bloom late, but I am satisfied that when it is understood and handled right it can be had in full crop in good time and I feel sure that it will pay much better in most markets while the blooms are pure white than it does after it takes on its variegation, if you can only make it produce the blooms at that time.

Mrs. Lawson comes into bloom early enough, but you must top it until it has taken a firm hold on the soil in the bench; if you don't you will have a crop of short-stemmed blooms for which you will have no use early in the fall, like you would have if it were white, and you could use it for funeral work. And so it goes on down the list and you must study each variety and handle it just as though it were the only variety on your place, and don't go and look at the Mrs. Joost plants when you want to know whether White Cloud needs topping. If you do your White Cloud will soon be laying all over the field.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

At this season mildew is one of the worst enemies of the rose grower. The houses have to be left open so much and the sudden fluctuations of temperature are just the conditions suited for the germination of the spores, which are always present, and as the weather is too warm to require firing, it is no easy job to get rid of it. Careful ventilation and a dusting of flowers of sulphur twice a week will help to keep it in check. For a bad dose of it shutting down the ventilators for half an hour while the sun is shining and applying the sulphur will usually kill it. Care should be taken not to get the house too hot, as the foliage may suffer.

Young stock in pots will require careful watching. Where the pots are well filled with roots they should be kept from any approach to drying out, as this gives them a check which it will take them some time to get over even after being planted in the bench.

In stock houses, after some of the plants have been removed it is well to keep the sand or ashes on the empty spaces of the bench well watered as it helps to keep the house cool and moist.

Pillow Arranged by Samuel Murray, Kansas City, Mo.

These matters are small and may seem trivial, but there is nothing too minute for the grower to notice if he wishes to be successful. Every grower should keep a journal in which to note his observations, and keep a record of his work, and whilst recording his successes he should also note his failures; by keeping these failures and their causes vividly before us we can try to avoid them in the future.

In recently planted houses where root action has well started the surface should be cultivated regularly once a week, stirring the soil with the hand to the depth of an inch. By keeping the surface in good condition the plants can use more water, as evaporation will be perfect and consequently growth more rapid.

Plenty of ventilation carefully regulated will give strong leathery foliage, which can better resist the attacks of mildew. Grafted stock should have the support of a stake as soon as planted, as the syringing is apt to detach the scion from the stock. Ribes.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The stated June meeting of the American Rose Society will be held in New York on June 11 in connection with the June show of the Horticultural Society of New York at the New York Botanical Garden. The Rose Society offers a silver medal for the best display of garden roses on this occasion. Further particulars of the exhibition and the full schedule may be had from the secretary, 136 Liberty street, New York. The Rose Society is now arranging to offer its gold and silver medals at some of the leading exhibitions next year, particulars of which will be made public very shortly. The gold medals will be offered for novelties.

VIOLET NOTES.

I said in my first article several weeks ago that I would later consider the style of house that violets should be grown in, and I will endeavor in this to give some idea of them.

It is a generally accepted fact that north and south houses are the best for violets taking everything into consideration. Nevertheless if one was growing only a few for home trade and only wanted them for the holiday trade, and wished to use the house for other purposes later, and did not have a regular violet house and did not want to build such, I would not hesitate to plant them in a south span house if it had ample ventilation under the south eaves and at the ridge. In fact you should be able to get more blooms at that time of the year than in a regular violet house, but a little later the sun gets too strong and spoils them, and if you shade to prevent this then the house is too dark on cloudy days.

One thing you should always bear in mind is that violets like to be near the glass, have plenty of fresh cool air, and planted in solid borders and not in benches—at least we can never succeed with them on benches.

To my mind there are two ideal violet houses, running north and south, even span, one ten feet wide and the other twenty-four feet wide. The latter is of course the cheaper house to build. They should both have ventilation on both sides of the ridge and also clear around both sides under the plate, which should be three or four feet from the ground according to the location. In the first named house you will have a path in the center with a border on each side, and in the larger house you will have four borders and three paths, the two inside borders being six feet wide each, as you can work them from both sides. The walks to the borders can be laid up of either brick or grout wall, the latter being very nice if properly done and the best of Portland cement used. R. E. Shuphelt.

CUTTING MUMS BACK.

T. K. asks if it is best to cut his mums back before shifting the last time, or after shifting. I hardly catch the idea of your correspondent so far as the cutting back is concerned.

If the plants are in pots and it is proposed to grow them so and take up a number of shoots they should have been kept pinched in. This will keep the plants dwarf and will induce numerous breaks to form. It is always better to pinch the tips out of the young shoots than to let the plants get up long and then cut down again. If T. K. has let his plants get up too long they should be cut down and made to start out into growth again before being potted on. Mums do not necessarily have to be cut back, though of course, it may be done when dwarf plants only are needed.

Brian Boru.

PERENNIAL PLANTS FOR CARPETING BEDS.

A great saving of labor results from planting all the flower beds with a carpeting of low-growing hardy subjects, so that the only after-planting that is required will be the introduction of a few annuals, or hardy or half-hardy subjects. Thus, a bed of white pinks will always look sightly, and can have a few wallflowers set at intervals over it in autumn or spring, with geraniums to replace these in summer. The bedding plants will be benefited rather than injured by having the ground about them so closely covered; in dry, hot seasons they will be found to flourish, whereas other plants set in uncarpeted beds will have at least the lower foliage withered, and stand in need of frequent applications from hose or water-can.

As there are a great number of low-growing perennials the choice among colors is a varied one. Alyssum saxatile, A. montanum, A. spinosum (white), and A. olympicum are all suitable. So are Iberis Pruiti (white) and I. corræfolia (white), while the common A. sempervirens will flourish anywhere. The blue winter windflower makes a beautiful carpet beneath early spring-blooming plants, but must be alternated with some summer-flowerer, such as violas, if later show is required. Anemone blanda must have full sunshine. Excellent are the Mountain Cat's-ears, Antennaria alpina and A. minima, as these have neat whitish foliage. Anthemis Aizoon is a pretty, dwarf, silver-foliaged camomile.

Where the ground is wet and cold Anthyllis montana should be tried; this pretty little vetch grows only six inches high, has white downy leaves, and small heads of pale pink flowers. Then there are several arenarias—montana, norvegica, etc.; the familiar white woodruff, or Asperula odorata; a whole collection of aubrietias; white or red daisies; several campanulas, of which C. carpatica is best; Cerastium tomentosum, C. arvense grandiflorum, C. Biebersteini, and C. alpinum; and the many varieties of pinks, the beautiful hardy alpine dianthuses, also Dianthus cæsius, D. deltoides, and D. petræus. I have seen the yellow-blossomed Linum flavum used with excellent effect as a carpeting plant, while the bright blue-flowered, evergreen-foliaged Lithospermum prostratum is a charming novelty for such a purpose.

Among forget-me-nots I know none lovelier than Myosotis Reichensteineri, which creeps over the ground, and makes "dense cushions of blue for several weeks in April and May." Oxalises have many lovers, and the mossy saxifrages are certain not to be forgotten, but I should like to persuade a few gardeners to make use of Phlox repens, which has fresh-looking green leaves and rose-pink flowers; P. subulata, the Moss Pink, is almost as good; P. nivalis has white blooms, and there are several florists' varieties of hardy dwarf phloxes that may be safely employed in the open beds. Potentillas cannot be excelled among ground-covering plants; the double named kinds have really handsome scarlet, crimson, yellow, or orange blooms; while Potentilla ambigua, sometimes called himalaica, makes a thick mass of foliage, from which rise large single yellow blossoms. Saponaria cæspitosa, rose, and S. calabrica albus, white, will be found serviceable, and there are many sedums that can be used, but only to surround very strong-growing plants. Silene virginica, the Fire Pink, has remarkably showy scarlet flowers, that are borne only a few inches above the foliage stems. Veronica pectinata, a small trailer, with either blue or rose flowers; V. prostrata, white, pink, or blue; and V. repens, pale blue, are but a few of the family that I can strongly recommend. There remain familiar garden favorites, such as violas, colored primroses, polyanthuses, snowdrops, crocuses, chionodoxas, scillas, aconites, etc.; indeed, the variety of subjects suitable for carpeting is very large. —M. H., in Gardeners' Magazine.

ATAVISM AND VARIATION.

Atavism, or reversion to ancestral characters, occurs probably in all branches of organic life, although in the vast majority of cases they must escape attention. In humanity we are familiar enough with strong resemblances which crop up between individuals of the present generation and the presentments of long-dead ancestors handed down in the shape of portraits. Resemblance to actual parents we naturally look for as fulfilling one of the reproductive laws, but it is so common as to excite little remark that while in large families it is easy enough to point out children who are extremely like either the father or mother, some of the others present so little likeness that they might well pass for members of a different family altogether. Everyone of an observant turn can probably call to mind instances of this class, and there is little doubt that in many of these cases a strong resemblance would be found to long-forgotten ancestors could reliable portraits be found for comparison.

Apart from inter-resemblance, traits of disposition, habit, and mental tendency also reappear, though these are less easy to establish, because a record is less likely to survive the memories of contemporaries. Little idiosyncracies of apparently the most insignificant nature may be transmitted, like the case quoted by Darwin of a father who habitually slept with crossed feet, and his infant daughter who did the same in her cradle. The writer was once dining with an old aunt who had not seen him since his infancy, during which his father died, and during the meal she several times expressed her astonishment at characteristic movements of which the writer was utterly ignorant, but which she declared were exact reproductions of the father's. Atavism, however, goes back far beyond the immediate parents, and its occurrence demonstrates that every man, woman and child, and every individual in any other branch of the great tree of life, must be an inconceivable complex of potencies, containing within itself not merely its own individuality, complex as that may be, but the individualities of maybe a thousand progenitors, any one of whose personalities may in the next generation usurp those of the immediate parents, and so constitute a case of atavism or reversion.

In the plant world we have a better opportunity of recognizing such cases, because the individuality of offspring is, as a rule, less varied than in man. A batch of seedlings, for instance, will generally match each other so closely as to defy individual recognition; species are also fairly well defined. Hence, when a case of reversion occurs, it is usually easy to determine as such in contradistinction to a new "sport." The cultivator, however, who studies these matters with a view to deducing some general law is greatly handicapped by the fact that Nature is not always ringing the changes, as it were, on her past achievements in the varietal line; she is not like a bellringer with a certain number of fixed notes to which he is confined. Every now and again she introduces a new note altogether into her harmonies, and thus baffles the investigator who works on the assumption that the entire gamut has been mastered. Her "variations," in short, may unexpectedly include a new theme, which the would-be lawmaker construes at first as a discord until wider knowledge reveals the true harmony.

Thus it is with the laws of hybridisation and the laws of variation. Of the harmony of the former we are only now getting an idea, thanks to Mendel, De Vries, Correns, and others who have made it their study. The latter has, so far, defied research; all we know is that sudden variations occur which we cannot impute definitely either to atavism or the evolving effect of changing environment, and as these two seemingly different laws affect one and the same field of research, it is clear that definite results are extremely difficult of attainment. The hybridist, however careful and systematic he may be, is always liable to have Nature step in in her varietal mood and put a new set of features upon the offspring, plus a new set of potencies in their systems, which utterly upset and vitiate his calculations, while affording no clue whatever to the reason.—Chas. T. Druery, F. L. S., V. M. H., in Gardener's Magazine.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

At the time these notes are written the early shipping for the Decoration Day trade is being done. The early orders will probably be taken care of, but it is not so certain about the later ones. There is a lot of stock, such as it is, but most of the roses coming in are of very poor quality and it will take close picking to get out enough of shipping grade to meet demands. Carnations are more plentiful and average better in quality than roses, but the general average of stock generally is poor. Anything different could hardly be expected after the violent weather changes we have had—from cold to hot and then back to cold again. Any grower who has failed to fire the past few days is sure to have been decidedly out of it.

The cool weather has improved quality somewhat over last week, when the plants were being roasted, but there has not yet been time for the change to have produced much effect. There seems to be an abundance of good lilies and outdoor valley, but hardly enough good pæonies to meet the call. Orders have come in freely and it is so far merely a question of getting stock of good enough grade to stand the shipping test.

The supply of hardy ferns is unfortunately short. The price is now $3.00 per 1,000 and there is a likelihood of its going to $4.00 by the time this is in print.

At E. C. Amling's we noted some fine white stocks that were very attractive and meeting with good demand.

Various Items.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club was held Wednesday evening. There was no regular program. Arrangements for the annual summer outing were discussed.

The price of iron and steel pipe, etc., has been given another boost. There was an advance of 10 per cent in the price of boiler tubes this week and further advances are predicted. Any one about to buy pipe or tubular boilers had better get quick action.

Peter Reinberg celebrated his 19th wedding anniversary last Thursday.

Mrs. P. J. Hauswirth has been very seriously ill and last Saturday was dangerously so. She is now improving.

The S. A. F. rate from Chicago to Asheville, N. C., has now been definitely settled and it amounts to $24.80 for the round trip. Special round trip tickets will be issued, good going Aug. 16, 17 and 18 and with a return limit up to Aug. 25. The sleeping car rate is $5.00 each way. Special cars will no doubt be arranged for by the local club which will insure against any change of cars.

A committee composed of wholesalers and retailers called on the school management committee of the board of education last Thursday and petitioned for a reversal of the rule prohibiting the presentation of flowers to graduates at the annual commencement exercises in the public schools. They did not succeed in securing a reversal of the rule, but it developed that the pupils could use flowers as freely as they wished in the decoration of the room. What is forbidden is the passing of flowers up to graduates on the platform.

Bedding out is going forward at Lincoln Park. The geraniums were put out last Saturday, and being in full bloom, made a fine showing Sunday. Headgardener Stromback tried the "California Giant" pansies this year and was much disappointed in them. The blooms are not remarkable for size and the colors average much below present-day standards. In the hardy garden the German irises are beginning to bloom, the dodecatheons are at their best, the pæonies are in bud though none are showing color except the early red. The aquilegias are beginning to make a brave show, the double flowering crab is in fine bloom and Spirea Van Houttei is at its best. The heavy rains have, however, injured the blooms of this shrub, causing the flowers to drop much quicker than usual.

We have had a great deal of rain during the past month, in fact, more than was needed. And last Saturday evening this was supplemented by a terrific downpour for several hours that left the ground in the condition of a thoroughly soaked sponge. This was followed by a marked lowering of the temperature, Monday and Tuesday being quite chilly, though there was a fair amount of sunshine.

Mrs. John Richter, Duluth, Minn., was a visitor this week.

John Degnan has returned from his eastern trip.

E. H. Hunt is showing some very attractive new figures in crepe paper, a very timely one being that with an American flag printed on it.

BOSTON.

May 18-24.

Our retailers complained some of slack business but I will give you the quiet tip that a whole lot of all sorts of goods came into the different wholesale marts and Saturday eve found their ice chests fairly well emptied. Where it all went to I would not care to hazard a guess. But it nearly all goes out by regular channels of traffic, the street not being over-stocked and our now quite well organized hospital department hardly got remembered at all. Somebody is surely doing something. I presume it may be best not to brag much about prices, but there is no proof that any one is getting any more than he asks. And it is also one of those times when the support of the fairminded buyer who has been fairly used all winter is worth something in repayment for past favors, as well as one of the times when the irregular buyer gets hold of the light end of the log.

Chaff and Wheat.

A noticeable feature just now is the fact that the wholesale business lasts all day better than in cooler weather. Small dealers do not buy so much on speculation in the morning as usual but run in and purchase a few dollars' worth whenever they catch an order. You see goods do not keep so well this kind of weather. The next noticeable change will be when these small dealers stop getting orders to a great extent.

"Middlesex" wrote, some few weeks since, rather a plaintive dirge to the passing of the suburban florist. I hardly agree with him and will take the ground that there never was a better time than this to start a suburban business. But it nowadays takes a florist to run a florist business anywhere! The day is past when a man can be a carpenter, a shoemaker or a stonemason with one hand and a florist with the other. The Jack-at-all-trades is becoming extinct anyway isn't he! Competition now makes a man know his biz too well to be able to know too many of them. He must compete with experts and must be an expert himself to do so.

The "Old Guard" held a very satisfactory session a few nights since at which the chief function was extended hospitality to a few guests from a few states away. It strikes me it might seem pretty nice to be one of those guests at such times. It would take a lot of ink or same other fluid to describe a good old fashioned soiree of the O. G. J. S. Manter.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The cut flower market was quiet last week and early this week. Indications point to lively business from Wednesday on, there having been several school commencements on that day which together with the advanced Decoration Day shipping moved considerable stock. The heat has railroaded immense quantities of poor bloom on the market, giving a great deal of work to those who handle it, both growers and sellers. Outdoor stock for Decoration Day is good and very plentiful, pæonies, Japanese snowballs, cornflowers and a few early sweet peas being the principal factors. The first named is, of course, far and away the most important and can be had in all shades and colors. The indoor peas are still with us. Gardenias, fine flowers on long stems, are a pleasing addition. Outdoor valley is poor and doesn't sell, 10 cents per bunch of 25 being the price on the street.

Plants.

When the advance made by the horticultural press reaches the point where the market notes are written by someone whose whole time is devoted to the work instead of by a florist, then, and only then, will it be possible to give an accurate idea of the conditions of our widely scattered plant market. Speaking in a general way this season shows a wonderfully active demand for all bedding stock at fair prices. Good judges say that there will not be enough of many kinds to fill the orders. Some large roses in pots and geraniums in bloom are now difficult to obtain. The principal wholesale growers are already pretty well cleaned up. There is a great deal of stock still in the hands of the retailers.

Notes.

Henry F. Michell will sail for Europe next week. He expects to spend two months among the seed and bulb growers, visiting England, France, Germany, Switzerland, Holland and Austria.

The Henry A. Dreer Co. is sending heavy consignments of pæonies to S. S. Pennock daily. Its van contained 3,500 blooms one morning this week.

Funeral Bunches Arranged by Samuel Murray, Kansas City, Mo.

Robert Scott & Son are sending a quantity of excellent blooms of Gardenia Fortunei to Reid and Pennock.

One of the department stores, Lit Bros., was sending out young roses, secured from up the state, in packages of six which retailed for 25 cents.

Pennock Bros.' window is beautifully decorated with pæonies and ferns this week.

Some associate members of the Florists' Club contributed substantial prizes for the five best scores in a match between the regular team and the talent that bowl on the club alleys each Friday night. The match took place last Friday, the regular team being obliged to concede two of its best men, Moss and Dunham, who are also members of the Friday Nights. Teams, regulars: Moore, Mooney, Johnson, Starr, Allen; Friday Nights, Moss, Dunham, Archer, Eimerman, Adelberger. The regulars won by 78 points in a total of three games, but the Friday Nights captured three of the five prizes, including first, which was won by Moss. The affair was greatly enjoyed by all. A return match will be played this Friday evening, Decoration Day.

A great baseball game is planned between the street men and the employes of S. S. Pennock. Great rivalry exists and it is said that a lot of wagers have been made. The chief difficulty lies in the selection of a battle ground, the street men insisting on Washington Park, while the Pennocks prefer the seclusion of Lansdowne. Should this disputed point be settled the REVIEW hopes to chronicle the scores next week.

Some of our commission houses remained open all night on Wednesday.

In these days of building everywhere, it is restful to know that one florist is satisfied. Joseph Bevis says he has enough glass. He and his son and man can manage the place nicely, growing good stuff as it is, and they desire nothing more. PHIL.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

It's a bear market in floriculture as well as in Wall street. But with the flowers, with summer heat and unbearable humidity and an abundance of outdoor flowering plants and the exodus of flower buyers to the country, what else can be expected. Everything has degenerated in quality and value. Roses and carnations are close to the bottom. Decoration Day will cause a slight flurry and a general cleaning up of surplus bloom, etc., then will come "The melancholy days" and to the average retail florist "The saddest of the year."

Those who care for gardens and do landscaping and plant lawns and "country seats" have had a wonderfully busy season. And now the catering to the requirements of the "400" at the summer resorts is begun. From here to Newport go Hodgson and Siebrecht and Wadley & Smythe, and already their handsome establishments are open.

Items.

The coming convention of the S. A. F. O. H. at Asheville begins to assert its interest, and prospective visitors are talking about the route, the best way to go and the desirability of a grand union of Boston, Philadelphia and New York members by special train, to start from Washington on the Sunday evening before the convention opens, arriving at Asheville about noon on Monday after a daylight trip through the glorious country where the angels (feet) love to linger.

The auction sales continue. Bedding plants of all kinds are absorbed at good prices. Japanese plants are again offered with Fifth avenue art surroundings, and the bon ton dabblers in horticulture gladly bid exorbitant prices for these diminutive curiosities.

Friends of Louis Schmutz will hear with regret of the accident whereby both of his legs were broken.

Charles H. Downie, of Peter Henderson & Co., died of pneumonia Monday, May 19. He had been manager of the agricultural seed department of this house since 1889. His ability was unquestioned, his friends many, and his demise is universally regretted.

The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Philadelphia, is worthily proud of its membership of 850, and its beautiful home. It was my pleasure to attend its regular meeting last Tuesday evening, and to hear an excellent address by the society's botanist, Mr. Stewardson Brown, on "The Influence of Environment on Plant Variation." After the meeting a pleasant hour in the billiard and bowling room of the Florists' Club below made all other places of a similar character in floral circles look hungry and undeveloped, and such generous welcome, such "touch the spot" punch as Brother Westcott's, and such persistent and enthusiastic bowling as the Deacon's, can be found nowhere else in the country.

Thomas Young, Sr., died at Clifton, N. J., Monday.

S. A. Anderson, of Buffalo, is in the city.

Bowling.

Monday night was stormy and the attendance at the alleys was light.

Capt. Lang thinks a neutral alley will be best for that match with Capt. Ellison and suggests that the battle be fought at Asheville.

The best scores Monday night were:

Lang	186	162	181	162	184
Siebrecht	191	157	138	154	142
Hafner	202	194	181	164	162

AUSTIN.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The annual spring exhibition of the State Floral Society was held May 22, 23 and 24 in the nave of the Ferry building, San Francisco. The show on the whole is something similar to the one held last year with the addition of a greater number of novelties than could be seen at any of the previous shows held by the society. The premiums were awarded as follows: John H. Sievers, first, for largest and best collection of carnations; first for largest and best collection of pelargoniums. Domoto Bros., first, for dwarf trees in pots. Frank Pelicano, first, for cut flowers. Cypress Lawn Cemetery, special premium, for ferns and cinerarias. C. C. Morse & Co., Santa Clara, special premium, for sweet peas. Peter Theisen, Golden Gate, special premium, for seedling rose named Pride of Golden Gate; first for seedling rose Climbing C. Testout. Mrs. T. Sachan, special premium, for chrysanthemum Viviand-Morel; first for largest and best collection of garden flowers. Mrs. W. S. Chandler, first, for wild flowers. Prof. E. J. Wickson, first, for collection of roses. Mrs. E. T. Crane, second, for collection of roses. Cox Seed & Plant Co., first, for decorative plants. John Hinkel, Berkeley, first, for field grown roses. E. J. Vawter, Ocean Park, special premium for field-grown carnations. Mrs. H. P. Tricon, first, for collection of cacti. Mrs. Richard Spreckels, special premium, for basket of pelargoniums.

D. O. Mills exhibited, not for competition, a table of very choice ferns, calceolarias, primulas, coleus and pelargoniums. The Golden Gate Park exhibited, not for competition, a very large oval table containing Lilium longiflorums, coleus, calceolarias, primulas and an assortment of palms.

The exhibit of carnations and pelargoniums made by John H. Sievers was, as usual, a superb display of cut bloom, the new seedling carnation Mrs. Whitelaw Reid winning first premium. This seedling is of the Hobart type, a fine scarlet with reputation of being a splendid keeper. A. B. Spreckels, a brilliant scarlet, is a beauty, a large full flower with good stem. If there is another scarlet that beats A. B. Spreckels, I would like to see it.

The basket of pelargonium blooms exhibited by Mrs. R. Spreckels, Buena Vista avenue, San Francisco, was one of the most handsome arrangements of pelargoninms ever witnessed at an exhibition in San Francisco in many years. The basket contained seventy-five varieties of the finest pelargoniums in cultivation finished with Asparagus plumosus. In size the basket was 3x4 feet and stood on a pedestal in the center of the hall. This exhibit was much admired.

The new rose, "Climbing Caroline Testout," a sport that originated with Mr. Peter Theisen, of Golden Gate, Oakland, was much admired by rose lovers. It's a good thing and will be a splendid addition to our list of climbing roses. Mr. Theisen will disseminate this new rose November 15, 1902. Another new rose shewn by Mr. Theisen is called "Pride of Golden Gate," said to be a cross between Papa Gontier and Mme. Lambard. It looks much like Capt. Christy in color and is said to be a good forcing rose. Mr. John MacLaren, one of the judges, thinks that Capt. Christy has been flirting with Mme. Lambard, instead of Papa Gontier.

The sweet pea exhibit by C. C. Morse & Co., Santa Clara, made a most attractive table for the lovers of this beautiful flower.

Frank Pelicano had a well arranged table of decorative plants, roses and carnations. Among the carnations Roosevelt, Estelle, Lawson, Crocker and Hobart could be seen in the finest form.

The wild flower exhibit was, if anything, the finest ever witnessed in 'Frisco. Hundreds of varieties were gathered and sent from all parts of the state, giving the lovers of wild flowers a treat that they get but once a year. J. N.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Although the glut that prevailed last week is, to a certain extent, still with us we can say that better conditions prevail. There is little, if any, transient trade, but the several weddings booked for this week, together with the commencement exercises and Decoration Day, will wake up the trade somewhat, although Decoration Day scarcely causes a ripple in the trade here.

Roses and carnations are very abundant and job lot prices prevail. Beauties are in good demand, the top price being $3 per dozen. The best of the smaller roses bring $3 and $4, but the bulk of the stock is sold from $1 to $2 per 100. Outdoor Jacks are in, but not good, and go at $2.

Carnations are still in fair condition, though a great many show the effects of the hot weather. Some of the best flowers went begging at 50 and 75 cents per 100, and many had to be dumped the past week.

Pæonies were very plentiful and found a fairly good market. Sweet peas are becoming very plentiful and this week will find the market glutted with them, the price being 25 and 50 cents per 100. A few Harrisii and callas are still in the market, but are not much called for. All greens had a fairly good call with plenty in the market.

World's Fair Matters.

Professor W. M. Hays of Minneapolis, who is a member of the committee from the National Association of Agricultural Colleges, visited Secretary Joseph Flory of the National World's Fair committee the past week to ask for a half acre of ground on which to experiment in the cultivation of plants during the World's Fair. The other members of this committee are Doctor W. H. Jordan, Experiment Station, Geneva, N. Y.; Doctor A. C. True, Director of Office of the Experiment Station, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.; Doctor H. J. Waters, Dean of the Agricultural College of the Missouri State University at Columbia; Professor C. F. Curtis, Iowa Agricultural College, Ames, and Professor Thomas F. Hunt, Dean of the Agricultural College, Columbus, Ohio. The committee met at the Planters Hotel Friday morning and visited the World's Fair site in the afternoon and expressed great satisfaction in the progress made.

Meeting of the Protective Association.

The first announcement in the Review of last week of the Retail Florists' and Growers' Protective Association caused an eruption almost equal to that of Mont Pelee among the fakirs, crape chasers and cheap Johns, who know their doom is sealed when this association is in working order. The retailers and growers unite in saying that one must read the Review to get the news in all branches of the trade.

Florist Club Meeting.

More than usual interest is being taken in the next meeting of the club, which will be held in Belleville June 19 in the rooms of the Commercial Club, and no doubt it will be the largest meeting of the year. It is reported that the Belleville boys and the Commercial Club are making great preparations for entertaining the members and nothing will be left undone to make it pleasant for all, and a great time is anticipated.

A New Firm.

Bentzen & Rueter Floral Co., who are new to the florists of St. Louis, are putting up two new houses, each 35x110 ft., which are almost completed, at Marcus and Margaretta avenues. They expect to build quite a range to be ready at the time of the World's Fair. St. Louis is ripe for a big plant that will grow good stock and plenty of it. Mr. Bentzen of the Bentzen Commission Co., of St. Louis reports that neither he nor his firm are in any way connected with the above firm.

Notes.

Mr. Smith, representing the Walter Mott Seed and Bulb Co., reports a fine trade. His trip west was a great success.

George M. Kellogg of Pleasant Hill, Mo., was a visitor the past week. Mr. K. is supplying this market with plenty of fine stock.

Mrs. Wm. Trelease, wife of Dr. Wm. Trelease, of the Missouri Botannical Garden, has been appointed a delegate to the National Conference of Charities and Corrections to be held at Detroit, May 28 to June 3.

Ellison & Tesson will, on June 1, remove from 625 Olive street to 622 Locust street, corner of 7th. Mr. A. Y. Ellison, of the above firm, has a very important engagement (matrimonial) booked for the near future and he would like to roll that match game with Captain Lang before the date for filling the above engagement.

Fred H. Weber has left the employment of his uncle, Fred C. Weber, and leaves tonight (Tuesday) for Kansas City, Mo., to take a position with George M. Kellogg in the wholesale and retail department. Fred is a very clever young man and Mr. Kellogg can congratulate himself in securing this young man. We wish him luck.

Bowling.

The attendance was very slim at the bowling club Monday night and the following scores were made:

THE PAN-AMERICAN.

It is a little late for Pan-American pictures, but it seemed to us that the accompanying engraving from a photograph of the east front of the Horticultural Building should be placed on record. It is especially interesting in that it so clearly shows the superb statuary that stood in and around the water basin.

In the center is a fountain composed of various symbolical figures, surmounted by the Goddess of Light. It was as fine a piece of work as there was on the grounds. To the right and left are seen groups symbolizing various handicrafts.

At the right in the foreground is a group representing Flora in her chariot, holding aloft a garland of flowers, while across the basin, at the left in the picture is a group representing Pomona.

The artists have here very cleverly embodied the spirit of Horticulture and we have pleasure in presenting a pictorial record of this artistic achievement.

You have the best advertising paper in the country. I sold all my plants in two weeks by giving you my advertisement.—J. L. Elliott, Bethlehem, Pa.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

Trade Notes.

This has been one of the best bedding seasons in recent years. One week before Decoration or Memorial Day and 95 per cent of all the good bedding plants are sold or ordered for future planting. The weather has been fine during the past four weeks and there has been little fear of frost. Last year there were no pæonies open by June 1st, but this year only the latest varieties will be in good condition at that time. All other flowers will be plentiful, especially carnations, of which nearly all the larger growers have an over supply just at present. Perhaps the large cut of pæonies has had some effect on the sale of other flowers and it is a good thing that their season is short. Like the chrysanthemum they carry everything before them when they are in season, but everybody is glad when they are gone for another twelve-month. Roses are showing the effects of the hot weather quite badly and but few really good roses are seen.

In bedding plants there is a decided shortage of good geraniums and salvias, although everybody had their usual supply and several had more than usual. There seems to be a falling off in the demand for trailing plants, people are planting vases with only geraniums or only cannas or salvias and no drooping vines. This will not likely last, however, as there is certainly more beauty in a vase well filled with vines and plants than where the vines are left out. By midsummer the vines are the only pretty plants in a great many vases and without them there will be many a shabby looking vase around the city.

Robt. McKeand, who has been renting the cut flower department from Huntington & Page since Jan. 1, has turned the place ever to Messrs. Huntington & Page again.

Baur & Smith are the first in the market with asters.

The June meeting of the State Florists' Association, which is to be held on the 3d, should be well attended. Some changes are to be made in the by-laws and every member should be present to lend his counsel in putting them into better shape. A. B.

CINCINNATI.

Heavy Wind and Hail.

The heavy rain storm, briefly spoken of in my last week's notes, proved to be one of the most destructive that has visited these parts in many years, amounting almost to a cyclone. The wind blew at about 60 miles per hour and had a twist to it that uprooted trees, moved houses from their foundations, and took off roofs. This storm was also accompanied by hail. To cap the climax a heavy hail storm made itself felt Saturday afternoon, and as a result, many florists are without a good pane of glass on their place. The storm seemed to run in a streak, coming from the southwest and extending over a territory of about a mile and a half.

The Murphy settlement was right in the middle of this and they were all very badly wrecked. Wm. Murphy suffered the most, his loss amounting to about 15,000 out of 20,000 feet of glass. The roof of his barn was also badly damaged and boards were blown out of the sides. Owing to the strength of the wind carnation plants in the field escaped with but slight loss. The wind blew them over almost flat upon the ground, so that the hail did not have the chance to split them as it could have done had they been standing erect.

Mrs. R. J. Murphy's plant is almost a total wreck, the hail breaking almost all the glass on the place, some three or four thousand feet. Besides this a large number of hot bed sash that were piled up out of the way were totally ruined, the hail coming with such force that it went right through them from top to bottom of the piles.

Mr. C. C. Murphy escaped with about half of his place. The hail broke all the glass on one side, but the other escaped. Loss about 2,000 feet.

Mr. Ed. Murphy was damaged to the extent of about 2,000 square feet.

George Murphy ran in luck and his loss can be replaced with two or three boxes of glass. He was just on the edge of the hail belt and has reason to congratulate himself.

Mr. Ed. Schuman lost about 300 panes of glass, also having a lucky escape.

None of the above carried any hail insurance save Mr. Wm. Murphy, so the loss in their cases is total, with no chance for remuneration. This is surely an object lesson for hail insurance.

Mr. C. Sunderman's barn was blown down and R. Witterstaetter suffered the loss of a shed which was a total wreck, but it did not hail enough to hurt them. Mr. Rentenschoer and J. W. Rodgers were also in the hail belt but suffered no loss.

Other Items.

Business during the past week was the worst of this season. There was practically no demand and only the very best stock brought anything like a fair price. Great quantities of very poor stock was to be seen everywhere and it had to be sold at any price. Roses are getting awfully small and the price is in proportion. Many carnations arrived in such poor condition owing to having been sprinkled when packed that they were absolutely worthless. It is strange that growers can not learn to keep water off of carnation flowers when packing them for shipment. It is right to put wet paper and a little ice on the stems but protect the blooms from water and above all don't sprinkle them.

Pæonies were damaged some by the heavy storm, but there will be quite a quantity of them for Decoration Day. Orders are coming in for that day quite lively, and as we have cooler weather with a consequent shortening of supply, it would look as if very fair prices would be realized and a first class business be done. Sweet peas are still coming in slowly and are in good demand.

The heavy storms did considerable damage in the parks, Eden park suffering the most. The damage amounts to several thousands of dollars and was mostly in walks and roads that were washed away and flower beds ruined. When you consider that 2½ inches of water fell in thirty minutes time you can judge what damage could be done.

There is a very large demand for bedding plants and many florists are from one to two weeks behind with their orders.

Martin Reukauf, of Philadelphia, was a caller. C. J. Ohmer.

FROM OUR ENGLISH EXCHANGES.

The Gardeners' Magazine.

Affinity of Pelargonium and Geranium.—In discussing the wonderful development and improvement made in scarlet perlargeniums since the introduction of P. inquinans in 1714, the Rev. Professor G. Henslow recently remarked that the wild plant has a small scarlet flower, with petals like windmill sails, having great gaps between them; whereas the present plant has a flower with a perfectly circular outline. This is an attempt at reversion to regularity, which all irregular flowers originally possessed, thereby approximating to a geranium, which has a perfectly regular pentamerous flower of five sepals, five petals, ten stamens in two whorls of five each, and a pistil of five carpels. Five honey-glands are symmetrically situated on the floral receptacle; whereas in pelargonium a long tube at the posterior side of the flower, running down the stalk, contains the honey. There are only seven perfect stamens; so that, under cultivation, the flower of a pelargonium tends to reacquire the character of geranium, from which, or some similar form, it was probably descended.

An Interesting Graft.—At the meeting of the Horticultural Society of Prussia, Herr Lindemuth submitted to the members some interesting examples of grafting in which the scion had exercised a marked influence upon the stock. In one case he had grafted a wall-flower upon a red cabbage, and at the base the plant produced the growth of the wall-flower with a cabbage sprout, and at the top a head of the red cabbage. In another instance, Herr Lindemuth grafted a petunia on the upper part of Nicotiana glauca, and the scion grew vigorously and bloomed profusely, producing a very pretty effect. M. Winter, of Bordighera, has also grafted petunias on the species of nicotiana mentioned, which forms a shrub in the district.

Diseased Roman Hyacinths.—The bulbs are attacked by a parasitic disease known as Bacterium hyacinthi, or the Hyacinth Bacteriosis. The yellowish mucilage swarms with bacteria, and is quite able to spread the disease. When in growth the hyacinth leaves give evidence of the attack by the presence of small yellow spots caused by mucus in the leaf tissues. This disease is very common in Holland, and has been very prevalent in England this year. Change of crop and the destruction of all infested bulbs will bring about a better state of things.

Hardy Trailing Plants for Vases.—A few suitable subjects suitable for planting against the rims of large vases are Arabis albida, Coronilla iberica, the common Creeping Jenny (Lysimachia nummularia), Oxalis corniculata, Phlox reptans, Pratia repens, Saponaria ocymoides, and the various hardy vincas. Silene pendula is a useful hardy annual for the purpose, and there are a few sedums and saxifragras that might be pressed into service.

Lilacs.—The cultivation of lilacs is of the simplest, but they must not be left wholly to themselves as is so frequently done. They will grow freely under adverse conditions, but they do not, as a rule, bloom satisfactorily when left to themselves, as a forest of suckers rise from the roots, and these hinder the proper development of the growths which produce the flowers. The chief point is to keep the plants free from suckers, and that may be done by chopping them off during the season of growth, or by removing them with a fork and a knife during the winter months. As you have allowed the suckers to grow unchecked for two or three years we would advise you to proceed at once with their removal. The simplest course will be to lift them with a fork having short stout prongs through long use, and then cut them off as near to the parent plant as possible, using a sharp knife for the purpose. We recommend this course of procedure in the interest of flower production, but in the case of grafted plants it is absolutely necessary to prevent the growth of the stock crowding out that of the scion.

Gloriosa Superba.—Few climbing plants have a more beautiful appearance than Gloriosa susperba when well grown and trained up the pillars or along the rafters of the stove. It is a tuberous plant, and strong tubers should be obtained to start with. It is also essential when potting up the tubers in early spring to place them in fairly small pots until well started into growth, and then shift them on into larger receptacles as the smaller ones become filled with healthy roots. A compost I have found to suit the gloriosa consists of two-fifths loam, one-fifth each of peat, leaf-soil, and dried cow manure, with a small quantity of charcoal broken small and a liberal sprinkling of silver sand. The temperature of the ordinary stove will suit the plants well, but if they can be plunged in a hotbed in the propagating pit to start them so much the better. Slugs are extremely partial to the young, tender shoots, hence watchfulness is necessary, the evening being the best time to trap the depredators. Avoid overwatering the plants until roots are active, for if the soil be just moist at potting time no water will be required for some days. When growth is strong and roots active there is seldom any cause to fear over-watering.

The Gardeners' Chronicle.

EELWORMS IN CHRYSANTHEMUMS.—In the Comptes Rendus of the Academie des Sciences, January 20, is a note by M. Chifflot on the disease in chrysanthemum foliage, caused by nematode worms of the genus aphelenchus. The remedies suggested are: To burn the affected foliage; to prevent contaminating the soil used in repotting by taking care not to throw on it infected leaves, etc.; as far as possible to sterilize the soil; to make use of artificial rather than of natural manures; and to take cuttings only from healthy plants.

BEGONIA GLOIRE DE LORRAINE.—In the first place, it is so persistent in flowering that cuttings are with difficulty obtained, and many cut off the flower stems with the idea of getting the plants to start from the base, with the result that they do start, and begin to flower again; whilst if allowed to flower from the original stems, the buds at the base will remain dormant till the flowering period is pretty well exhausted, and when they do start good cuttings are readily obtained. There is no difficulty in propagating the plant, as with ordinary care almost every cutting will make roots. The most important point is to pot them off as soon as they are fit, and keep them growing without a check. Although they do not fill the pots with roots like some varieties, they like potroom, and a good rich compost. In the earlier stages of growth plenty of warmth may be applied, and later on a moderate temperature with plenty of light and fresh air; the plants must never be crowded together after they are well established in their flowering pots; manure-water may be used freely.

PRIMROSE SEEDLINGS.—The seedling primulas are attacked by the fungus called ovularia primulina. The disease is mostly confined to the seedling stage. If the soil is thoroughly disinfected by heat, and the seedlings sprayed with dilute potassium permanganate solution, the disease can be held in check.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.—The premium list for the fourth annual exhibition of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society has been issued, and copies may be had by addressing the secretary, Mr. Edward W. Neubrand. The exhibition will be held in Music Hall, November 11, 12 and 13.

MR. WILLIAM SCOTT wires us that he was unable to send anything for this week's issue.

WELLESLEY, MASS.—H. H. Hunnewell, widely known as a patron of horticulture and owner of one of the most beautiful estates in America, died May 20, aged 91 years. The magnificent gardens will be remembered by the members of the S. A. F. who visited them at the invitation of Mr. Hunnewell at the time of the Boston convention. Mr. Hunnewell was a member of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for over fifty years and served on many important committees. In his extensive gardens could be found examples of all that is beautiful in nature. He was particularly fond of rhododendrons and possessed the largest private collection in the country.

NEW DURHAM, N. J.—J. W. Bolmer, foreman for R. Asmus, died recently as the final result of a slight cut in his thumb, which had probably been poisoned by some insecticide. He was 29 years of age and leaves a widow and two small children.

WEST HOBOKEN, N. J.—Charles H. Downie, for many years with Peter Henderson & Co., died May 19 of pneumonia, aged 37 years. He was born in Nova Scotia and came to New York in 1889. He leaves a widow and a son.

PENTSTEMONS.

Among the plants that have of late years entered upon a new era of prosperity are the pentstemons, of which we now have varieties whose equals could not be found a few years ago. So much improved are they that I am firmly of the opinion that they are indispensable in the garden, and it is more than likely that they will be universally grown ere many years have passed. I saw a few beds in various places last season, and was more impressed every time by the size of the flowers, the robustness of the plants, and the purity and richness of the splendidly varied colors.

I should like to enter a plea for the extended use of the pentstemon, not in mixture as has been more generally seen up to now, but in named varieties of conspicuous merit. For clumps in broad borders or for beds they can be heartily commended, and with good treatment will not fail in giving complete satisfaction. As town plants I have found them flourish admirably, but being lovers of a generous soil, some thoroughly rotted manure should be incorporated with the ground. Moreover, watering must be persisted in, as the soil is so apt to run dry in the freely drained gardens of large towns and cities. In London the colors are, of course, less pure than in the clear air of the country, but they remain sufficiently clear to make a brilliant display.

Last summer I saw the collection grown at Orpington by Messrs. Dobbie and Co., and though these flowers have always attracted me, I was delighted with the quality of the plants. They were grown in beds, one row representing each variety, and the colors ranged from white to a very rich red, some having one shade throughout, others two clearly defined hues, while still more had beautifully spotted throats.

I made a very brief selection of those that appeared to me to possess all the most desirable attributes. Rachel, white delicately suffused with rose, is an exquisite flower of good size, and very substantial. Strikingly handsome is Ambroise Thomas, cerise red, with pure white throat striped crimson. Dr. Chantemesse is soft rose with a white throat; it is one of the best of the pale-colored forms. Named after one of the active principals of the firm of Dobbie it is perhaps needless to say that William Cuthbertson is one of the finest of pentstemons. The color, glowing scarlet-crimson, above a milk white throat, makes this variety one of the most conspicuous even amidst such a splendid collection. The only other specially noted was Miss Willmott, which is rosy cerise, with a penciled throat; this is exceptionally free-flowering.

The requirements of pentstemons during the summer are on a par with the demands made by the justly admired perennial phloxes. The deeper the soil can be worked, incorporating with the lower spit some well-decomposed manure, the better will be the flowers in respect of color as well as size and form, and the longer will be the display. Light surface hoeings in droughty weather are very advantageous, as are surface dressings of short manure in positions where such are permissible. If copious waterings can be given when the soil is becoming dry, and the weather is hot, so much the better. Treat the varieties named, or others, in a generous manner, and one may safely assert that their culture will bring abundant satisfaction.—H. J. Wright in Gardener's Magazine.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y.

On the eve of Decoration Day it would be hard to find a much busier place than the Lakeview Rose Gardens where the shipments of cut flowers and flowering plants are only equaled by Easter and Christmas. Carnations and roses by the thousands. Mrs. Lawson is queen over all with Joost and Marquis pressing closely for honors. Accompanied by Walter Mott, of the Seed Co., we made a tour of the plant, which has assumed enormous proportions and is destined to expand yet more. The stock of palms and ferns is large and increasing. Stock looks healthy and clean, evidently "eausperleptha" is used to advantage. Mr. Roney, whom we found mixing up a quantity for shipment, assured us it is without a doubt the finest insecticide he has ever handled in his many years' experience.

The trial grounds of the new Seed Co. are adjacent and promise to be highly interesting during the coming summer. Several hundred kinds of flower, vegetable and field seeds are being tested. The germinating qualities are already proved to be first class. Walter reports a very satisfactory business thus far. Mr. J. M. Gasser, of Cleveland, was also an interested visitor. E. A.

Greensburg, Ind.—Draper & Clark have succeeded to the greenhouse business of Hedges & Clark.

BALTIMORE.

Trade and Personal Notes.

Last week was among the dullest on record, this being due to the abundance of outside stuff and the exeessive heat. There was little demand for flowers for funerals, weddings or social affairs. On Saturday some of the stores say things brightened up considerably, but today (May 26) the heat is oppressive again, after a good shower yesterday, and dullness is general.

Pæonies and outdoor roses monopolize the market and the windows and streets are full of them. Some of the newer varieties of pæonies in the stores of the Charles street florists attract deserved attention, their color, size and contrasts of shades being very effective.

Carnations are much less in demand than a week or two ago and prices are declining correspondingly. Of the great quantities of roses sent in only a small percentage sells, many being poor in quality and not a few showing the disfiguring finger marks of mildew. There are still some good American Beauties coming into market. Sweet peas seem to have lost their favor and very little hardy stuff is selling through the Exchange.

Decoration Day does not add much to the volume of trade in this latitude. There is so abundant a supply of outdoor flowers, and custom has made their giving so general, that the stores get little out of the day's observance.

Some building is in progress. John Cook is putting up a new Marie Louise violet house 11x150 feet, and is remodeling some of his old structures, compacting them for more convenient firing, a new boiler being required.

Richard Vincent, Jr. & Son are about building three large new houses for vegetable plants. Their celery beds occupy several acres.

A wedding for June 11 has some interest for the trade. Miss Rose F. Cook, daughter of John Cook, marries Thomas John McCormick, son of John McCormick, both long and widely known florists.

An illustration of the giant pansy Mme. Perret has been sent us by Mr. H. Beaulieu, Woodhaven, N. Y., who is introducing it in America. It was awarded a gold medal at the Pan-American Exposition, the seed being supplied by Mr. Beaulieu.

Chester, Pa.—Herbert Shaw has been awarded the contract for planting the flower beds at the Newark station on the B. & O. R. R.

Chippewa Falls, Wis.—Thomas Kelly has purchased land and will erect greenhouses at corner of Grand avenue and Bay street.

Toledo, O.—Geo. A. Heinl had a crush at his annual "special sale" of bedding plants. He offered plants "at five cents apiece, cash, and not delivered." An immense number of plants was sold.

Washington, D. C.—The American Rose Company had the honor of supplying their Ivory rose for the Rochambeau dinner at the White House, May 23, also 2,000 Crane carnations which they received from S. S. Pennock of Philadelphia.

Westerly, R. I.—William W. Foster, of 88 High street, has a force of men at work on the Foster farm on Beach street, putting in the foundations for two greenhouses each 22x200, boiler house, etc. He will make a specialty of carnations.

Alexandria, Ind. — The Alexandria Greenhouse and Floral Company has been merged into a stock company and stock to the amount of $5,000 has been subscribed. E. W. Morland will be manager, with J. G. Brannum, A. H. Jones, S. J. Mack, Virgil Wilson, F. P. Boyd, D. C. Jordan, Joseph Hall, J. H. Frank and J. F. Merker as stockholders.

Linville, N. C.—C. W. Burleson & Son have purchased the galax leaf business of Chas. H. Ricksecker and will continue same. W. C. Franklin, who was with Mr. Ricksecker for many years, remains as manager for Messrs. Burleson & Son. Mr. Ricksecker has removed to Hutchinson, Kan.

Parkersburg, W. Va.—Gustav Obermeyer has sent some plants of his new canna, "West Virginia," and his new geranium, "Mrs. Gov. Jackson," to Asheville to be planted out for the inspection of the members of the S. A. F. in August.

Marion, Ind.—The Marion Floral Co. have been unusually successful with roses, one house of Beauty and Bridesmaid being said by all who have seen it to be the best in the state.

Kingston, R. I.—L. F. Kinney has issued a neatly printed and illustrated pamphlet on rhododendrons, showing various ways of grouping these showy plants.

Grandville, Mich.—George Conklin has purchased five acres of land here and is erecting three large greenhouses and a fine residence.

ST. PAUL.

The weather during May has been very changeable, which is not conducive to the best results in the florist's line. But we are fortunate in escaping the frosts of the east, the floods of the west and the deadly cyclones of the south. The intensely hot weather of the past two weeks has brought blooms out in a hurry, sacrificing quality for quantity, but there has been enough stock to go around and sales have been fully up to the average of former seasons.

Roses have suffered from the heat, especially the Liberty, which does not prove ideal for summer shipping. The buds open up too rapidly and when once opened are too single. As a shipper it bears no comparison to the Meteor. Some early planted Kaiserin and Carnot are now coming in at a very acceptable time. Carnations have been somewhat hurt by the heat, Lawson especially being badly spotted and discolored. This seems to be another idol which has fallen by the wayside at the advent of warm weather. Outside valleys are now in and are the finest they have been for many years. The demand for Decoration Day will be unusually heavy.

The bedding season has commenced in earnest and everybody is as busy as the proverbial bee in the tar bucket. Prices are somewhat better than in former years. As usual geraniums are the favorites, retailing at $1.50 to $2.00 per dozen for 4-in. pots. S. A. Nutt is the most popular variety, Dryden, the new salmon pink, being a close second. Cannas are also in good demand though we think they will never become as popular as geraniums.

Shipping trade is reported unusually good. Decoration Day orders are coming very freely with every indication of a record breaker for the occasion. Flowers will be fairly plentiful. In outside stock there will be snowballs and valley in this section. Lilacs are all gone and paeonias not yet in bloom.

Recent callers were G. C. Eldering, of W. J. Eldering & Son, Holland; H. E. Philpott, of Winnipeg, Man.

L. L. May & Co. have received a carload of glass for the erection of their new range of houses. In addition to erecting three new houses they will rearrange and rebuild several others.

It is rumored that Chris Hansen has rented his place to a well known grower in Minneapolis.

The greenhouses at Oakland Cemetery are overflowing with choice bedding stock. O. H. Nordquist is superintendent and one of the best plant growers in the country. The cemetery comes into direct competition with the growers and as the Cemetery Association pays no taxes considerable complaint is heard.

X. Y. Z.

FLINT, MICH.—D. P. Smith has purchased the MacIntyre greenhouses and is removing them to his place on East street. This will give him an addition of 10,000 feet of glass, making 20,000 feet in all. The new part will be devoted to carnations, mostly fancy sorts. Trade has been good and prices better the past winter.

READING, MASS.—The Reading Nursery has issued some additional booklets on plants and landscape work, all very handsomely illustrated. One is devoted to "The Mountain Laurel and Its Uses," and another to "Landscape Effects."

HERBACEOUS PHLOXES.

The very large collection of these beautiful hardy plants, in the Royal Horticultural Gardens, Chiswick, affords to the Fellows of the Society an admirable opportunity to make selections of what may seem to them to be the best varieties. With so many diverse colors or markings, it is but natural that selections should differ very much. Just as the tastes of the selectors differ, there seems to be no doubt but that pronounced colors produce the best general effect, although there are few varieties that do not seem to be charming when looked at closely. It is one of the excellent features of herbaceous phloxes, that if some plants or stems be pinched back early in their growth, they will branch out, and thus, if others remain untouched, to bloom early, greatly prolong the flowering season. Still further pinching tends to produce comparative dwarfing. Where several plants of a variety are grown, some of each variety can thus be stopped, and late bloom ensured.

To have good effects from phloxes in borders, plants should be put out in trebles anglewise, as if in that way a dozen heads be produced, the effect is very telling. Some young shoots taken off quite early in the spring, when but from 2 inches to 3 inches long, should be inserted into pots as cuttings every year, thus ensuring a continuous stock of young plants; a further advantage is that the new season's shoots are thus thinned, and that is beneficial, as stocks should not carry more than three or four stems at the most.

Plants from cuttings the first year may be finely flowered in 6-inch pots, in single stems, in cool houses or conservatories, or for outdoor groups, or they may be plunged into beds to fill vacant places. Then in the autumn they may be planted out into borders, to bloom for two years, after which they should be replaced by younger plants. Being somewhat free surface rooters, it is needful to give ample moisture as the plants age; the stems also become more crowded and tall each season.

With respect to varieties, a selection of a dozen made at Chiswick is thus: Sylphide, 30 inches, pure white, very fine; Berenice, pure white, 20 inches; Croix du Sud, white, red eye, very charming, 2 feet; Regulus, rich rosy carmine, 2 feet; James Bennett, pink, red eye, 2 feet; Parthenon, rosy lilac, 16 ins.; Cameron, white, rose eye, 2 feet; Coquelicot, brilliant vermilion, 30 inches; Comet, bright rosy pink, 2 feet; Montagnard, intense crimson red, 30 inches; Lebenger, red, shaded purple, 30 inches; and Fernando Cortez, reddish carmine, shaded rose, 2 feet.

A further selection of twelve, made a a few days subsequent to seeing the Chiswick collection, gave the following as very beautiful at Long Ditton: Avalanche, pure white, 18 inches; Les Delices, lilac, red eye, 18 inches; Henri Murger, white, with cerise eye; Marquis de Breteuil, carmine pink, 16 inches; Le Siecle, rosy carmine, 15 inches; Regulus, deep carmine, 18 inches; Jocelyn, deep scarlet, 18 inches; Le Macquart, purple, 16 inches; Robur, violet purple, 20 inches; Tempete, rosy carmine, shaded crimson, 2 feet; Paul Bert, white, flushed and shaded blue; and Souvenir d'Emile Leiberg, soft, clear pink, with magenta edge.—A. D., in Gardener's Chronicle.

NOTES ON SWEET PEAS.

The sweet pea is independent of insect or wind agency in its fertilization, being always self-fertilized. I have grown a large collection close to the bees, and have never found the varieties cross. The reason is fertilization takes place before the flowers expand. This can be easily proved by opening the flower bud at the proper time, when it will be seen that the anthers have burst and the pollen is free. To fertilize artificially with the view of obtaining new varieties, the flower bud must be forcibly opened at a still earlier stage and the anthers removed before they shed their pollen. This operation, and when to apply the foreign pollen, requires some experience to insure success.

The white and primrose-colored sweet peas have seeds of a light color, but Mrs. Sankey, an exception, has black or dark brown seeds, and, strange to say, Sadie Burpee has both black and light seeds; this will explain that white flowers from black seeds have a tendency to become tinted, a fault in the two white varieties I have mentioned. The pedicels of the flowers are also dark-colored from the black seeds, and pale green from the light, so that in a row of Sadie Burpee, the flowers, even in bud, can be traced to black or light seed. In the pale blue or lilac section, such as Countess of Radnor, the seeds are small, poor-looking, and wrinkled. The inexperienced might have some doubts as to their quality, but it is only a peculiarity of this particular color.

The standards of the beautiful salmon bi-colors, Gorgeous and Countess of Powis for examples, are often scalded or burnt by the sun. This is a fault difficult to deal with. I have tried various kinds of shading, but, unless very carefully done, this is apt to pale the flowers.

In some of the older varieties the standards were more or less reflexed; in the newer the tendency is just the opposite, to be too much hooded. The new rule of the National Sweet Pea Society says: "The standard must be erect, waved, or only slightly hooded." This advice is good. The variety I have found to produce the largest flowers is Triumph. The smallest and most singular is Red Riding Hood, which, some say, ought not to have been put in commerce. With me it is in much request, both by adults and children, and no wonder. I should be sorry to be without it.

I have been very successful with the dwarf sweet peas in single rows. In beds or masses they are not satisfactory. Pink Cupid is my favorite. I sow the seeds an inch apart in boxes about the middle of February, and plant them out when ready about six inches apart. On both sides of a grass walk, about a hundred yards long, I have had a single row of this variety for three successive years, and am preparing for a fourth. It requires about 1,200 plants, and when in bloom is one of the best features in the garden. The great fault of the Cupid sweet pea is the tendency it has to drop its buds before opening, and in beds this is especially the case. In single rows, with more light and air and frequent stirrings, it is not so bad. —George Stanton, in Gardener's Magazine.

The FLORISTS' MANUAL

by

WILLIAM SCOTT

Is a book of 224 pages, and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopædia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half toue engravings. It is and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

CATALOGUES AND PRICE LISTS.

Frantz De Laet, Contich, Belgium, special offers of cacti; A. B. Campbell, Cochranville, Pa., pot flowers and vegetable plants; I. L. Pillsbury, Galesburg, Ill., greenhouse and bedding plants; Geo. B. Moulder, Smith's Grove, Ky., pamphlet on "How to Grow Water Lilies from Seed;" Williams & Sons Co., Batavia, Ill., Wholesale list of florists' and nursery supplies, also tree and plant labels; State Nursery Co., Helena, Mont., price list of flower and vegetable seeds, fruit and shade trees, bedding and pot plants, palms, ferns, etc.; James M. Lamb, Fayetteville, N. C., trees, shrubs, greenhouse plants, bulbs, etc.

We have received a copy of "La Mosaiculture Pratique," by Albert Maumene, from the author, 84 bis Rue de Grenelle, Paris, France. It contains over 300 pages and is devoted wholly to the subject of carpet bedding. It is very freely illustrated and contains numerous plans for carpet bedding effects, two of them being colored plates. To anyone seeking new designs for carpet beds the book would be very helpful. The letter press is in French but the names of the plants being in the universal language would be just as useful to the English as to the French reader. The price in paper covers is 2 fr. 80, which with postage added would make the cost about 65 cents.

Rochester, N. Y.—A report published in a local paper to the effect that the seed firms of Mandeville & King, James Vick s Sons, Crosman Bros., Briggs Bros. & Co., and the Cleveland Seed Co., were to be consolidated is vigorously denied by representatives of the firms named. In an interview Mr. Mandeville said that his firm owned a controlling interest in the firm of James Vick's Sons and had recently purchased the business of the Cleveland Seed Co., but that each would be continued under its own name.

Pittsburg.—J. B. Murdoch & Co. have purchased 185 acres of land near Canonsburg, on the Chartiers Valley Railroad in Washington County, the consideration being $40,000. Plans are being prepared for two large greenhouses and a brick boiler house, to cost $25,000, to be built this summer, and another large greenhouse will probably be added this fall.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Miss E. A. Burgess has been in the business in this city for twenty-seven years and has been entirely dependent upon herself, having neither father, husband or brother to help her. She thinks the business is a good one for a woman with artistic tastes.

Washington, D. C.—The large barn of the American Rose Company was totally destroyed by fire on the 21st, together with their two fine delivery wagons, harnesses and about $600 worth of hay and corn. Luckily the nine horses were saved. Loss, $3,500. Insurance, $800.

We have received from Mr. D. B. Long, Buffalo, N. Y., some samples of his cluster of roses tags. They are very pretty, the cluster of roses being printed in colors. One is the regulation tag shape and the other is oval in form.

PIPING.

In reply to the inquiry of K. A. J. the diagram he submits shows eight lines of one-inch hot water pipes in the house 18 feet wide. This arrangement will not give the desired warmth. The pipes should be at least two inch internal diameter, but I should prefer to use ten lines of such two-inch pipes. In the house where the flue is used, five lines of two-inch pipes in addition to the flue will be necessary.

Henry W. Gibbons.

New York.

CHEAP CARNATIONS.

We learn from a daily paper "why carnations are so much cheaper now than they used to be." This is a remarkable assumption in itself but the reason is still more wonderful. According to the wise writer in this journal the reduction in cost is due to the introduction of a support that keeps the flowers "out of the dust" when growing on the plant. The dust must have been transferred to the "loft" of the scribbler.

THE ASTER BUG.

Some five years ago we were so badly pestered by the aster bug that our crop was almost an entire failure. The following year we put a liberal quantity of tobacco dust into the ground at planting time with the result that we had very few aster bugs that season. We have been keeping up the practice ever since with very satisfactory results.

A. Rosbach.

Pemberton, N. J.

Bulletin No. 81 of the Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station, College Park, Md., is devoted to "Soils and Fertilizers for Greenhouse Crops." It contains some interesting records of results from the use of various fertilizers on plants growing under similar conditions otherwise.

East Peoria, Ill.—J. C. Murray, the Peoria florist, has purchased a five-acre tract of land here.

We acknowledge the receipt of a copy of The Journal of the Department of Agriculture of Victoria, Australia, for January, 1902. It contains over 100 pages, is finely printed and illustrated and contains much interesting matter.

Oskaloosa, Ia.—The Kemble Floral Co. is making preparations to rebuild its greenhouses. Plants are being removed from the houses and a force of men will soon begin tearing down the old structures.

St. Joseph, Mo.—The Missouri Valley Seed Co. is having plans drawn for a four or five story building to be erected soon. The company is now located at 418 Edmond st.

Walkerville, Mich.—A handsome greenhouse has been planned by Architect Kahn, of Detroit, for Hiram Walker & Sons, of this place.

My advs. of smilax and asparagus have been a paying investment.—Joseph Wood, Spring Valley, N. Y.

I could not get along without the Florist's Review.—H. J. Baskin, Covington, Tenn.

HERE IS A BUSINESS BOOK FOR BUSINESS MEN

NO SCIENCE BUT LOTS OF PRACTICAL COMMON SENSE.

It don't tell you the botanical classification but it does tell you how to produce marketable plants and cut flowers in the best and cheapest way.

It don't list every plant in cultivation but it does tell you just what you want to know about every plant that there is any money in for a Commercial Florist.

The articles are arranged alphabetically so that when you want to see what Mr. Scott says about Cannas you turn to the Cs and in an instant you have it.

FLORISTS' PUBLISHING CO.

Caxton Building, CHICAGO.

The book treats of over 200 subjects and is freely illustrated with fine half-tone engravings.

It is a book that you need in your business just as you need any other useful labor and money saving implement or device.

The price is $5.00, carriage prepaid.

If you have not already obtained a copy of this book order one now.

If you cannot spare the full price at once, write us for our monthly payment offer.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Plants for Stock.

I would remind you, before you are all sold out of essential stock, to reserve, or better still plant out, good, healthy plants for your own propagating next fall. There are a number of our useful bedding plants that very few are needed to give you all you want for fall propagation and even if late in planting out you will get sufficient, but there are others in which it is entirely different. A few plants of each variety of acalypha or salvia or Abutilon Savitzii or ageratum will do because you lift only a few plants and get a great number of cuttings from them during the winter. Zonal geraniums, however, must be planted out in good quantities, and healthy, strong plants, or you will not get an abundance of cuttings.

Geraniums.

The geranium may be a plebeian plant but take it all around, if color and brightness are wanted it has no equal and will never lose its popularity. Get a lot planted at once and for your use and to produce cuttings give them lots of room. You will get more cuttings and of a better quality if daylight can get at all sides. We plant geraniums 10 to 12 inches apart for a customer's flower beds but to give us cuttings on our place we like to give them 18 inches between the plants.

I daresay there are many new zonal geraniums that are very striking and beautiful that I don't know. I would impress on you once more the great excellence of Le Soleil, the splendid semi-double scarlet. It is very like Nutt, but much superior. In the greenhouse it shows no improvement over Nutt, but in a bed it is far better, never turning black in center of truss as Nutt does, and much more prolific even than that grand old variety. I was rather inclined to be disappointed in the beautiful light pink "Jean Viaud" last summer. Perhaps I did not give it a fair chance, but whatever its qualities as a bedder, as a beautiful plant and flower about selling time it has no equal in its class. You cannot do without it. Pasteur is a grand all around geranium and a splendid bedder. We have nothing in bright pink equal to Mrs. Frances Perkins. It is the standard pink bedder of its color, and that is a pure deep pink.

Among single varieties we have seen nothing this spring so striking as "Richmond Beauty" of the Mirande type. I can't describe the colors for the flower is not before me, but we will call it a white center bordered by a cherry red. Never mind its color. When it began to bloom last month I made up my mind that if I took 500 plants of it to market any fine morning I should come home with full pockets and an empty wagon.

Cannas.

Cannas are another most important plant that you never have in sufficient quantity. They want a deep, rich soil and plenty of water till they get a good growth, then their foliage shades the ground and they take care of themselves. The dwarfer growing varieties should be 18 inches apart, the taller and stronger, 2 feet. McKinley is a beautiful scarlet. Tarrytown I consider the finest bedding scarlet canna yet raised. I can hardly think of its being improved on. Dwarf Florence Vaughan is indispensable. Victory is yet a novelty but it is grand, both in color, size and freedom; a bright orange-scarlet. David Harum, deep bronze foliage with vermilion scarlet flowers. It has a splendid blending of colors. Mrs. Kate Gray, Secretaire Chabanne and M. Jarry Desloges are all good, and Buttercup is worth growing. It has green foliage and pure yellow flowers without a streak or spot of any other shade. And don't forget Black Beauty, the best of its class. I am supposing, of course, that you know all about Sam Trelease, Souvenir de Antoine Crozy, Charles Henderson and all the rest of the good old ones.

Other Stock.

Don't forget to soon pot up into 4 or 5-inch pots and plunge out of doors in cold frames a dozen plants each of those things which do not lift, such as lantanas, lemon verbenas, etc.

Get your sweet stevia planted out in the open ground and give them 2 feet by 18 inches; they want to grow bushy. Bouvardias should also go out if you grow them at all and they don't want a heavy, stiff soil. A rich light loam is what they like and if they get a good start they will make fine plants by September.

Nearly everyone nowadays plants out the winter propagated hydrangeas. It should, however, be in deep, rich soil. They lift so easily that it is much easier to produce a good plant that way than keeping them in pots. If you have a demand for large hydrangeas in tubs you can start them now by putting three thrifty plants from 6 inch pots into a half whisky barrel (excuse the word, I should have said cider barrel, but they have been noticed to come of a more blue tint in the former); cut these young plants down slightly if they have flowered in the greenhouse. Stand the tubs in the full sun and keep well supplied with water, and if your compost is of heavy, well manured quality you will have fine tubs by fall and something that will fill the bill a year from now.

Chrysanthemums.

You will soon have empty benches and many will soon doubtless be filled with "mums." Don't forget a few hundred for pots. In certain soils they can be planted out of doors and lifted with success, but we have never had that soil at our command and we find by planting on the bench 15 inches apart that we get much the best plant. They need several pinches during summer and the last week of September, not a day later, you can lift them without losing a fibre, and they go on growing after potting without losing a leaf. The only discouraging feature is that for the past three or four years the demand for these pot mums has been extremely light, but if you don't have a few hundred there will surely be a demand.

CATTLEYA CHOCOENSIS.

This cattleya, known also as quadricolor, does well in an ordinary cattleya house, and flowering as it does in December, after the labiata cut is over, is a good paying investment. The flowers, while of good size, are always half open in appearance, which will be noticed in the illustration, but as they are deliciously perfumed and flowers are scarce at that season, this does not affect their ready sale. The flowers are very variable in color, running from a very deep blush to pure white in the petals and sepals, but are always very pleasing.

So far as culture is concerned C. chocoensis does not present any difficulties for the grower. After flowering keep the plants on the dry side until growth commences in the spring. Then if potting is needed it should be attended to and liberal quantities of water supplied during the growing season which is, of course, the summer months. If the plant breaks again, as it often does when the first growth is completed early, keep well supplied with water until the second break is finished, when both bulbs will flower together. This plant is a native of New Grenada and is now quite commonly grown. Newly established plants can be bought at about $2 each from any reputable dealer and they will soon repay their cost. I may add in conclusion that I am not selling plants of C. chocoensis or any other orchid.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Planting.

Planting should be proceeded with now as soon as possible, if you are looking for good results. While of course one must wait until the bedding stocks, or whatever is occupying the house, is disposed of, it is always good policy to get your main crop of mums planted by the middle of June. For late work, this is to say for cutting flowers at Thanksgiving or Christmas, six weeks later will do. But few florists care to have flowers lying around so late in the year, and while one can generally find a few flowers in the market at Christmas, the prices they sell at is by no means phenomenal. I have grown mums now for quite a few years, and while I start out with renewed energy and enthusiasm every spring, I must confess that by Thanksgiving the poor old mum begins to pall, and I turn gratefully to something else for a change.

Before filling in the benches the drainage must be taken care of, and this can be done by spreading straw, or some similar substance over the cracks in the bottom of the bench. This will keep the soil from trickling through and yet will permit of the free ingress of air and egress of water. The very best material to use for this purpose is fresh sod, laid along the cracks, as the roots of the mum love it and delight to run through it, as anyone who has ever used sod for this purpose knows. Fill the bench level full of soil, without firming, so that after planting, when the bed is made solid the soil will be low enough to permit of a top dressing later in the season.

The distance apart to put out the plants seems to vary with different growers very considerably. It all depends, of course, on the quality of the stock you are desiring to grow. For the very finest grade of flowers 10 inches by 8 or 9 is as close as one dare to plant. Flowers from plants so grown, if grown as they should be, ought to wholesale at fifty cents each, though they seldom seem to, outside of New York. This distance, 10 by 8 or 9, is for single stem plants, one flower to a plant. If two stems are to be taken from each plant (and a plant will produce two flowers as good as one, providing you plant early and have good plants), more space must be allowed.

You can take from three to six flowers from the same space I have recommended for single stems, and your prices for the same will range from twenty cents each down to nothing at all in the great wholesale centers. In smaller towns a man must grow the grade of flowers his trade calls for, and it would be poor business policy to grow or attempt to grow the finest flowers if you know that you won't be able to get over ten or fifteen cents each for them. After planting make the soil firm by pounding down uniformly all over the bed. This will keep the plants more dwarf, as the roots will not run so quickly through the soil.

If you are proposing to take several shoots up from each plant it is best not to pinch the plant, but wait until it makes its first break, when you can select as many as you desire for that purpose. If the plants are pinched early you get a forest of leaves too close to the bench. Then you will find that the beds will not dry out evenly, and you are almost certain to get rust or some other leaf disease will start in from the moisture hanging on the bottom of the leaves.

Cuttings

for 6-inch pot single-stem work should be rooted now as soon as possible. They need more looking after now as regards spraying and shading than they did earlier in the season. Keep them from wilting if you possibly can. The class for plants in 6-inch pots is an interesting feature of exhibitions, and one sees some very fine stock set up at times. The varieties best suited to this purpose are those with a sturdy habit. Mrs. Robinson, Merza, Gold Mine, V.-Morel and Nellie Pockett are good types for this class.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

Time and again I am asked as to the best method of carrying American Beauties over a second season. The beginner and inexperienced cling to the idea that it is a waste of material to throw out the old plants when they are showing such vigorous growth early in the summer and to substitute young stock in their place. I wish it to be understood that I do not advocate this method of culture, but will give a resume of the most successful way of doing it, as it has come under my own observation.

The benches should be partly dried off for a couple of weeks previous to lifting the plants. These when lifted should be heeled in on some high ground outside and pruned into shape. In about two or three weeks they will be ready to transplant.

The soil and benches should be prepared in the same way as recommended for young stock, only it is better to add another inch to the depth of the sideboard. The ball should be reduced to a size easy to handle, taking care to disturb the roots as little as possible, and plant just deep enough to cover the ball. They should then get a thorough soaking to settle the soil well around them, afterward allowing them to become moderately dry till root action has commenced, when the supply of water can be gradually increased. During this period the house should be kept rather close and moist, using the syringe freely twice a day during bright weather. The soil should be stirred at least once a week, and should never be allowed to remain with a crust on it. It is claimed that these plants produce a greater quantity of medium length stems than young stock will, but I have never seen a house so handled that could in any way compare with a well handled house of young healthy stock.

To run a house of Meteors over a second season they should never want for lack of a good rich mulch, nor be allowed to become dry, but should be kept growing vigorously at all times. This rose seems to give the best results if kept steadily at work. All it desires is a good supply of rich food, plenty of water and careful ventilation to run it successfully over the hot months. Trimming out all the small blind wood will give better circulation among the foliage and encourage the production of strong canes from the base, which after being cut back will make good flower-producing wood for winter.

CARNATION NOTES.

Most of us who enjoy a final rush at the end of the season in the shape of cemetery bouquets and any other kind of moderate priced flower for Decoration Day, try to keep our carnations going until after that date, and only those that are in very poor condition are fired out. It will not pay you to keep in anything now, though, but what is in fairly good condition, as the watering, etc., will cost you more than what flowers you can cut are worth. If you were smart last summer while planting them in from the field you will have planted all those varieties that give out early together in the same house. Then you can throw them all out and use the house for something else, or, what is much better, give it a good cleaning and painting and get it ready for your earliest planting this summer.

You know there are times when you have to study to keep all your men busy. There will be lots of work in a few days, or weeks perhaps, but it can't be done just then and at just such times you can be getting a house or two ready for early planting. It will not injure the soil to thoroughly dry out on the benches, but on the other hand it will kill many worms, etc., and if you keep the soil moist until the first crop of weeds is up and then let it get as dry as powder it will destroy most of them. There is nothing more profitable than to get as much work done ahead as possible; in a month or two you will have more than you can do. Some growers plant their carnation houses full of asters, but we do not approve of it, as it throws them too late with their planting.

We are having a good rain every few days and both carnations and weeds are growing rapidly in the field, and the cultivator and the hoe must be kept going to keep the weeds down and the carnations growing.

You should put on a little more shade over the plants that are still producing blooms, as the sun is getting hotter every day. A few weeks ago I said that one of the reasons we keep our carnations in good shape so late is because we don't hurry on a lot of shade as soon as it gets a little warm outside. I have also repeatedly referred to Ethel Crocker as being a grand carnation and I want to repeat both these statements, and for this reason. On Wednesday, May 28, a neighboring florist and good grower came to see us and when we showed him through he said that these were the finest carnations he had ever seen for Decoration Day, but when we showed him a bench of Crocker he threw up both hands and declared it a grand carnation in spite of the fact that it had been a failure with him. I am not telling this, Mr. Editor, to be bragging on my carnations, but after hearing and reading nothing but abuse of a variety that has brought us the very highest returns it did me more good than a cash order for a thousand blooms at Xmas prices. It shows one thing conclusively, too, and that is that almost every variety introduced can be made to pay handsomely if it gets the treatment it needs and that just because a variety does poorly with us is not a sure reason that it is a poor variety. Before we condemn a variety let us look around and see how it behaves at our neighbor's place. A. F. J. BAUR.

CATTLEYA SKINNERI.

This orchid has recently been imported in quantity and will doubtless become a factor in the orchid cut flower trade. While the flowers are smaller than such varieties as labiata or Trianæ, the plant makes up by being very free flowering, each growth producing from five to ten flowers. The flowers are quite distinct in color, which is a rosy purple, and are produced in March and April, which is an excellent time to get flowers, as Trianæ is over and nothing much but C. Schroderæ is in flower at that time; and as the last named variety is not grown extensively except by one or two growers, C. Skinneri will be very acceptable.

In habit C. Skinneri reminds one of C. Bowringiana, to which it is closely allied, though Bowringiana does not flower until early autumn. If imported pieces of C. Skinneri are bought now and well looked after they will become established and render a good account of themselves by next year. They are comparatively cheap and the flowers should wholesale at a quarter each in any market. C. Skinneri is a native of Guatemala. As with any other cattleya it needs lots of water while growing and a good ripening of the bulb to induce it to flower freely. C. T.

BOSTON AS IT APPEARS TO A PHILADELPHIAN.

[An address by Geo. C. Watson before the Philadelphia Florists' Club, June 2, 1902.]

The bonds of amity, political, commercial and otherwise, between the great communities of Philadelphia and Boston, are numerous and ancient and cordial; but in no relation are these bonds more emphatic than in the field of gardening.

I use the word gardening in its broadest meaning—which includes horticulture, floriculture, arboriculture, and landscape gardening, or the art of laying out grounds. I use the word purposely because it is ancient and catholic. I use it purposely because in recent years some people of pretensions would appear to be ashamed of it, while on the contrary, they ought to be proud of it, as being in its highest reaches equal in grandeur to its sister arts—music, poetry and painting.

And so, when a Philadelphian, looking back on his city's ancient and modern achievements in gardening and feels a sense of elation in contemplating the great figures that did their day's work so nobly in their chosen field, when the proud feeling is strong on him and he suddenly finds himself in the midst of that other great center of gardening, the city of Boston, he experiences a new feeling.

That new feeling is not envy, neither is it shame. It is a higher pride, a more exalted elation. The Philadelphian's pride is still there; but it is merged in the cosmopolitan glory of a common heritage, for gardening knows no latitude and no longitude and the appreciative visitor cannot view the art as practiced in Boston and New England today, without feelings of the deepest respect and admiration.

To some it may appear difficult to say when one community has reached a higher stage than another in the difficult art of "gardening finely"; but a little reflection will reveal the distinction. Of the four grand divisions of gardening as laid down by Loudon, horticulture, floriculture, arboriculture, and landscape gardening, the latter is undoubtedly the branch that calls for the highest order of talent. There are thousands in this country who call themselves landscape gardeners and who have but the faintest idea of the true significance of the term. Many of them know about as much about it as the cat does about the Lord's Prayer. When I speak of landscape gardeners therefore, I do not mean the quack kind, but those who have true taste and genius for their profession, and they are rare indeed.

Now it is because Boston has produced most of the genius in that crowning branch of gardening, that she takes rank as the Mecca to which we all turn and worship. In one great man alone, the late Frederick Law Olmsted, Boston had a shining light that illuminated the remotest corners of the land, with examples of correct taste in the matter of laying out grounds, both public and private. Many younger tapers have been lighted from that torch and they are bidding fair to carry on the work on the sound principles laid down by Mr. Olmsted and other eminent men of the older generation.

Monuments of the taste and liberality of the citizens of Boston in gardening are visible in every direction—in her park system, in her cemeteries, in her model suburban railroad station grounds, and in her innumerable elegant private estates. Taking an impartial survey of the whole field, I have no hesitation in saying that Boston is the most advanced community in gardening matters in North America, if not in the world, and while Philadelphia was the Mecca half a century ago, and is still a good second, her citizens are as ready to applaud superior merit as they are capable of understanding such merit when they see it.

This distinction is merited by Boston solely on the grounds of her higher culture in landscape gardening. Other cities outrank Boston in some branches of gardening by reason of the climate, location, or other accidental circumstance, but in most things it was Boston and Philadelphia that first showed them the way. The rigorous climate and rocky soil of Massachusetts called for gardeners of the right kind, and that was the kind produced.

We Philadelphians are proud of our roll of great men in gardening—from Bartram, Hamilton, Jackson, Pierce, Marshall, McMahon, down to Buist, Landreth, Meehan, and others. In like manner the Bostonians cherish an equally ancient and eminent Golden Scroll blazoned with such names as Endicott, Faneuil, Fessenden, Kenrick, Breck, Hovey, Wilder, Manning, Olmsted, Hunnewell, and dozens of others of notable importance in their contributions to the art of gardening in the New World.

In seeking for the causes which produced the present proud pre-eminence of Boston in gardening we naturally attach much importance to her Horticultural Society, established in 1829, two years later than our own organization. While McMahon of Philadelphia, published the first American book on gardening in 1806, Boston had the first periodical that treated on gardening extensively, "The New England Farmer," which was edited by Fessenden and Breck, and led up to the formation of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, which in turn influenced the founding of the Mt. Auburn Cemetery—the first in America in the modern style, as distinguished from the old-fashioned church yards. Then for thirty odd years from 1835 to 1868 we see Hovey's Magazine flourishing and shedding a great influence in the community just as Meehan's Monthly did here, from 1859 to the present time. The character and standing of the men in the Boston Society have always been of the highest order also, and the effect of these influences on the modern community is quite apparent and most gratifying to contemplate.

These reflections are the result of a recent visit to Boston, and my only excuse for troubling you with them is to remind you that each and every one of us has to strive to do his share in keeping the light burning, however small the faggot he brings. The mere facts or most of them you knew before, and I do not pretend to teach—only to remind you—and my experience is that it is reminding we all need more than teaching.

BUSINESS METHODS FOR BUSY FLORISTS.

V.

Many concerns in other lines of business keep a "charity account," into which are posted such items of expense or outlay as are purely charitable, including gifts to colleges, churches and kindred institutions, donations to street fairs, conventions, secret orders, etc., etc., in almost endless number, which are daily solicited in the larger cities. By some these are considered part of the legitimate expense of a business, just as much as advertising, taxes, street and lawn improvements, etc., all of which tend in a general way to keep your name before the public and in that way help to advertise you and your business. With this kind of charitable giving I am not going to argue. It may be all right, and it may be and often is, overdone.

The "charity account" which the average florist should keep is altogether of a different nature and can be more properly termed "The Beggars' Account." The pitiable object who stops you on the street corner for "a dime for something to eat," is reminded by the average individual to "go to work and earn your dime." The beggar in up-to-date clothes who asks for flowers and plants because "I tell all my friends to come here," or because "I bought our church flowers here last Easter," is apt to be treated more politely. But between the two choose the street beggar on whom to bestow your alms, for you may never see him again, while your other friend (?) will come again and again and bring others to be treated in the same manner because you are so liberal.

I don't know why it is, but it appears to me that the florists are "worked" more than any other class of business men, and just because they allow themselves to be "worked" the "beggars' account" increases more rapidly than their income. People who would never think of asking their grocer for a cookie, their butcher for a bone or their druggist for a pill, will go to the florist and demand five or ten dollars' worth of goods for nothing. Who would think of going to a flour mill and asking for a bag of flour because you purchased some for the church fair? Still they come to the florist asking for much because they or their friends purchased a little in the dim and shadowy past.

And this form of a "hold up" is not practiced by the poor, by those who cannot afford to buy your products, but by the well to do, by those who ride in their own carriages and live in luxury. Everyone knows such individuals and has been "worked" by them. If you have not been or are just starting into business make a firm resolve never to accede to their demands and one big account will never have to be opened in your ledger. If you have been a victim of such "hold ups" and circumstances are such that you will be again, commence at once to keep an accurate record of such gifts and you will be appalled at the aggregate amount at the end of the year. It will be so large that you will devise some means for curtailing the "Beggars' Account" at once. In many concerns it would add 5 per cent or more to the annual income. If an employe should steal that much you would have him in jail at once.

I do not counsel economy to the point of penuriousness. This is a liberal age and small allowances and concessions judiciously made may bring you hundreds of dollars in return. If you have flowers that will spoil or a surplus when trade is dull, a nice box with your compliments to some of your best customers or to some prospective customers will not be amiss, though it would be well to keep an accurate record of such gifts. Hospitals, asylums, orphanages, churches, etc., can also be remembered at such times, never forgetting, however, to enclose your business card with each lot.

But in whatever way you distribute your surplus stock keep an accurate record of it, so that at the end of the year you may know where it has gone and what it has produced in income. The success or failure of your business depends upon the size of your income and the "Beggars' Account" only represents a dead loss. It may be and is advisable at times to give discounts in order to encourage future trade, and liberality in any line of business may lead to good sales, but outright gifts to habitual beggars should be discountenanced and "cut out." System.

A BUDGET OF QUESTIONS.

This budget of questions was sent with the request that they be answered quick, from M. W. W.

No. 1. Give culture of Margaret carnations from seed to have in bloom by May 1st.

No. 2. Also say when to root petunias to have them in bloom in 3-inch pots by May 1st.

No. 3. Also verbenas for same time, and gloxinias from bulbs, same time.

May 1st seems to be a great day in the district where M. W. W. does business. But as these questions have been referred to me I can only do my best.

No. 1. The Margaret carnation is usually treated as an annual and is seldom or never seen in bloom either inside or outside by May 1st. To get them in bloom that early you would have to sow the seed in July, grow them in pots during fall and winter in a cold frame until February when you could bring them in the house and with a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees they should be in flower by May 1st.

No. 2. Petunias are easily in flower at the date so frequently mentioned. You can either take cuttings from plants growing outside in October, or lift carefully and cut back these plants, when you will get good cuttings during January and February, and if grown on with liberal pot room will be well in flower early. The petunia is a plant that wants no stunting, or it will rust. It is worth growing from seed, and that's all.

No. 3. The questioner does not say whether the verbenas are from seed or cuttings. If the former then sow end of January, and if you must have them in bloom at the date noted then give them a light, warm bench. But you had much better have a thrifty young plant that would not be in flower till middle of May.

No. 3. Section 2. Gloxinias are more used as summer plants for the conservatory, although one of the very best house plants. We don't usually start the bulbs till middle of March, but if wanted in bloom as early as May 1st, they should be started early in January.

M. W. W. must have read Tennyson's beautiful verses:

"I'm to be Queen of the May, mother,
I'm to be Queen of the May."

William Scott.

THE FUTURE.

Editor Florists' Review: Your remarks in a recent issue on this subject will furnish food for thought to many a cut flower grower, who is trying to solve just that problem of providing first-class flowers in July and August. Really good American Beauty roses would be worth more in August than they are at present in January, but how to get them, "ah, there's the rub." The problem of growing roses and carnations specially fine all summer will in all probability be solved in time by the appliances you speak of, and of course the growers who first get such appliances into successful working operation will be the men who will make money. This is only as it should be, since wealth is the result of progress.

The idea of shading the glass with alum to keep out heat while admitting light is new to me, and will be valuable if it will work satisfactorily. It is to be hoped that many of your readers will experiment with this and report results.

View in Store of Mr. Samuel Murray, Kansas City, at Easter.

While the rose and carnation men are struggling with their problem let us look over the field and see what other flowers may come up in the future for summer work, that are not so much affected by the heat. Cold storage is going to be a great factor in the future. By this means all kinds of bulbous stock and flowering shrubs can be retarded and brought in at the will of the operator. The possibilities in this direction are boundless, and undoubtedly some of our wide-awake florists will shortly take up this line extensively. Experiments will be necessary to determine just the right temperature for different plants in a cold storage, but those are only details that will be quickly worked out. The man with ample cold storage facilities will soon know no season, but will bring in crops just when they are needed.

Another large source of supply for summer flowers that has yet been hardly touched in America is the orchid family. There are many varieties flowering in midsummer which can be grown extensively when the orchid growers are satisfied that the market will be remunerative, and present experience with such varieties as Cattleyas gigas and Gaskelliana, seems to show that it will be.

In looking over what has been accomplished in the last 25 years the possibilities of the next quarter century are boundless. Combinations of capital will appear as in every other business, much of the waste now manifest in fuel will be eliminated and many things now done by hand, such as stoking, filling benches, etc., will be done automatically and in many ways the wheels will revolve smoother in "Life's demnition grind," as the only William, or some other fellow, puts it. Meanwhile we most of us take our time in adopting new ideas and are content to follow some one else's lead. C. T.

Editor Florists' Review: Your article on "The Future," in the Review of May 22, makes me think that you are a bold man to look so far into it. The great changes that will undoubtedly take place will be likely to be on quite different lines than any of us would expect. The progress that will be made will evolve from our present experience.

If there is a demand for better flowers through the summer (when nature is doing so much for us out of doors) they will be produced, and it will be done so simply that we will all wonder why it was not done before. I do not look for refrigerating plants, fans and filters as part of the equipment of the future florist, and insects and fungus diseases will be kept in subjection or conquered by the skillful florist in the future much the same as at present (by the application of common sense).

The idea of using alum as a shading may be a good one and is worth experimenting with, but I fear it will be found too thin. So far the best shading that I have found is white lead mixed with gasoline or benzine and applied with a whitewash brush. Be careful not to use when there is any fire near or serious loss may occur.

BUFFALO.

From all accounts the trade at Decoration Day, as we usually designate what is called Memorial Day in other parts, was very satisfactory. We are sure for the week that it was 30 per cent ahead of last year with some people, and when we find ourselves busy the same conditions invariably will be found to have been the same all along the line. The demand at that time is not for high-priced flowers, but that does not make the business any the less profitable. We never get the common herbaceous pæonies in by the first of June except the officinalis type, and hardly those, but there are plenty sent in from earlier districts. Outside valley was at its best. Carnations were plentiful. There is a great temptation to cut the flowers of the good double zonal geraniums on that day of big demand and you can rob the plants of a flower here and there, if judiciously done, for if you leave one truss showing flower for each plant surely that is good enough for the plants that are going to be bedded out.

How many of you know the wonderful type of candytuft that is grown in immense quantities by Mr. William Sim, of Cliftondale, Mass.? He plants several houses of it to succeed violets, in solid beds. It comes in just right for Memorial Day. I don't suppose I grew the few plants he so kindly sent me as perfectly as he does his 50,000, but I had heads of bloom 12 inches across and stems 2 feet high, of the purest white but not so dense that it looks heavy. I trust Mr. Sim will excuse me giving his Candytuft what notoriety I am able to. It is a truly great flower.

The Pan-American, of happy memory to some but not to all, was assuredly a benefit to all local florists and we had an idea it added at least 10 per cent to our normal spring and summer trade, and that in its absence we should drop back again. Not so up to date, or more strictly speaking the month of May was considerably better than last year. This is very delightful and in a measure compensates for the loss of the matchless illuminations and fairyland in general.

There has been quite a little craze the past three or four years for the residents of our beautiful Delaware avenue to plant privet hedges along their property line facing the street. Although personally not an advocate for the beauty side of it, it would be foolish to let your prejudice interfere with good business, so the writer has helped considerably to disfigure—as some consider—this lovely avenue. Now comes along the progressive and energetic Commissioner of Public Works and notifies nearly all of them that the hedges are not on their property, but a foot or more on the public street. Its to be hoped he will give these worthy people till at least October when the removing can be done with safety and with little set back to the hedges, as they are all of recent planting.

I was up at the North Park greenhouses a few days ago. Capt. Braik, Asst. Supt. of Parks, has an immense stock of grand bedding plants. Never saw better. And this assures us that our parks and squares in appropriate places will be gay for the summer months. The visit was specially made to inspect a fine batch of herbaceous calceolarias, well grown, broad, short plants, and clean of all aphis. What a gorgeous, gay, plant this is, and to those who do not know it, it appeals as a wonder, but it is really not a plant for the florist, for however clean you may grow them, and it takes a lot of growing, it will become infested with aphis while you are delivering and three days afterwards Mrs. Grumble comes and says: "Look here, that lady slipper I bought here three days ago is all covered with lice. I wish you would send for it." But with all that for the private conservatory or Schenley Park, it is simply a flood of beautiful colors.

After an absence of eight months I once again visited Prof. John F. Cowell, director of South Park and the Botanic Gardens. What a magnificent range of glass those conservatories are! They appeared to me a little more imposing than ever, and when the fifty million steel plant is completed and its 20,000 operatives are at work, and the butcher and baker and doctor and undertaker arrive also, it will be a city itself, and South Park will not seem so remote as it did five years ago. The way palms and dracænas and crotons and all the rest have grown was very striking to me. In the very near future the Professor will have specimen palms to burn or barter. The big range is filled and looking fine and I am glad to say the people of Buffalo are awakening to the fact that they have an educational and interesting place in South Park.

I would like to inform the florists of Buffalo that the races at Fort Erie begin next Monday and they must get their orders out at least by 1 p. m. for the next 25 days. "Jake Hatch" is favorite for the Canadian Derby.

NEW YORK.

The month of roses opens with real summer temperature and the anticipated dullness in the market. June weddings are not materializing as rapidly as they should. Remunerative decorations are few and far between. The gardens are planted. There isn't much left but the "races," and the bowling, and the consideration of the trip to Asheville. The sidewalk merchants are in their glory. They buy their goods for a song and keep the street corners radiant with color. The green goods men seem to have enough to do. The demand for wild smilax and leucothoe sprays has been continuous.

At the cut flower market the hour of opening has been changed from 5 to 6 a. m., a sensible move. A business that lasts from 5 a. m. until midnight is hard enough anyway.

The American Rose Society will hold its June show on the 11th of the month at the Botanical Garden, in connection with the show of the New York Horticultural Society.

At Riverton last week I saw Mr. Eisele in the midst of an immense stretch of pæonie blooms reaching about as far away as the eye could grasp, and I noticed the daily cutting was enormous, overflowing the Philadelphia market and finding its way to this city, where the great shipments have been rapidly absorbed.

Julius Roehrs celebrated his silver wedding last week, and bids fair to last for the golden one. He has fully recovered from his encounter with the trolley car and is busy superintending extensive additions and improvements to his great plant at Carlton Hill.

Some of the foreign "celebrities" are leaving our shores this month. Dimmock goes to London on the 14th; Suzuki departs on the 10th for the Flowery Kingdom. John Degnan has shaken the dust of New York from his feet, while Wilson, of Western Springs, is drinking from some eastern springs around New York and Boston.

Runyon, of the Elizabeth Nursery Co., ran away with a Holland nurseryman last week, or his horse did, and would probably be running yet if a tree had not intervened. The Hollander had an eye and cheek cut and was otherwise maltreated but the horse and driver came out of the war unscathed. The buggy was unrecognizable.

Last Tuesday Wadley & Smythe decorated the French steamship beautifully, banking the three decks with palms and bays and giving it a charming garden effect that was much appreciated by the distinguished visitors. The only flowers used were American Beauties. At the Newport luncheon, in the Casino rooms and grounds, in their honor, the four tables were decorated with cut flowers, hydrangeas, Liberty roses, lilacs, white roses, the French colors, and the walls and ceilings were covered with the American and French flags. It was a government affair and no expense was spared in making it effective.

The most charming feature of our park at present is its wealth of wistaria bloom. Nowhere in America can such profusion of flower and such old and spreading vines be found.

Decoration Day was "an oasis in the desert" this year, with grand weather, smiling skies, and an enormous demand for blooming plants and flowers. It was estimated that over $100,000 worth of these were used in New York alone.

The nurserymen's convention at Milwaukee promises to be a banner assembly. Next week Tuesday is the opening day. From New York the D. L. and W. seems to be the popular way of travel.

Next Monday the regular monthly meeting of the New York Florists' Club will be held in the rooms of President Sheridan on W. 28th street. A large attendance is requested. Final arrangements for the July outing will be completed, and exhibits of new plants and flowers are expected.

The bowlers feel the lassitude of humidity and few can be lured to the weekly practice. Perhaps it is because the team is "on edge" and already "ready for the fray." Capt. Lang would not be so discourteous as to bowl a man who is in the nervous condition of the young and marriageable St. Louis captain, but will tackle him at Asheville, when his nerves are steady and he has the inspiration of a wife's smiles to encourage him in the hour of trial. Austin.

PHILADELPHIA.

Decoration Day.

Memorial Day business proved very satisfactory. An immense quantity of cut flowers, plants and florists' supplies being consumed. Most of the dealers were taxed to keep up with their orders and some did fifty per cent more business than last year. Prices did not advance; there was too much stock for that. Probably this was just as well, quantity being wanted first, quality after. Out-door flowers were in great demand; pæonies moving at a lively rate; also Japanese snow balls. Carnations were good and plentiful; the fancies bringing $20 and $25 a thousand, a few $3 a hundred; the bulk of the stock went at $10 to $15 a thousand. Roses, valley and sweet peas sold well, the latter being reinforced by the outside varieties. They averaged about 50 cents a hundred, unless for something extra fine.

The cemetery florists experienced their great day of the year. Westcott, Alburger and the others having more than they could do. Roses in pots, geraniums and anything adorned by a flower sold readily at good prices. A great deal of immortelle work was made up for Grand Army Posts, Biester and Habermehl having some especially large pieces.

The supply houses experienced heavy business. Bayersdorfer & Co. shipped great quantities of cycas leaves, metal wreaths and baskets. Their wreaths of natural magnolia foliage as well as beech and laurel were much sought. Rice & Co. note an increased demand for fancy baskets in all styles and were exceedingly busy distributing staple goods.

The cut flower commission houses worked far into the night every day last week, and in some instances all night. This week they are rushed with wedding and commencement orders.

Notes.

Edwin Londsdale is cutting some choice white paeonies that have brought $2 a dozen; the market price for fine varieties is from $3 to $5 a hundred. The name of this variety is not positively known.

John Savage is cutting out door sweet peas in quantity.

Hugh Walsh, a well known and respected florist of Logan, is dead. The business will be continued by his two sons.

Mrs. David Cliffe will carry on her late husband's business at Main and Johnson streets, Germantown.

Leo Niessen found Memorial Day business better than last year. He had as much as he could possibly do.

A. J. Pennock is sending in some superb valley to his brother. An idea of the quality may be formed when the price, $5 a hundred, is given.

S. S. Pennock reports business as 50 per cent better than on this holiday last year. Pæonies proved the right thing at the right moment, nearly 50,000 being sold during the week.

Edward Reid sent out 75,000 carnations in the three days, May 28 to 30. An order for 600 special Brides and Maids received late on Saturday when everything was cleaned up was satisfactorilly filled in a few hours by ringing up his growers.

M. Rice, now on a business trip through Italy, Switzerland, Germany and France, is expected home the latter part of this month. Mr. Rice has experienced very cold weather with snow at Genoa, an almost unknown thing there in May.

William Yeager, of Norristown, has had splendid results with carnations this season.

Joseph Heacock is in the midst of a very difficult piece of work—the removal of the wooden gutters between his houses, which are being replaced with new ones of the best cypress.

Harry Bayersdorfer will sail for Europe on the Kaizer Wilhelm on June 17. He expects to be absent until October, in order to have time to secure a comprehensive collection of the rarest and best florists' requisites that the continent affords. Mrs. Bayersdorfer will accompany him.

Edwin Londsdale has planted three houses of the new rose, Ivory.

Paul R. Klingsporn, with George M. Moss, will sail for Europe on June 10.

Lord & Burnham Company have erected twelve fine greenhouses for James W. Paul, Jr., president of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, at his place on the main line P. R. R. It is understood that the contract price is $25,000. Joseph Harley will have charge of this fine place. This firm are to be congratulated on securing the services of D. T. Connor, who will act as their local representative. Mr. Connor is well qualified to fill this position, well known and very popular in florists' circles.

G. C. Watson has sent out an earnest appeal on behalf of Secretary Stewart, urging the gardeners and florists of this vicinity to join the S. A. F. O. H., and support President Burton by attending the Asheville convention.

A flying change—
Just for a day,
Austin to Broad Street—
Phil to Broadway.

The club meeting on Tuesday night was addressed by G. C. Watson who told of his trip to Boston. A smoker followed.

W. K. Harris, president of the Florists' Gun Club, won the special prize for members only in the contest at Wissinoming. The scores were remarkable considering the weather conditions. Mr. Harris scoring a total of 60, with a handicap of 15. This was not the best work of the day, as George Anderson, with a handicap of 9 targets, scored a total of 59, breaking 50 straight. This is quite a record for Anderson, as it has been several years since a straight score of 50 targets has been made on the Florists' grounds in a club contest.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Decoration Day trade around this locality was the same as usual, very little doing in the city, and only those who were close to the cemetery gates had plenty of customers and were kept quite busy all day. Cut flowers of all kinds suddenly became scarce and a great deal of dried stuff was used by those who had orders ahead and could not get fresh flowers with which to make them up. Such is the life of a florist in St. Louis.

The first part of the past week flowers were still very plentiful and very cheap, but the latter part of the week all kinds of flowers became scarce and good prices again prevailed for the few that came in. The trade was running from one wholesale house to another and all with the same answer—"Nothing in yet." Prices went up and anything that came in was sold at a good price. The wholesalers claim that the sudden shortage was caused by most of the shippers using their stock at home.

The few roses that are coming in are very poor and bring from $3 to $5 per 100. Very few long Beauties are in and $2 to $3 per dozen is the price for them.

A good supply of Candidum lilies is in and are selling at from $4 to $8 per 100 stalks. Pæonies are all out and there are plenty of Cape Jasmines in the market at 75 cents per 100. The wholesale commission men on Third street are handling most of them just now.

Carnations are very much in demand and almost anything good brought 2 cents Friday, Saturday and Sunday. White had the greatest call, as plenty of funeral work was in on those days. Sweet peas are now in quite plentiful at 50 cents per 100 for top prices, while the bulk go at 25 and 35 cents. Field daisies are sold at 35 cents per 100. A great deal of smilax was sold for Decoration day work at $15 per 100 strings. The supply was plentiful and the quality good. Galax leaves, too, had a good call at the usual prices.

Notes.

Miss Theresa Badaracco, of 1308 Olive street, is making preparations for a two months' trip to West Baden Springs. She will also visit Chicago before returning home. Miss Theresa has had a most successful season.

Miss Martha Herzog, daughter of Max Herzog, was married last Thursday to Mr. Ernest Hentscher. Mr. Hentscher is in the employ of his father-in-law. Both of the young people are happy at the old homestead at Gratiot. We wish them much luck and happiness.

R. J. Mohr, of the Plant Seed Co., left Saturday night on a trip South in the interest of the house. Rudolph says he will be back in time for the June meeting of the florist club, of which he is one of the trustees.

A representative of Dean & Co., 45 E. Congress street, Chicago, was in town distributing samples of their flower developer. It's a powder which will also kill insects in the earth.

Shaw's Garden was open to the public Sunday, a most beautiful day for it. The crowd numbered fully 20,000. Everything looked at its best. The students and directors welcomed the visitors and answered all questions asked. The first Sundays in June and September are always a great treat to the people who have no time to visit the garden during the week. On no other Sunday is the garden open to the public. This is in accordance with the will left by the late Henry Shaw, who was truly a great and good man to the people of St. Louis.

Bowling.

Seven members bowled three games Monday night, which ended the May series of twelve games. John Sturtz wins the first prize with an average of nine games of 191. Ellison and Miller tied for second prize with an average in twelve games of 174. The following scores will show how the rest stand in the May series.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Decoration Day trade easily broke all previous records. Roses were scarce and poor as anticipated but carnations were plentiful and immense quantities were sold. Prices on these ruled somewhat lower than in previous years, but the quantity was so much greater that the total receipts were very satisfactory. Of pæonies there was about enough to meet demands. Jasmines were not much called for, as there was plenty of carnations. Had there been plenty of good roses the business would have been very much larger. The shipping demand was great, and local call was also better than in previous years. The number of carnations received was remarkable. In fact some late arrivals had to be cleaned up at very moderate rates. We hear of two sales at the last, one of 18,000 at $1.00 per 100, and 23,000 at $1.10 per 100. On the whole it was a very satisfactory trade, everything being well cleaned up.

One dealer said the demand from outside was too good. When asked why, he replied that good regular customers who ordered late and whose orders could not be filled couldn't understand why they had been "turned down," and that it hurt to have them feel that way. But how can one fill an order when he has not got and cannot buy the stock with which to fill it?

Since Decoration Day the shipping demand has kept up fairly well, though on Tuesday stock seemed to be accumulating, especially poor grade colored carnations. Good roses are still scarce and shipping grade stock brings $5 to $6. Good carnations range from $1 to $2, but on the poorer grades prices are very weak. We saw a lot of poor Argyles and sleepy Marquis offered at 5 cents a bunch and the offer declined.

The quality of the roses has improved a shade since Decoration Day, but the return of warm weather, accompanied by frequent rains, will no doubt soon make quality register a still lower degree.

Various Items.

Kennicott Bros. Co. alone sold 8,300 dozen pæonies for Decoration Day.

Bassett & Washburn had a fine lot of lilies for Decoration Day and sold over 10,000 of them.

At Des Plaines Frank Garland is rebuilding one house and W. S. Garland is building two new ones, 27x250 each, for roses.

The wife of I. C. Silliman, the West Side florist, died last Saturday and was buried Monday.

New wood ferns are being received but they are rather soft yet.

Liberty has been quite a factor in the rose market of late. Bassett & Washburn have been cutting 1,000 a day and all have sold readily at good prices. At this time of the year the buds ship finely, even better than Beauty.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Decoration Day proved to be a surprise to many of us. Although we expected stock to be somewhat scarce, owing to the hot weather a few weeks before that brought in stock with a rush, still no one looked for it to be as scarce as it was. There was scarcely enough to fill one-third of the orders taken, to say nothing of regular business. Pæonies, which were expected to fill a big gap, failed to materialize and roses were also impossible to obtain. The only flower that seemed to hold out to any extent was the carnation; some really good ones were to be had, but even they were short of expectation.

Despite the fact that flowers were so scarce, bringing in some instances almost holiday prices, there was nevertheless a very large amount of business done, and I believe that on an average it was ahead of last year.

At present stock is still very scarce, especially good roses. Liberties, nevertheless, are still coming in fine shape and sell well. At present roses are quoted at from 2 to 5 cents according to quality.

Some first class carnations are still to be had, but the supply is limited. Ordinary grades are more plentiful and as luck will have it, there are a goodly lot of white coming in, which always find a ready market. Red is going well and as the high school commencement takes place this week on Friday, there will be a big demand for carnations on that day. They are selling at 2 cents for fancy and 1 to 1½ cents for ordinary grades.

Outdoor sweet peas are proving to be a failure. The dry spring did the business for them. The indoor grown are about played out, so this very desirable June flower is almost out of the market.

A little feverfew, candytuft, stocks, etc., is to be had and it forms very acceptable stock for funeral work, of which there has been quite a lot lately, and in the absence of roses and carnations this class of stock comes in very handy.

There is a fine lot of smilax to be had and it sells at 15 cents per string. Asparagus is also plentiful at 50 cents per string.

Various Items.

The election of the board of directors for the Cincinnati Florists' Society will take place at the regular meeting to be held Saturday evening, June 14. The polls will be open from 8 to 9:30 p. m., thus giving all members a chance to cast their ballots.

J. Chas. McCullough and family will sail for Europe about July 1, intending to be abroad about three months.

J. G. Fine, of Dayton, Ky., has rented the plant belonging to Geo. Magrie at College Hill, O. He will grow a general line of stock for the retail trade. During the recent heavy storms Mr. Fine sustained considerable damage at his Dayton place through water, which was backed up into his greenhouses, at some places being five feet deep. Mr. Magrie will continue his retail store on Elm street, now giving that business his entire attention.

Jos. R. Goldman, of Middletown, Ohio, was almost swamped with funeral work during the past week, owing to the death of Mr. Paul Sorg, the tobacco merchant of that city. R. A. Betz, of this city, was called to help him out.

The Queen & Crescent R. R. have granted the florists of this city a rate of one fare for the round trip to the S. A. F. convention at Asheville. This amounts to $12.36 for the round trip, which is a very good rate. The sleeper rate will be $3.00 each way. Anyone wishing to secure berths in advance can do so by notifying Mr. E. G. Gillett, 113 East 3d street, this city, who has the diagrams of two sleepers and will make assignments.

Mr. Ed. Helfrich and sister were callers. C. J. Ohmer.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Memorial week was a good one and without doubt the best of its date ever experienced here for the grower and retailer. It was a great go-as-you-please race for the growers with handicaps to suit the keeping qualities of each man's goods.

The green-goods men started the very first of the week and the rose men did not get the word until Thursday morning after everything else was on the gallop.

Everything landed all right except cheaper grades of white stocks, candytuft and such ilk, which was so plentiful as to get crowded along the course. Hardy ferns fell out of the race middle of the week for lack of material and caused some annoyance. Lilies very scarce. Prices probably did not average quite up to former standards. A noticeable feature was more red roses than ever before but of course none too many. Small roses got scarce but not enough to create big figures.

In spite of the cool weather of early spring the few hot days of late hurried up outdoor goods of all kinds enough to make most of them of no use for the 30th. Pæonies, however, did not seem to catch the rush spirit so much and have not yet appeared in large quantities.

Notes.

Memorial day is a good title for the real closing day of the season, since we have its memories to keep us alive through the summer, and just as surely Thanksgiving day is a good title for the first day that gives us a little extra lift in the fall.

W. H. Elliott's man claims the banner cut of roses for Memorial day. He says he marketed over 27,000 Thursday and Friday mornings. That should make it a memorial day for him indeed.

Various Items.

That the climate is "equal to anything" has been shown with emphasis the past week. On the morning of May 29 the mercury dropped to 38 degrees and in many localities there was frost and ice. To-day (June 2) it has gone up to 90 degrees and the summer campaign seems to have opened.

Trade dragged a good deal the earlier part of last week, but toward its close there was much animation, and Friday and Saturday cleaned up pretty much all offerings in the market.

June opens with a rush, and all kinds of flowers are in request for the numerous weddings to take place to-day and to-morrow. Sweet peas and American Beauties are in most active requisition. Supplies, however, are ample for all purposes, except perhaps of high grade Beauties.

Decoration Day this year is thought to have been more generally observed here in the matter of the floral adornment of graves than probably ever before, and the custom is extending beyond the decoration of the resting places of former soldiers so as to become almost as general as is this memorial usage at Easter. A daily paper says that at one of our cemeteries there were 10,000 visitors during the day. This doubtless will increase the demand for flowers and plants beyond that previously felt.

One of our florists, Conrad Hess, of Waverly, has been growing tomatoes this season with much success. The varieties are Lorillard and Mayflower, and the fruit is abundant, large and well-shaped. The crop is marketed in New York, with results as satisfactory probably as if roses had been produced. Mr. H. has the knack of making pretty much everything succeed that he tries.

BATAVIA, ILL.—McAllister & Co. say that Decoration Day trade was never before so good in the history of their establishment. They sold every plant of any size and their immense stock of geraniums was entirely cleaned out two days prior to Decoration Day. All outdoor flowers were gone, which made the demand for indoor cut flowers great. Every flower, fern or piece of smilax was sold by 10 a. m. of the 30th. Business was fully 100 per cent better than last year.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

The Decoration Day just past brought to florists of this city one of the best week's business in recent years. There were lots of flowers and there were buyers for all of them. Carnations were in good supply and sold well, and most of the wholesale orders increased at the last moment, as a great rush was anticipated. The shortest article was pæonies. The warm weather early in May forced out all the early varieties and about the 25th it turned quite cold and prevented the latest varieties from developing in time for the big day. Now they are in full bloom again, but sell only moderately. Some of the growers had a good stock of a beautiful lavender candytuft which worked up fine into bouquets.

The seventeen-year locust is with us in great force and especially wherever there are many trees in a bunch. The beautiful Crown Hill Cemetery and Woodruff place are alive with them and their loud whirring can be heard for quite a distance from early morning until nightfall. A. B.

THE SCHEDULE of prizes offered by the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society at the annual exhibition to be held Nov. 11 to 15 next, has been issued. Copies may be had by addressing the secretary, David Rust, Horticultural Hall, Broad Street, Philadelphia.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.—The rose and strawberry exhibition of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society will be held Monday afternoon and evening, June 16. Prizes are offered in fourteen classes.

WINCHESTER, VA.—Henry Alden, the well-known florist and landscape gardener, died May 26, as the result of a fall in which he fractured his hip. He was 76 years of age.

THE California State Floral Society issued a very attractive souvenir programme for the annual spring exhibition in the Ferry Building, San Francisco, May 22 to 24.

CANANDAIGUA, N. Y.—Robert McKerr is building three houses, of which two are 20x100 each and one 20x60. He expects to make a specialty of carnations, growing only the very best varieties.

DIXON, ILL.—O. L. Baird reports a very busy spring season. Everything is sold out close. Decoration Day trade was unusually good. At present he is planning for the trip to Asheville.

CRESTON, IOWA.—J. D. Stahl took charge of the Creston Greenhouses on May 12 and since then has been busy cleaning and refitting the houses.

PAWTUCKET, R. I.—A. L. Warner reports that Memorial Day passed off fairly well. The weather has been cool and that helped to some extent.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

The weather still continues to be the all important subject. On May 10th we had a snow storm, a wild, blustering day it was and snow four inches deep on the level, then followed a spell of 90 degrees in the shade, but just before Decoration Day it turned cold for a while, the thermometer going to 32 degrees nearly all night, followed by bright days with sharp winds and rain, and rain, until you can't rest.

In spite of adverse weather conditions the crop of carnations as well as other flowers was never as abundant as this year, nor was the demand ever as great. All the supply was used up, and orders refused, there being nothing to fill them with. Decoration Day was ideal, as far a weather was concerned and the crowds taxed the ability of the greenhouse help to wait on them, particularly in the plant line. Geraninms were the principal plants bought and every plant in town with a flower on and lots without were sold, and they are now scarce, except for some small stuff still in 3-inch. The volume of business done was about 50 per cent on an average more than last year. All did a satisfactory business and are now getting the down town bedding attended to, boxes, hanging baskets, etc., delivered. The replanting of roses has also commenced.

Carnations were 35 and 50 cents per dozen, the latter being the regular price. Roses, $1.00 to $1.25 per doz. Lilies, $1.50 per doz., and Marguerites, 15c per doz. G. F. C.

Cleveland, O.—The J. M. Gasser Co. report the demand for flowers for Decoration Day as unprecedented. Not only was the supply inadequate, but the quality averaged very poor in roses, due to the remarkablo weather changes that preceded the holiday and the attacks of thrips that were developed by the hot spell.

Mt. Sterling, Ky.—Emil Fredrich reports trade here as better than ever before. Nothing left over but empty benches. Many customers had to go back with empty baskets. Mr. Fredrich will add a new house 20x80 this summer, giving him a total of 9,000 feet.

If you don't find what you want in our classified advs. let us know and we will ascertain for you where you may get it.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

Trade Items.

There is great rejoicing in Missouri and Kansas. The cause—a precipitation of five inches of rain. It is fourteen months since we had such a good soaking or even enough rain to thoroughly revive vegetation. The country hereabouts now looks flourishing and the Missouri river, which almost lost itself during the drought, is again filled to overflowing, assuring us of a sufficient water supply for the summer.

The volume of business done here last week was phenomenal and everything that looked like a flower from a potato blossom to the commonest garden rose, was put to some use. We had difficulty in getting enough choice stock for our public school commencement exercises, which were held early in the week, and it is gratifying to the trade that the custom of presenting flowers to the graduates is permitted and gaining in favor here.

Never was the demand so great for Memorial day as this year. We were expecting it and bought accordingly. To give an idea of the quautity of stock sold, there was no less than sixty big boxes of flowers shipped to this market from Chicago on Wednesday and Thursday, with rose orders only partially filled. Brides and Maids were poor and decidedly scarce. We noticed some very good Beauties in Arthur Newell's store which retailed at $10 a dozen. Arthur says he expressed on Wednesday to his country trade eighty-five boxes of flowers, ranging in price from $1 to $5 each. There was the usual call for floral designs, and outdoor material could only be used for such work. From Dallas, Texas, we got several thousand Cape Jasmines which were exceptionally good and helped us out fine.

Social affairs are disappointing and not what we expect at this season of the year.

The recent rains have greatly accelerated the sales on plants, and beddingout can now be done more expeditiously than it was two weeks ago. The contract for planting the parks and the paseo was awarded to W. J. Barnes.

John Vesey, who leased the old Baker greenhouses last fall, has proved his ability as a grower and is still cutting some fine carnations. His bedding stock compares favorably with any in town. Extensive improvements are planned for this summer. John is a hard worker and deserves success.

The learned Ross, who runs a store at 817 Walnut street, now smiles the full length of his counter and tells us he is in business to stay. Mr. Ross carries a large variety of stock and advertises liberally.

D. Friedenthall, who for three years has conducted a flower stand in the Union depot, was obliged to vacate owing to lack of room and is now nicely located across from the depot on Union avenue.

Fred Weber, of St. Louis, has been engaged by Mr. Kellogg to manage his store on Grand avenue.

George Braikenbury, of Pleasant Hill, Mo., has accepted a position with Arthur Newell. H. J. M.

PLYMOUTH, O.—Miss Fannie E. Case reports an excellent Decoration Day trade and business good in general.

THE LAWS OF HEREDITY.

The evolution of all living organisms, plant or animal, depends upon two things—first, the general accepted law that "like begets like," and, second, the subtle modification of this law, which imparts not merely the slight differences which distinguish every individual organism, but also now and again seems to refute the first law altogether, so different are the offspring from the parent. That these modifications are also subject to definite laws is beyond a doubt, since the deeper our insight into natural phenomena the stronger becomes the conviction that law rules throughout, however conflicting the outward results may be. The first cited law by itself would preclude evolution, i. e., development of higher types from lower ones, altogether, while the law of variation without restriction would people the world with a practical chaos of organic life, permitting of no classification at all.

Fortunately a definite restriction is seen in the fact that, however marked may be the "sport" or wide variation which now and again appears, it almost invariably retains the specific or generic character of the parents, i. e., beneath the outward change of form the family features persist. Thus, in a human white community numbering millions, though there may be enough freaks to satisfy the most exacting Barnum, and no two individuals are exactly alike, we shall find no examples of the negro type among their pure-blooded offspring; and so might we raise ten million oaks, and find among them the hundreds of varieties we may see any day in the Kew Arboretum, but never a one would bear anything but acorns, and the search for a sycamore or conifer among their progeny would inevitably be vain. In this sense, therefore, the law that "like begets like" is absolutely without exception so far as families are concerned. Even when the hybridist manages to mingle two diverse species, the resulting offspring are either true to one or the other, or display the joint features of both; but no alien characters appear, and, as Mendel's researches have demonstrated, when they in turn reach the productive stage, if they do so at all, the two families separate themselves to a large degree, and obviously resent the alliance as a permanent one.

With regard to the variation in the offspring which, to revert to humanity, enables us to recognize one individual from another with the greatest ease, this is, of course, accounted for by the fact that the parents are dissimilar as between themselves, so that the offspring represents to a greater or less degree a combination of the parental features; and in plant life we see here how much evolutional developments must depend upon those multiform and marvellous contrivances which exist to secure cross-fertilization, and can understand the correlated standstill or decadence of self-fertilized flowers.

Reproduction, as we know, is accomplished in some low types of life altogether asexually, but never in the higher types, and since, as we have seen, variation is largely due to parental combination, and forms the one essential factor in evolutional adaptation to change, we also see how grand was the far-seeing precision which ordained not merely that like should beget like, but that two individuals should be concerned, instead of simply the one which the few exceptions prove to be sufficient for the mere purpose of multiplication. To this we owe all the marvels of organic nature, animal and vegetable; without it man certainly would never have crowned the edifice, and the world would presumably have been little more than a colony of primordial algae and micro-organisms.—Gardener's Magazine.

MADISON, N. J.—The seventh annual flower show of the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society will be held Nov. 6 and 7 next. The premium list has been issued and copies may be had on application to the secretary, Chas. H. Atkins.

AN EXHIBITION of roses, pæonies, etc., will be held at the New York Botanical Garden, Bronx Park, New York, June 11. A meeting of the Horticultural Society of New York will be held at the same time.

HOPKINSVILLE, KY.—The Crowswood Nurseries state that Wm. F. Snyder is no longer connected with them and that he never occupied the position of manager.

A SEASONABLE HINT.—This is a good time to order a copy of the Florists' Manual, by William Scott, if you do not already have a copy. It costs $5, but contains more matter of real value to florists than a library of other books costing from $50 to $75.

HOLLYHOCKS.

When I was at Aldenham House Gardens last year I was particularly attracted by the singularly fine double hollyhocks Mr. Beckett had growing amidst the shrubs in the large beds and borders in the pleasure grounds. These were all from a sowing made early in the year in warmth, the plants being grown on quickly, singly in pots, and planted out after being well hardened in the spring. I have not seen finer spikes produced by plants raised from seed the same year. Another striking feature of the strain was the very double quality of the flowers, many of them being equal to the best named varieties.

I could not refrain from thinking how easily it should be with the quick mode of production there practised, and the fine quality of the flowers, to resuscitate in popular favor these noble flowers. Here from seed came first class double forms, good enough to please anyone, and so easily raised. By following the method of culture and sowing seed saved from a first class strain, anyone may have glorious double hollyhocks in their gardens. Possibly some credit for the fine spikes seen is due to the deep working and retentive nature of the soil at Aldenham House, but deep worked soil may be had anywhere, and where not so naturally retentive, then liberal waterings and mulchings with manure can greatly aid the plants.

If there be any particular drawbacks to double hollyhocks, it is chiefly found in the comparative limitation in color. The variations are relatively few, as compared with the many, and some of the most beautiful any flowers give, seen in the single varieties. The charm of the singles lies in this exceeding variation, combined with the lightness and grace seen in the flowers. The chief drawback of the single hollyhocks is that the flowers, because of their being so readily fertilized by insects, soon fall. Hence one seldom sees a fine spike of bloom. I have often thought more beauty would be obtained from them if the point of the main spike were pinched out to cause plenty of side shoots to form, as these would then give more free blooming.—A. D., in Gardener's Magazine.

THE NURSERYMEN.

The 27th annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen will be held in Milwaukee June 11, 12 and 13. Headquarters will be at the Plankinton Hotel. A special rate of one and one-third fares for the round trip has been granted by the railroads on the certificate plan. The programme for the meeting includes many valuable papers and there will be the usual trade exhibit and exchanges by those in attendance.

Full details may be had by addressing the secretary, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.

Worcester, Mass.—Mr. O. B. Hadwen, president of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, has presented this city with a piece of land to be used as a park and to be known as Hadwen Park.

New Orleans, La.—The Gardeners' Mutual Protective Association celebrated its 27th anniversary May 11, with a parade and banquet. The members are vegetable gardeners and in the parade all kinds of vegetables were used in decorating the wagons.

GREENHOUSE CHIMNEY.

Please tell me the best kind of a brick stack to build for a small greenhouse of 7,000 square feet of glass. I know the size and height but cannot decide upon the manner of building.

H. H. G.

A chimney for successful heating in connection with 7,000 feet of glass should have a flue area of about 140 inches, or 12x12 inches, extending to a height of about 22 feet above the top of the boiler. The flue opening should be surrounded by 8 inches of brick work its entire height, the bricks being laid close with cement mortar, all joints being cleanly struck both inside and outside. This makes a good, serviceable and durable flue and such as I have used exclusively on small works for the past twenty years.

If desired some form of flue lining may be used. These linings add somewhat to the efficiency of the draft on account of their smooth inside finish; they also allow of a much more careless or cheaper surrounding brick work, as they reduce the tendency of leakage of cold air into the flue between imperfectly jointed brick. In general practice, however, I find a little extra care in the laying of the brick work and the clean striking of interior joints leaves nothing more to be desired.

New York. Henry W. Gibbons.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.

Trade during Memorial week was the best in the annals of floriculture in the city. The supply of roses, carnations and other stock was large and the quality first class, but the demand was so enormous that there was not anything like enough, the supply giving out early on Thursday. Prices all round were good, carnations retailing at 40 to 60 cents per dozen, roses at from $1.50 per dozen up, according to grade. The sales in bedding stock, pot plants, hanging baskets, bouquets, etc., put all previous records in the shade.

The Dunkley Floral Co. report this as their best Memorial Day trade. They were pretty well cleaned out by Friday morning.

G. Van Bochove & Bro., while having the largest cut in their record, had a hard time in satisfying the demands of their ever increasing list of customers.

The reports from the north end of the city are also satisfactory.

Abraham Grofvert, rose grower at G. Van Bochove & Bro.'s, has been in the city hospital for some time. He had to undergo a serious operation for an internal trouble. He is now nearly convalescent and expects to be at his old post in a couple of weeks.

Mr. Wm. Oliver, our landscaper, has just finished laying out the grounds of the Charlevoix Home Association Park at Charlevoix, for which he is receiving great credit. R.

Port Huron, Mich.—C. W. Asman has opened a floral store at 319 Huron avenue.

HERE IS A BUSINESS BOOK FOR BUSINESS MEN

NO SCIENCE BUT LOTS OF PRACTICAL COMMON SENSE.

It don't tell you the botanical classification but it does tell you how to produce marketable plants and cut flowers in the best and cheapest way.

It don't list every plant in cultivation but it does tell you just what you want to know about every plant that there is any money in for a Commercial Florist.

The articles are arranged alphabetically so that when you want to see what Mr. Scott says about Cannas you turn to the Cs and in an instant you have it.

FLORISTS' PUBLISHING CO.

Caxton Building, CHICAGO.

The book treats of over 200 subjects and is freely illustrated with fine half-tone engravings.

It is a book that you need in your business just as you need any other useful labor and money saving implement or device.

The price is $5.00, carriage prepaid.

If you have not already obtained a copy of this book order one now.

If you cannot spare the full price at once, write us for our monthly payment offer.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

Decoration Day.

Decoration Day was more generally observed from a floral standpoint this year and we were pleased to see that the decorations of the monuments in and around New York whilst not what they might have been were at least of a higher degree of good taste than for some years past. There is a wide field for improvement in most lines of public decorations, and it is the duty of every florist to encourage the use of and artistically arrange flowers and plants on every possible occasion.

Paeonias.

In almost all the decorations in honor of the Rochambeau party, pæonies, especially Pæonia officicinalis rubra, formed the greater portion of the material used, and very fine they look in large decorations. The dinner given for them at Delmonico's was remarkable for the flag decorations, that at the Waldorf-Astoria was chiefly of pæonias and was most effective. The centers were huge vases of red pæonias and a heavy irregular garland of the same flower was arranged around the table.

Speaking of pæonias they were never more popular than they are this year and we are glad to see their value as a decorative flower is being recognized. Many florists have no use for a flower that does not bloom all the year around; that's why they can see nothing of value in anything save the rose or carnation. Only when there is a scarcity of these does the beauty of any other flower appeal to their eye and that mainly through their pocket.

There is a great future for pæonias, especially of the delicate colors. We can recommend them for almost any kind of floral work. There is nothing better for large decorations, be it church or house weddings or table decorations, filling in for funeral work, theatrical or large presentation baskets or bunches. The white ones are good for flat funeral bunches, in fact, some of the varieties are beautiful enough in form and color to permit their use in every way or for any event.

June Weddings.

At this time of the year when outdoor flowers are abundant, puny or delicate small flowers are bad material to use. People look for impressive effects, and large showy flowers are the best to use, particularly in all large decorations. If you tie a bunch of six or twelve pæonias on the end of every or every other pew down the center aisle of a church it will go a long way towards making your decorations talkable.

Some still, through grandmother's advice, want white and green decorations, and for these there is an abundance of Lilium Harrisii to be had cheap. Others, of a romantic turn, want wild flowers and for them the fields are full of daisies and clover blossoms, which when mixed look very pretty. Others again want the best and leave it to you to suggest and for these we either use an abundance of carnations or roses.

June weddings should be marked by color. June is the month of roses and they should form a principal part in June decorations. Go out to some nurseryman or grower who has plenty of Crimson Ramblers or other climbing roses, cut them in long branches early in the morning when the dew is on them. You can make the finest of work by arranging them in loose arches or long drooping garlands or sprays. Don't have any stiff effects in June decorations. That may be somewhat excusable when flowers are scarce or expensive, but now you have a plentiful supply of splendid material, even if it be flowering shrubs, grasses, vines or any form of outdoor growth or bloom. A great mistake is often made by florists sending all their best help to decorate the house and all their makeshifts to the church. The church is often a more important place than the house to consider, because more people go there and consequently your work is more criticised.

Bay trees, both standard and pyramidal, are excellent groundwork for an avenue of flowering trees. You can use large roses or pæonias. Just stick them thickly and at irregular heights down through the foliage. They look finely imposing when well done.

The finest flower on the market is Cattleya Gigas. You can safely recommend it to any one wanting the choicest for funeral, bridesmaid's bouquet, wearing flower or general presentation. With a little care people going to Europe may preserve them all the way across. Outdoor roses are somewhat behind time this year, which makes them all the more valuable. Those who can should provide for a crop in July and August. IVERA.

NEW FLORAL DESIGNS.

The accompanying engravings show two new designs by Reed & Keller, New York.

The combination casket cross and victor's wreath should be made up the cross of one color and the wreath of another, to contrast and bring out the best effect.

Each side of the double crescent wreath is made of a different variety of flower and the bottom is tied with a broad bow of ribbon. IVERA.

THE RETAIL STORE.

[Read before the Hartford Florists' Club by J. F. Coombs, May 13.]

It is my opinion that the present season, which is now about at an end, is one of the most prosperous that the florists in this locality have had. Stock of all kinds has been generally good and better prices have been obtained than usual. We note this more especially in the carnations. A year or two ago 35 cents a dozen was considered a good price for them, and even last season a number of these flowers were sold at that price, but this season few were sold for less than 50 cents a dozen and many were sold for 75 cents and $1.00 and sold more readily than those for 35 cents a dozen a few years ago. To be sure the cost is greater to produce these flowers than those that sell at 35 cents, but there is more money in it, and it goes to show that the average customer is willing to pay a better price for good stock.

It seems to me that it is the general rule among florists to give too much credit, by letting accounts run too long and giving credit to people they do not know. I cannot tell the reason for this but it seems to be a failing that the majority of them have. If our business could be run on a cash basis what a fine business it would be; but this is not possible, especially in the business that is conducted on a comparatively large scale, for in many cases you take an order and run the risk of getting your money. For instance if there has been a death in a family and one or more of the members come to order a design or several designs amounting to $10.00 or $25.00 or perhaps more, as the case may be, it happens very often that they do not have the money with them and will ask you to charge it, or perhaps they will walk out without saying anything about the pay, taking it for granted that you will charge it anyway. That is the time you are running the risk; if you refuse the order you may be so much out, for your customer may be good for the amount and pay the next day after the funeral, and on the other hand if you do take the order you may be so much out anyway, but as a rule there is a smaller percentage lost on funeral work than on any other part of the business. If you will try to get your money for funeral work immediately after the funeral, when the people are feeling bad, you are more apt to get it than to let the account run.

My experience is the most difficult person to collect a bill for flowers from is the young man who has been in the habit of sending his lady friend flowers and for some reason they have had a falling out. In a case like this the florist ought to have the credit of sending the flowers, but he does not, as his card is not in the box. This sort of a customer will pay for his flowers at first and then commence to have them charged, and before you know it, or perhaps before he will realize it himself, he has run up a good-sized account and then does not want to pay for the flowers because his girl has gone back on him.

The question has been asked, is it advisable to have lady clerks in a flower store? I should say that it was, if the right kind can be had (though it is hard to find that kind) for the reason that many lady customers would rather trade with them than they would with a man. There are also many customers who think that a lady has more taste in arranging flowers, which I think in many cases is so. They are handy in tying ribbons and have a tendency to keep the store neat and clean, but they cannot demand the salary the man clerk can, for they cannot do the heavy work or work the long hours the men have to, nor is it expected of them. I understand in the western cities there are a number of women florists in business for themselves and conduct it very successfully.

I might say a few words here in regard to advertising. Does advertising pay the retail florist? I should say that a little of it did if it is done in the right way, but how are you going to tell? People are not coming in to tell you that they saw your ad. in such and such a paper. The only way I know of telling is when you advertise some special flower and if you have an unusual demand for the flower advertised it is a pretty good proof your ad. has been read, and I think the only way to advertise if you are going to at all in a city the size of ours, is by the line in the reading notices in the daily papers. General advertising in fair souvenir programmes, dance programmes, church, lodge or college papers are not worth the time it takes to write them, but in many instances the storekeeper feels obliged to take a space because the person who is canvassing for the ad. is one who has left you an order for some flowers sometime previous for the lodge, society or whatever it may be that is going to give the entertainment and is sure to tell you that yours is the only florist's ad. they are going to have in it, and they always give you their work, etc. Of course there are exceptions, for I know of a few instances where an advertisement of this kind has really paid, but I think it is very rare.

I believe that the storekeeper who has the neat store, a good display in his window and an attractive delivery team is the one who is doing the business (and I know that the florists in our city are lack in some of these respects). But this is not all he must necessarily have, for above all he must have a good supply and assortment of fresh flowers in his icebox. If a person is attracted by a fine display in a florist's window they naturally think they can get a good variety of flowers inside, and a storekeeper, in order to hold his trade, should have, if possible, a good assortment of flowers always on hand; and I also think it is more profitable in the end to have a little stock left over at night once in a while than to be sold out early in the day, for if customers go into a store two or three times in succession and find they cannot get what they want, they are liable to go somewhere else for their flowers the next time. I believe that the florists in our city should go in for novelties more than they do, for if something in a flower out of the ordinary is displayed in a window it will attract attention, and serve to a certain extent as an advertisement, and, too, there are people who are looking for something different in flowers as well as in other things and are willing to pay for them.

Probably the hardest part of our business is the long hours, for when you go to work in the morning you do not know what time you will get your dinner, whether you will get any supper or not, or what time you will get through at night or whether you will have to work all night. Our business is not the kind that you can get your orders ready very much ahead of the time they are wanted, especially a funeral order, for the people are not usually dying to accommodate the florists, and when an order of this kind comes in it has to be done in a hurry and the working force has to stay until it is finished.

I will close my paper by telling of a few of the different types of customers we have to deal with. Perhaps the most difficult customer to handle is the one who comes in to order flowers for a funeral and who never purchased any flowers before and who does not know what he or she wants, and who has not the least idea of the cost of flowers. Usually the clerk can tell at once, if he is any way bright, whether his customer is in the habit of purchasing flowers or not, and has to use his own judgment accordingly. The customer who is not in the habit of so doing will approach the clerk something like this: "I want to get something for a funeral." Then you have to find out the best way you can what that something is. Perhaps it may be a design of some kind or a bunch of roses, or a bunch of carnations, or a bunch of something else, or a sheaf of wheat, palm leaves, something made of ivy leaves, or loose flowers, or something that no one ever saw or heard of. Let us suppose, for instance, that you have found out that a design of some kind is what is wanted, then you will begin to show the different sized frames of the different designs, and when the price is asked and you will say that you can make a wreath this size for $3.00 or that size for $5.00, or that cross for $5.00, or this one for $10.00, or that pillow for $5.00 or this one for $8.00, then after you have spent your valuable time in trying to find something to suit your customer, you will very often hear them say, "Have you no design you can make for fifty cents or a dollar?'' Or perhaps they will tell you that they are not ready to decide just yet, they want to consult some of the rest of the family before they will leave their order, and that is the last you ever hear from them.

I have in mind a little incident which happened one day which perhaps would not be out of place to tell here. A woman came in one day and wanted an elegant pillow with the word ''husband'' engraved on it. She mentioned some of the flowers she wanted it composed of, which were roses, carnations, violets, lily of the valley and other flowers, and when she was asked about what price she wanted to pay she said, ''Oh, I guess 75 cents ought to buy a pretty good one, hadn't it?'' I believe she left an order for a $7.00 one before she went out.

How many times a day do we hear the question asked, ''Are these fresh?'' It seems some days as if nine-tenths of the people purchasing cut flowers ask this question, and how much it will make you feel like swearing when a customer will come in for perhaps a dozen roses and you will pick out a dozen of the best you have in stock and when you are about to put them in a box she will say, ''Oh, I don't think I like them, they do not look fresh,'' when perhaps they have not been in the store over half an hour. You will do your best to look pleasant and try to convince her they just came in from the greenhouse, but then they will doubt your word and tell you that they will have some other kind of flowers or that they will look elsewhere.

Then we have the customer who will ask if all the different color Lawson carnations are the same price, and the one who will ask the price of white Jack roses a dozen, and the one who will ask if we keep rain plants, meaning umbrella plants, etc. Now I do not want to have you think that the majority of customers are of this type, for they are not, for there are customers come in who know just what they want and how much they want to pay. These are the ones it is a pleasure to wait on and the ones you try hard to suit.

THE FUTURE.

The cause of the scarcity of really good roses and carnations in summer is that we are trying to grow them under unnatural conditions, and when, with the aid of science, we can create in the rose and carnation house atmospheric conditions similar to those obtained in November, the problem will be solved.

As florists have few opportunities and little time to devote to scientific pursuits, the florists of the future will by concerted action demand and obtain from the federal and state government a modicum of that friendly recognition, encouragement and scientific aid so liberally bestowed on many other industries with far less claim to the infantile title.

We have within our boundaries nearly all the conditions of temperature and attitudes necessary for the successful culture of nearly every plant suitable for florists' use and if the government would extend a little scientific aid along these lines we might successfully raise such plants as azaleas, lilies and all sorts of bulbous stock for winter forcing.

We require no protection. With the newer and more perfect methods of preserving our cut and rapid ocean transit we have confidence in our ability to compete successfully with the European even in his own market.

I am not so satisfied that the demand for roses and carnations during summer will ever be such as to warrant the necessary large outlay if we adopt the refrigerating plan. It is just possible that the public taste in flowers may undergo a change and we may have to cater to a more esthetic taste in the future than in the past. At present roses and carnations are used almost to the exclusion of all other flowers, and while admitting that they are the essence of beauty, they are liable to be overdone and to become nauseating to the cultured mind, for ''spring would be unpleasant weather, if we had nothing else but spring.''

If the public taste demands a more varied bill of fare we have a long list to select from. In the European markets we can see daily displays of heaths, diosmas, ixoras, rondeletias, orchids of all descriptions, and a host of others which are only conspicuous by their absence in the American market. The American florist is brainy enough to create the facilities for growing almost anything the public may demand, and in his march upward and onward he will surmount every obstacle in his endeavor to reach the goal. RIBES.

The article under this heading published in the ''REVIEW'' of May 22nd, page 909, certainly provides food for thought regarding the possibilities of the business of cut-flower growing in the future, but to some of us hesitating souls does it not appear to be possibilities only, rather than probabilities.

It is granted that at times during the summer season in many of our markets there is a decided scarcity of good flowers, and it is frequently almost impossible to get roses or carnations at that season of such quality as would pass muster in the winter. But is it not also true that with the growth of the summer vacation habit there is a corresponding decrease in the demand for good flowers, this decrease in demand being so marked in some places that we find the retail men seriously considering whether it would not be good policy to close their stores entirely for a few weeks in summer, and to join with the general public in the enjoyment of a well-earned vacation.

That it is possible to regulate the temperature of a greenhouse by artificial means I am quite willing to admit, but that sterilized air will prove equally beneficial for vegetable growth with the pure natural air of the country, is by no means clear to me as yet. Then there is that very important question of expense, it being a well-known fact that preminent capitalists are few and far between in the ranks of the growers, for while we do hear of some lights of the retail trade and a favored few among the bondholders of the commission business that indulge in frequent trips to Europe, yet we are more likely to find the growers scratching around in the sun during the beautiful days of June, July and August, and wondering whether the last coal strike will indicate a rise of more than $2.00 per ton the following winter.

But putting jest aside, it does not appear to the writer that the trade in summer will warrant such an outlay, for appliances of the character indicated in the REVIEW run into money very rapidly.

The matter of shading, is, however, one that deserves more consideration, for up to the present time it is hard to find any substance that is entirely satisfactory, from the fact that the perfect material for this purpose must be cheap, easy to apply, easy to remove when the sun loses power, and yet not washing off with every rain, else the time occupied in applying it will more than offset the saving in original cost.

I have not tested an alum wash for this purpose, but this substance being soluble in water it would seem that it should be mixed with something else to give the wash more substance or body, and also to make it reasonably weather proof. There would doubtless be a market for a preparation of this character, for the large majority of growers require more or less of shading material each season, and would be glad to buy a reliable preparation. W. H. TAPLIN.

Editor Florists' Review: I have read your able article on this subject and the comments of Messrs. C. T. and Joseph Heacock. The use of solid beds and side ventilation are doing much toward improving indoor cut flowers in hot weather; alum as you suggest, or some other shading will help. It is doubtful whether the demand during the summer season will warrant any great outlay. I am inclined to think that a larger field for profitable efforts will be found in the month immediately preceding Lent.

J. W. Young.

Editor Review: Your article entitled "The Future" in the May 22nd issue certainly has some very good points in it and they are inclined to set one to thinking. We all have to think ahead and look into the future as far as we can and every one knows that the men who are able to guess what is to be in demand next season have a great advantage over those of us whose foresight is not so well developed.

As to the practicability of your suggestions of course we cannot say until some one gets up enough courage to experiment along those lines. If we were able to keep the temperature in our carnation houses down to March or April temperature during the entire summer it certainly would be worth much to us, but who is going to find out for us just how it should be done? It will take a lot of money not only in fitting up the apparatus, but in loss of crops as well until the thing is perfected enough to be a benefit to the plants. And if it is worked out to the satisfaction of our growers there will be few places of any pretension without at least part of the houses fitted up in such a manner in a short time. We shall certainly try your suggestion of shading with alum and if it does not prove too expensive it may be a good thing. We shall try some put on cold first to see how it stands the weather. It may stick too tight if applied hot.

While our summer flowers have not increased in quality as rapidly as has the demand for them, yet at the same time you must admit that we have much better flowers nowadays during July and August than we did ten years ago. While our methods of growing them have improved we must not forget our hybridists who have given us varieties that stand the heat better than the older varieties. For instance in roses we have now Maman Cochet and its white sport, which will produce almost as fine blooms during the summer as Bride and Maid produce in the winter, and in carnations we have Crocker and Fl. Hill, from which we can cut fine blooms all summer if we choose to handle them properly. That these will be improved upon we have no doubt, and that other colors will be added to that class is just as certain. I really believe that there is as great a future in store for the hybridist as there is for the refrigerator man. A. F. J. Baur.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Palms.

Your sales and planting will soon be over and you will have time to draw your breath if not your cheque, and take care of what is left over. We all have more or less of good-sized palms that we use for decorating and are not anxious to dispose of them unless a good price is obtained. What is the best thing to do with them during the next three months of warm weather? If you have a large airy house and the means of shading when necessary and no shade when not necessary, then they are about as well left under glass, and better still if you want an increase of growth, but if you have no better place than a heavily shaded house with but a limited ventilation it is better to stand these large palms out of doors.

Providing you are sure that the pots and tubs have drainage it is a great advantage to sink them in the ground nearly to the rim of the pot. It is, as we all know, the evaporation from the sides of the pots that dries up the soil. If they can't be sunk in the ground then some material can be thrown round the pots. The best of all palms will burn in the sun if allowed to get dry at the roots, but not otherwise. It will also burn if it has been grown in a very warm shaded house, because the leaves are soft, but a kentia that has not been in over 65 degrees during winter and has had plenty of light will not burn, and a few months out of doors gives them a toughness and hardiness that fits them well for next winter's campaign.

The large palms and decorative plants that should go out of doors are the kentias, latanias, phœnix of all kinds, Pandanus utilis and Veitchii, Ficus elastica, Cycas revoluta and overgrown Araucaria excelsa, if you are unfortunate enough to have any of the latter, which are like little pigs—very cute when young but unsightly when six feet long unless kept in splendid order, and that you can hardly do kept in a pot or tub. (I dropped care of the pig at two weeks.) Areca lutescens, the most graceful of all our decorative palms, should be kept indoors. The sun and wind does not agree with it. As good a time as any to shift these plants, if necessary, is when you are moving them out, only a little more care and judgment is needed in watering afterwards for a month or two.

We all know that plants that we have to lug around in a wagon during winter, perhaps in zero weather, should be in as small a pot or tub as they will grow in or exist in, but unless they have some new material as their roots get crowded they will show the effects by loss of color. The arecas must have root room and if it were not for making the tub too bulky will do well with a liberal shift, and so will the latanias. The kentias will thrive and make very handsome plants in comparatively small pots, but even they must be given more room every two or three years. Palms form a great mass of roots at the bottom of the tub without a particle of soil among them. Supposing a kentia badly needed shifting and it was in a 12-inch pot, there would be found three inches of solid roots at the bottom of the pot. Now two inches of these roots could be cut square off at the bottom with a sharp hatchet and do the plant no harm; considerable old soil can be loosened away from the sides without disturbing the roots, and an inch or so can be taken from the top of the ball, so you can by these means give these palms a good deal of fresh earth without greatly increasing the size of the tub.

I would just say here that if you have been interfering much with the roots you had better not expose them to the full sun for a few weeks. If a shift is not necessary then merely pick out what soil you can off top of ball and mulch with two inches of half decayed cow manure, to which you can add a 5-inch pot of bone dust to every bushel of manure. It keeps them from drying out and they feed on it. Time was when it was thought quite wrong to give animal manure to palms, ferns or coniferous trees. Now we know they all like it.

Rubbers.

Many growers now plant out their young rubbers and it is a fine way to get a sturdy, strong plant. Young plants a foot high with the top pinched out and planted out now will make fine branching plants by the end of September, and lift without losing a leaf. The soil should be a good, well manured, loam and within reach of the hose. Did it ever occur to you that plants of many kinds that we think want this or that kind of particular soil under glass will grow finely in almost any quality of soil when planted out of doors? Undoubtedly most plants have their preference for different soils, but it proves that soil is only a small part of the business compared to light and pure air and the rest of the blessings that plants and animals (including ourselves) gain from "out of doors." But aside from anything that the soil contains, texture of it is important to us, and those that have a good friable loam that will always wet or dry, fall easily into small particles, are fortunate, for in lifting plants from the ground, like rubbers I have just spoken of, or our familiar carnations, you get all the roots and fibers without a cumbersome lump of soil which, in reducing to the required size, carries with it the best roots as a clay and some kinds of sand do.

Ferns.

There is no wane in the popularity of that most useful plant, the Boston fern, and won't be until Nephrolepis Piersoni becomes common, and that will be three years hence. Excuse me, Mr. Editor, commenting on this wonderful fern, which I had the good fortune to see almost in its cradle a year ago last October. The mother plant was then at Tarrytown and a score or two of its babies. There is no mistake about this fern, it's a gem, and if as easily grown as Bostoniensis will soon be the whole thing. It's a gem and although pure good fortune, and not science and not skill, is to be thanked for its production, the lucky proprietor is to be congratulated.

New Carnation Empire State.

You can't very well be overdone with the useful Boston fern and every little runner or small plant you possess should be planted out in five or six inches of good rich soil on a bench. Perhaps a little shade is best for these young plants during the summer months, but get it off early in the fall. You will have plants of this fern larger than two inches that you want to make fine plants by next November. These are better kept in pots plunged on a bench and given the full sun or only the slightest shade. It is a mistake to keep this fern under a heavy shade; the plants grown under the full light are much better in every way. WILLIAM SCOTT.

NEW CARNATION EMPIRE STATE.

We present herewith a cut of a vase of Empire State, L. E. Marquisee's new white seedling carnation. Mr. Marquisee writes us as follows regarding it:

"It was originated three years ago and will be disseminated next year. It is a pure white of beautiful form, very full and double with serrated edges and possesses an exceptionally strong clove fragrance. In size it will easily average three and one-half inches in diameter and often four inches. At the present writing, May 26th, its flowers measure three inches. It has unusual substance and is a remarkably good keeper. Its calyx has the correct form and measures seven-eighths to one inch in diameter. It has a strong stem which properly supports the flower. It is without exception by far the strongest and most robust grower we have ever seen. It has the ideal habit, produces no grass, but a constant succession of strong flowering shoots. It is therefore a free and continuous bloomer."

It was awarded certificate by the Carnation Society and has been certificated wherever shown.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

Now that planting is in full swing, those houses which were planted early are apt to be neglected during the rush, and beyond the regular watering, syringing and ventilating, in many cases they are left to look out for themselves.

Cultivating regularly should under no circumstances be omitted, as without this encouragement during hot weather the plants will come almost to a standstill, which is the preliminary to going back.

Staking and tying should also be attended to, every branch and stem should be tied separately and neatly and kept sufficiently apart to admit the free circulation of air among the foliage. If allowed to scramble over the bench the wood becomes thin, the eyes break weak and produce a thicket of blind wood, which makes a safe shelter for red spider, as it will be next to impossible to reach them with the syringe under such conditions.

Beauties which have now made some growth should be gone over, and where necessary have the tops cut out in order to make them bushy, cut off all buds as soon as they show color, and keep a strict lookout for spider and mildew. Spider is likely to attack the leaves at the base of the plant, as it is difficult to dislodge them from there with the syringe. As soon as the plants have attained a height of 15 or 18 inches these leaves can be stripped off as it is there that black spot usually starts. Every leaf showing signs of this trouble should be picked off and destroyed. RIBES.

THE HARDINESS OF THE PAEONY.

Prof. Nansen, of the Agricultural College of South Dakota, speaks in the highest terms of this flower. He says it will grow anywhere that pie-plant will. From my own experience it is much hardier than pie-plant. This year I had occasion to move both after they were well leaved out and buds were set on the pæonies. We had to strip the leaves from the pie-plant, but with every precaution half of them died, while all of the pæonies lived.

One fall I had occasion to cut up quite a lot for planting and, of course, some small roots were left on the ground. To my amazement, in the spring, after freezing and thawing all winter, I noticed a lot of tiny buds so small as to escape notice putting out leaves and throwing out little rootlets. Of course I took care of them and they are now doing well.

One fall I had some in an out-cellar but slightly packed, intending to keep them cool until spring. Someone left the cellar door open and they froze solid and remained so a month. I closed the door and let the frost come out gradually and I never lost a root. Last October in order to test them I planted thirty buds of the fragrant rose. There was not a root on them. I put them about two inches deep. Now there are twenty-seven vigorous plants and probably the three others are lying dormant to come up the next year.

The most remarkable experience was with a lot I got from England. By some mistake they lay a month in the express office. They were a fine lot; some were $2.50 a root in England. When I found them the box was shrunken from being in a dry, hot office, the moss was dry as powder, the roots were dead and the buds all dried up. The roots snapped like sticks and were black and worthless. I made the company pay for damages, but as a forlorn hope I took them home, cut the roots off and planted just the shrunken buds in moist earth in the cellar. In a month I found every one alive. The buds had swollen into life and were throwing out tiny roots. It was in December I planted them out and let them freeze solid all winter, but every one woke up in the spring and one of them bloomed. It took an extra year to form new roots but they were saved. They were like the Mexican resurrection plant.

Last spring by mistake two valuable La Tulipe pæonies were left two months in the barn, where they became very dry, and it did not seem possible for them to live, but I planted them out, watered them well and they are doing nicely.

These flowers are the hope of the great, bleak Northwest. I have the most encouraging reports from Manitoba, the Dakotas and Minnesota. They thrive well and bloom beautifully in all that region. Last fall I visited friends in Minnesota and took up and planted some old clumps for them. I found that the terrible winter of a few years ago had killed the buds, but the vigorous roots had sent out another set. It is well in that northern region to put on a mulch of old manure about four inches thick and let the plants grow up through it.

Last winter most of my roses were killed to the ground, but not a pæony was hurt. They defy hail, blizzards and hot winds and are the flower of the future. C. S. Harrison.

NEW YORK.

Club Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club was held at Civic Hall, 128 East 28th street, on Monday night. Walter Sheridan presided and in the absence of Secretary John Young, Alex Wallace acted as secretary. It was decided that the regular meetings of the club be held at above address until such time as the club can locate for the winter season. It might be well to remark that the club's old quarters at 27th street and Broadway, have changed hands and like unto Boston and Philadelphia some millionaire enthusiast might open his heart and his purse and provide the florists in New York a home.

The several committees reported progress, the outing committee especially encouragingly as to the club's outing and games on July 7th. This affords a splendid opportunity for employers to reward worthy employes. The only thing to think about is that it costs just as much to go in harness as singly. The club seems to be an ardent advocate of matrimony.

The Flower Market, Berlin, Germany.

Charles Weathered reported for the committee on new membership and his report occasioned quite an interesting debate. It was finally suggested to the committee that associate members be admitted to the club on payment of $2.00 a year dues and no initiation fee.. It might be incidentally remarked that there are a vast number of retailers and others who yearn to be members of some New York club and who cannot afford, not the dues but the incidentals connected with travels and club meetings and who won't be classed as associate members. Might be well to think it over, gentlemen.

Messrs. O'Mara, Weathered and Wallace were appointed a committee to suitably express the club's feelings over the lamented death of the secretary's father, Thomas Young, Sr. It was decided that the secretary notify the trade press and the secretaries of the several horticultural societies and clubs in this section of the time and place and subject to be discussed at the regular meetings of the club.

C. W. Ward, of the Cottage Gardens, L. I., was the hero of the meeting. He had been announced to have an exhibit of pæonies from his nurseries at Queens. Mr. Ward is extensively experimenting in pæonies and has gathered together some 300 varieties from all parts of the world. Unfortunately, owing to the severe storm here on Sunday the intended exhibition blooms were destroyed. However, he had a very fine exhibit at the club meeting and they were greatly admired. Quite a discussion followed, which we will speak of next week. Mr. Ward was awarded a cultural certificate for his exhibit, also a hearty vote of thanks. C. Weinberg, of Woodside, was awarded honorable mention for new Costa Rican bilbergias, and Beaulieu, of Woodhaven, same for pansies, dahlias and roses.

The transportation committee, Messrs. Wallace, Langjahr and Lang, are perfecting arrangements for the trip to the "Land of the Sky," and Capt. Lang is to have a special meeting of the bowlers at the old alleys next Monday and thereafter will drill his team on strange alleys. Capt. Lang suggests that an individual trophy be rolled for by the two or three best bowlers at the convention, the winner to be the champion bowler of the florists. Ivera.

The wholesale cut flower market is glutted and has been for a week past. Pæonias, sweet peas and all the ordinary summer blooms are in profusion everywhere. The ice boxes overflow. The rose and carnation markets are overwhelmed by the enormous supplies. The street merchants and even the big retailers have signs out showing excellent stock at 10 cents per dozen. In weddings and large decorations there is nothing doing.

Today (Wednesday) the June meeting of the New York Horticultural Society takes place at the Botanical Museum, Bronx Park. The president, Mr. Wood, delivers an address on "Horticultural Prospects." The museum, laboratories, herbarium and library are open as usual for inspection, and the usual exhibition of plants, flowers, etc., will be held in connection with the meeting.

Miss Belle Siebrecht, only daughter of Henry Siebrecht, Sr., of New Rochelle, was married Wednesday evening, June 4, amidst floral decorations in keeping with the abundant facilities in and around the great establishment of the firm of which her father is the head. The young lady is a charming girl with hosts of friends and good wishes from all who know her follow her as she begins the "voyage of life."

A call was issued to Brooklyn and Long Island florists for a meeting on June 10th with the view of forming a temporary association to make suitable preparations for the meeting of the American Carnation Society to be held in Brooklyn next February.

We have two unusual plagues this season. One is the 17-year locust, which threatens serious damage to outdoor vegetation, and the other is the soft coal nuisance, resulting from the scarcity of anthracite coal, due to the miners' strike. The deposits of soot on the glass roofs and on trees and plants is very depressing.

Marshall Clark, of David Clark's Sons, Brooklyn, N. Y., whose attack of appendicitis was very severe, is now convalescing, although he is unable yet to leave his bed. His ultimate recovery however is assured.

Rudolph Asmus, of New Durham, has had a very bad attack of pneumonia and his friends have been very anxious. At last accounts he was improving.

Louis Schmutz, Sr., whose legs were broken some weeks ago, is recovering rapidly.

The Southern R. R. has signalized its liberality and enterprise and its desire to make the S. A. F. convention at Asheville a great success, by granting a single-fare rate from any of its principal points, including New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Baltimore, Louisville and St. Louis to "the city above the clouds" and return. The Bostonians, New Yorkers and Philadelphians will doubtless arrange to meet at Washington and take a special train from that point in time to view the glorious scenery during the daylight of Monday, and in ample time to be comfortably settled and asleep at the respectably early hour observed by our southern brethren.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Weddings and commencements give a great deal of work to the retailers for three or four days each week. They have plenty of good material to draw upon. Outdoor sweet peas are very useful in many ways, especially for bouquets. Other outdoor flowers form a welcome addition to the staple sorts. Coreopsis and cornflowers are plentiful. Outdoor roses made but slight impression on the market this season, very few being seen. Beauties sell freely at from $1.50 to $3 per doz. for the long-stemmed; Brides, Maids and Meteors, $4 to $6 per 100; good ones are not over-plentiful; Kaiserins, $5 to $8 per 100, are now preferred to Brides, though easily bruised when not handled carefully. Carnations are still fine but in over-supply. Ordinary grades bring 75 cents to $1; choice blooms, $1.50 to $2. Some of the latter, when two or three days old, are retailed on the street at 10 cents per doz. Valley is good and very plentiful. Price ranges from $2 to $4 per 100. Greens are moving very slowly, especially smilax, which brings $12.50 to $15 per 100 strings.

Notes.

The great annual tearing out and replanting of rose houses has begun, many of the growers preferring to make a good start for next season, rather than put more time on stock that is exhausted.

Adolph Fahrenwald, of Hillside, will plant three houses with Liberty this season. The rose cup that he won at the New York show may be seen in the trophy case in the club room.

John Holt, late manager for Mrs. A. M. Baumann, has purchased the plant of Dr. E. L. German at North Wales, containing five or six greenhouses devoted to tomatoes. Mr. Holt will put the place in good shape and will grow a miscellaneous collection of plants, chiefly for the North Wales and Ambler markets.

Mrs. Plender will sail for Europe June 19.

Charles B. Stahl figured prominently in two events last week—one sad, the other happy. He was slightly hurt in a runaway accident on South street bridge; later he was married.

Fred. Ehret and Rupert Kienle will sail for Europe June 21.

Edward Reid has a very comprehensive telegraphic code of his own invention which his customers have used successfully for several years. This code is copyrighted; by its aid a dispatch of five or six words will order several good-sized boxes of flowers.

The June meeting of the Germantown Horticultural Society was addressed by Albert Woltemate on Monday evening.

Niermann & De Buys, 1619 North 5th street, have gone into the manufacture and sale of artificial plants. PHIL.

IN BERLIN.

We present herewith two interesting pictures we have reproduced from Meeller's Deutsche Gaertner Zeitung. One gives a view in the flower market hall, where immense quantities of flowers and plants are disposed of daily, and the other shows the exterior and display window of one of the leading retail florists of the great German city.

BOSTON.

The Market.

There is rather more business than usual at this time of year and much more than the usual supply of material for it, so if there is a gain for anyone it would seem to go to the retailer. The demand seems to be for best material obtainable, indicating wedding affairs, and keeping fairly good prices upon A1 goods, while poor material generally goes at a very low figure.

There is a feeling of a coming lull in so heavy a cut which may materialize even before this meets your eye, especially since there is an unseasonable change in the weather. It is not often that floral prices and the thermometer drop at the same time, but it was so in this case.

Lilies, the only scarce item at Memorial day, are now even more plentiful than anything else and can be bought anywhere from 4 to 8 cents. Roses are demanding anywhere from ½ cent up to 8 or perhaps 10 cents except in the case of Beauties, where the limit is 25 cents. Pinks being at ½ cent also, for quite good ones, and barely arrive at 3 cents for very fancy. Spirea is the only plentiful fine white, and there is not a large variety just now to be found. Sweet peas are not so plentiful as they were, not so good in quality and lower in price.

G. W. Ayer, of Wilmington, deserves the credit of bringing in the first asters of the season—two.

Rumors.

The Waban Rose Co.'s employes have formed a base ball team which hereby challenges any other floral team of New England. Dell Cartwright is pitcher, and Robert Dunn manager. "These who live in glass houses must not throw stones"; but this, perhaps, need not apply to those who earn a living in glass houses not throwing base balls.

There is a lively little vendetta started in the Italian branch of our street trade. "Mike Italy" accused "Macaroni" of "pinching" flowers. Macaroni struck Mr. Italy in the back of the neck and "ran away to fight some other day!" And Mike says Mac must fight some other day, too.

Elliott's salesman, Huston, must have heard it was the proper thing to "dump" a few roses, so he dumped his whole team into a trench where a gang of Italians were laying water pipes near Galvin's Back Bay store. These same laborers came in very handy to straighten things up, too. J. S. MANTER.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Good roses are still short of the demand, and the best command $5 to $6 with some special selects reaching $7. On the poorest the price reaches down to $1, and they are to be had in great quantities. Beauties are decidedly scarce and the best bring $3 a dozen readily, the shorter lengths grading down by the usual scale.

Carnations are more plentiful than roses but there are none too many good ones, especially in white, though there are oceans of poor ones. The best are quoted at $1 to $2 and from that down to 10 cents a bunch for the "punk" stock.

Good pæonias are in good demand at 75 cents a bunch, but there is a lot of poor stuff in the market that won't move at any price. Some very good flowers are seen, but it is certainly a fact that pæonias have averaged poorer in quality than in other years, which is undoubtedly due to the violent fluctuations in temperature and heavy rains we have had this spring.

Lots of sweet peas are being received and prices are moderate, 25 to 50 cents a hundred being about the range for good stock.

Shipping demand continues satisfactory for the season, and it is evident that in other cities the school graduates are receiving flowers as usual, and that the annual crop of June weddings is being reaped.

New wood ferns from Michigan are being received in quantity now and they are improving in quality, being better hardened up.

Various Items.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club was held Wednesday evening. This was the last one for the winter season, and now come the summer outings.

Fire destroyed a boiler shed and broke forty or fifty boxes of glass on the adjoining greenhouses at the establishment of Peter Reinberg on Sunday. The origin of the fire is unknown. It was a lively one while it lasted.

Hugh Woell, a shipping clerk at Bassett & Washburn's, had his foot crushed in the elevator last Saturday. He was taken to the Alexian Brothers' Hospital, and the results now promise to be less serious than was at first feared.

Flint Kennicott's daughter graduated from the Auditorium Conservatory of Music last Tuesday night, and it is needless to say that this graduate received an abundance of flowers.

Wietor Bros. are cutting a lot of fine Beauties from young plants in their early planted houses.

John C. Chase, Derry, N. H., was a visitor this week.

A meeting of the retail florists was called for Tuesday afternoon to advise as to the premiums to be offered for floral arrangements at the annual fall show.

ST. LOUIS.

Trade Conditions.

The market the past week was rather quiet with the supply slightly exceeding the demand. Several of the West End florists report orders ahead this week for weddings and school graduates, and no doubt there will be a good call for stock of all kinds.

Roses are in fair demand but the stock is becoming poorer every day, although occasionally a lot of good stuff is seen from our local growers. Fred Ammann is still sending in some extra fine long Beauties which are selling well. Carnations, too, had a good call, but stock is fast becoming small and about the only good stock that comes in now is Flora Hill and Triumph. White Cloud is good but small. Sweet peas are very plentiful and are exceedingly fine in quality, with fairly long stems and all colors.

Prices have gone down somewhat since the Decoration Day scarcity. Good roses bring from $3 to $6 per 100 and down as low as $1 for poor stuff; the bulk of the Brides and Maids are of poor quality. Beauties, long, bring from $2 to $2.50 per dozen; shorts from $3 to $6 per 100. Carnations are down to $1.50 for the best, but the bulk bring only $1 per 100. Sweet peas go at 25 cents per 100, but can be bought at $2 in 1,000 lots and will be below that price by the end of the week if stock keeps coming in as it is at present. Candidums can be bought at from $5 to $8 per 100 stalks, although some large stalks went as high as 10 cents each. Cornflowers are 25 cents and capes go at 50 cents per 100.

Trade in bedding plants is about over and some varieties are all sold out and others are getting scarce. The ground is in splendid condition for planting just now, as we have had some good rains.

Notes.

Mr. Chas. Weeks, late with the South Park Floral Co., New Castle, Ind., was a visitor and called on the trade. Mr. Weeks is taking a few months' rest for his health and expects to return to New Castle.

James H. Wilson, secretary of agriculture, accompanied by Dr. B. F. Galloway, chief of the bureau of plant industry, at Washington, were visitors the past week. In visiting the Merchants' Exchange Mr. Wilson was introduced to the members by President Tansey as "The chief farmer of the United States." Mr. Wilson and Mr. Galloway visited the World's Fair site to inspect the grounds set aside for the government display. Both expressed great surprise at the progress made and were well pleased with their trip.

The Count and Countess De Rochambeau and the French delegation who visited St. Louis the past week were loaded down with many large, beautiful bouquets of American Beauties on entering the Union station Thursday morning. The entire delegation were guests of the World's Fair committees.

The St. Louis florists should not forget the date set for the June club meeting and smoker. All florists are invited to share with us the good time that is in store for us on June 19. The meeting is to open at 2 o'clock promptly in the Commercial Club rooms. Those who have not paid their assessments to the World's Fair fund should not fail to attend, as this matter will be disposed of at this meeting. The trustees are also expected to report about the summer outing of the club and the place it is to be held. So let all our members and brother florists set aside next Thursday afternoon for a good time and make this the banner meeting of the year.

It has been rumored that Mr. Wm. Hucke, of Belleville, has bought a strip of land in East St. Louis on which he will build a range of greenhouses for roses and carnations for the St. Louis market.

President Fred Meinhardt has been so busy at his place of late that he is almost a stranger to us and an introduction will probably be necessary on June 19.

George Ostertag, who very seldom comes downtown, reports that they have been very busy the past week with luncheons and weddings, also had the Hosmer Hall decorations, and have both high schools for this week.

It has been reported that a good delegation of seedsmen will go from here to attend the twentieth annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association, which will meet this year at Minneapolis, Minn., June 24 to 26.

Lincoln Coles, son of Walter W. Coles, of Kokomo, Ind., was a visitor the past week.

Joe Fleischman, of New York and Chicago, was in town and it is rumored that he will open one of his elegant floral establishments on Broadway, this city, next fall.

Henry Johann, of Collinsville, Ill., was in town the past week buying supplies. Mr. Johann is well pleased with the past season.

Fred C. Weber reports two large dinners at the St. Louis Club the past week, at one of which 10,000 daisies were used and at the other 200 extra choice Beauties. He also reports plenty of funeral work to open up with for this week.

Bowling.

On Monday, June 9, the bowling club started its June series of 12 games with two scratch men, Ellison and Sturtz. Our new man, A. Meyer, rolled good games. Fred Weber was high man of the night and Meyer second. C. C. Sander made his appearance but rolled only one game. The handicaps are somewhat different, Sturtz lost 15 and Miller, Kuehn and Beneke lost 5, the rest remained the same as last month. The scores of the night were as follows:

	H.	1.	2.	3.	Total.
Fred Weber	35	210	147	178	535
A. Meyer	15	128	204	202	534
J. J. Beneke	10	169	185	163	517
C. A. Kuehn	6	177	167	167	511
Theo. Miller	30	165	183	155	503
A. Y. Ellison	0	168	180	144	492
J. Sturtz	0	158	179	146	483
F. M. Ellis	35	168	136	153	457

BALTIMORE.

In this quarter we have had another change in the weather, after a copious rain precipitation and a day of high wind the thermometer this morning (June 9) marking 46 degrees. The downfall was general and much benefit was done the thirsting crops. Today is an ideal one of summer loveliness, but with a touch of almost autumnal chilliness in the air. Doubtless we will soon be bravely over this.

The volume of trade steadily declines, as is natural. There is some demand for good roses and carnations, but the bulk of those reaching the market go to the hands of the street venders. Weddings were numerous the past week, but the resulting demand for flowers made no great impression on the market. More or less commencements are still to come, but the summer exodus of people has begun and the demand for cut-flowers will now be limited pretty much to funeral requirements.

The changes made at the establishment of Isaac H. Moss at Govanstown show up now very effectively. The greenhouses on the east side of the York road have been raised and the office removed across the way, giving breadth and dignity to the dwelling, which is handsomely surrounded with fine plants and tasteful bedding.

R.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Trade is holding up remarkably well and June is proving to be one of the best months in the history of the florists' business in this city. The demand for all kinds of flowers is very good with roses first on the list and good ones are very scarce. There are a great many roses to be seen everywhere, but such little, dried-up, brown looking things are very hard to sell. Really good roses it is almost impossible to obtain; especially is this true of Brides. This rose is so liable to arrive all bruised and brown that many times buds that were undoubtedly A1 for this time of year when shipped, are unsalable when they are taken out of the shipping boxes. So too much care can not be taken in packing them so that they will arrive in the best possible condition. Maids always arrive in better condition as they do not show the effects of bad packing and rough handling as readily. The supply of Maids is much larger than that of Brides. Some very good Kaiserins are to be had and they easily take the place of Brides. Liberty is still coming in large quantities and there are a great many really good Golden Gates to be had. Best stocks in roses bring 5 to 6 cents, with seconds and thirds at 2 to 3 cents and less.

Carnations are in very large supply, especially the poorer grades, and at times they are very hard to move at a good figure. They sell at from 50 cents for the poorest to $1 and $1.50 for the best. Some fancy varieties, of which there are a few to be had, sell well and bring $2 per 100. This grade of carnation is holding out very well this spring both as to color and size, and they are the kind that sell, for they are always sold out first.

A few good pæonies are still to be had; they bring 4 cents. Some very nice sweet peas are being shipped in from out of town; they sell readily at 50 cents per 100.

New eastern ferns will be in this week and will bring $1.50 per 100. There is a great deal of first-class smilax around at $15 per 100, also some fine asparagus in bunches and strings at 50 cents each.

A CHRYSANTHEMUM SHELTER.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of a chrysanthemum shelter used by Mrs. G. J. Starr, the florist of Wilson, N. C. In the mild climate of North Carolina such slight protection is all that is necessary to carry the plants through till the blooms are perfected. And we have seen some very good blooms grown in the north under similar protection, which is very like what John Thorpe used to call a "chrysanthemum snug harbor."

As is well known, the Japanese produce their specimen plants and blooms under paper-roofed houses. Couldn't some of the chrysanthemum weaknesses be avoided should we do the same? We have been in some chrysanthemum houses in mid-summer that were hot enough to make one sympathize with the poor plants and wonder that they didn't die at once of heat and suffocation. Of course first class blooms were not cut from them afterward, but in spite of all the advice as to ventilation a comparatively cool and airy greenhouse in summer is the exception rather than the rule.

YOU WILL find all the best offers all the time in our classified advs.

DAY LILIES.

The Hemerocallis or Day Lilies must be numbered amongst the most charming subjects in our herbaceous borders, even though the flowers are of such an ephemeral nature as to fully warrant the appellation of "The Lily of a Day." The flowers, though so fugitive, are produced in such profusion under favorable conditions as to render the blooming period of quite long duration. The buds open in constant succession, especially if a little attention be given to the removal of the faded flowers.

Let us inquire for a moment what these favorable conditions are. Briefly stated, a rich yet fairly light soil and a semi-shaded border fulfil their requirements. These requirements are evident from the fact that in most cases the failures to flower these subjects satisfactorily are due to dry, shallow, impoverished soils and exposed situations. Where planting in such soils is imperative, plenty of well-decayed manure should be well incorporated previous to planting, afterwards applying a liberal mulching as occasion requires.

In rich borders Day Lilies not only flower profusely, but make rapid growth and lend themselves to ready increase by division, though to ensure a good effect they should be grown in clumps or bold masses with plenty of space between. They should also be lifted triennially, when a change of position is frequently of benefit.

The genus Hemerocallis is by no means a large one at present, as several species formerly classified as such are now referred to the allied funkias. Hybrids or cultural varieties have hitherto been few until recently. Mr. G. Yeld, of York, has turned his attention to these subjects, and with much success. He commenced by crossing H. Thunbergi and the single H. disticha, producing and placing in commerce Apricot, color as named; Flame, outer petals bright maroon-orange on the back of each, attains the height of 18 inches; Estmere, similar to last named, vigorous.

Of the true species in cultivation we have the following: H. Dumortieri (syns., H. rutilans and H. Sieboldi), from Japan, with flowers of a rich yellow color, bronzy orange on the exterior, 18 inches high; H. flava, sweetly scented, clear, full yellow, flowering in June. It attains a height of two feet. The following bloom during July and August, viz.: H. fulva, coppery orange, crimson shadings, tall grower, very fine; H. f. variegata, beautifully variegated silver foliage; H. disticha fl.-pl., large, handsome, semi-double flowers of rich orange-crimson, broad foliage; H. Thunbergi, fragrant golden yellow flowers, 1½ feet high; H. Middendorfiana, orange-yellow with chocolate exterior, twelve inches; H. Kwanso fl.-pl., orange, shaded and netted with crimson, very robust; a variegated white and green form is well worthy of attention; H. minor, charming dwarf Chinese species, suitable for rockwork, flowers yellow, tinged with green, foliage narrow.

While last, but by no means least, we have the remarkable H. aurantiaca and H. a. major, of recent introduction from Japan. Many individual blooms measure seven or eight inches across, of a pleasing apricot-orange tint, strong and vigorous growers, probably the finest of all the Day Lilies.—F. Dixon, in Gardeners' Magazine.

WATER-TIGHT BOILER PIT.

Will Mr. Gibbons please tell us how to make a boiler pit water-tight? In a recent issue he describes a system of piping for a house in which he says to drop the boiler down and if there is danger of water it is a very simple and inexpensive matter to make it tight. I have a pit 10x12x6 feet deep, walled up with common field stones and pointed with mortar. The bottom of the pit is cemented about 1½ inches thick with Rosendale cement made 1 part cement to 3 of sand. The situation is not wet but I am afraid that the spring rains will soak in and cause trouble. J. A. M.

Replying to the inquiry of J. A. M., for water proofing the side walls, first construct a temporary wall of rough boards 4 to 6 inches away from the inside face of the present stone wall to the height desired, then fill in the space between the boards and the stone by concrete made from one part of Portland cement to three parts of fine gravel or broken stone, in sizes from that of a pea to a hazel nut, from which the sand has been screened. This concrete must be mixed somewhat slushy and thoroughly puddled or rammed into the space between the boards and the wall, the wall having been first thoroughly wetted down. When the four walls are finished and of the height desired and the cement set, remove the boards.

Assuming that he has a good solid bottom to the present floor, I would suggest that he first rough up the surface of the present floor, then thoroughly soak it and put on a 1½-inch layer of cement composed of one part of Portland cement to three of very coarse sand, thoroughly working the cement down while in a sloppy condition. If a smooth surface is desired on the finished walls, mix equal parts of cement and sand very thin and paint over the wall with this mixture by the help of an ordinary whitewash brush.

MILWAUKEE.

Decoration Day business practically cleaned up nearly everything in blooming plants, as well as everything used in the bedding line. The frequent changes in the weather kept buyers from purchasing until almost the last day. The call for geraniums, especially the dark scarlet varieties, was in excess of the supply and late buyers had to content themselves with plants not yet in bloom. Golden Bedder and Verschaffeltii coleus sold well. Cannas are increasing in demand, especially the dark-leaved varieties.

John Dunlop, Wm. Edlefsen and F. Schmeling were awarded contracts for some of the city parks and Nic Zweifel is doing the work at the Court House Park.

Heavy rains the past two weeks have delayed planting to some extent. A slight frost on the 4th nipped the coleus in some parts of the city. Quite a hailstorm passed over on the 2nd, but little damage was done to glass here.

At a meeting of the school board a resolution was passed instructing the principals of the various schools not to allow any bouquets at the graduating exercises. They advocate plain dresses and no flowers. This is not very encouraging to the trade.

Shipping business has been brisk the past week, June weddings cleaning up most of the good shipping stock.

The "Lily King" is called the "Early Bird!"
First in the market, be it hot or cold,—
His the melodious voice that's soonest heard
Buying up all the Lilies, I've been told,
Small wonder then, the melody the Lilies always sang,
When they with perfume-laden voice, serenaded Charles Millang!

ORANGE, N. J.

The regular monthly meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was held at their rooms on Main street on June 4. The one topic of the evening was the contemplated flower show, concerning which some seventy-five citizens had been addressed in the hope of attracting substantial support. Only eight of these responded and the committee decided this insufficient for a successful exhibition. Therefore the motion was reconsidered and the society decided "to hold no flower show."

Mr. A. Rolloff, of East Orange, exhibited some seedling carnations, one of which, of magenta color, attracted attention. The society adjourned for their usual summer recess after providing for a suitable opening meeting in October for themselves and their families. J. B. D.

HARTFORD, CONN.

Large quantities of plants have been sold this spring. Decoration Day, of course, cleaned up pretty much everything, but the growers were well supplied and no one suffered.

It is with great sorrow I have to report the death of Geo. A. Goodwin, after an illness of only eight days. Mr. Goodwin was acknowledged to be the best violet grower in this section, and the writer has often referred to him as the violet king. He was also an honest upright man respected by all.

John Coombs has just completed another carnation house.

Plants in the field are doing well here, no doubt on account of the cool nights.

O.

CORRECTION.—In the advertisement of Messrs. W. H. Gullett & Sons on page 60 of our last issue an error was made whereby they were made to offer 2¼ and 3-inch roses at the same price. This should have read "2¼x3-inch," meaning a rose pot 2¼ inches in diameter at the top and 3 inches deep. The error has been corrected in this week's issue.

DAYTON, O.—W. G. Matthews, the florist, was injured in a collision between two rigs June 2. He was rendered unconscious and his injuries were at first thought to be serious. But it developed that there is no danger of his being permanently disabled.

WE ARE very well pleased with the REVIEW and have derived much benefit from the many good articles published.—JAMES BROS., Du Bois, Pa.

EVERY FLORIST OUGHT TO INSURE HIS GLASS AGAINST HAIL

For Particulars Address

JOHN G. ESLER, Secretary, SADDLE RIVER, N. J.

BUTTE, MONT.

Decoration Day business was remarkably good here. The week started with a heavy demand for funeral flowers owing to the death of the wife of P. J. Brophy, a very prominent woman. Every flower that could be obtained was used. One house alone had orders for $835.00 worth of work, and there are three other florists here. All were cleaned out.

Decoration Day came four days later and stock was cleaned up two days before. Carnations were very scarce. Law Bros. were unfortunate enough to lose 2,000 which arrived asleep and the State Nursery lost 600. The Butte Floral Co. cut 3,400 during the week and cleaned them up on the 30th at $1.50 to $2.00 a dozen. Roses sold at from $2.00 to $3.00 a dozen. Potted plants were cleaned up, anything in the way of a plant going freely. Geraniums in 5-inch pots sold readily at $1.00, fuchsias at 50 cents to $3.00, the same for Marguerites in 6-inch pots. It was not a question of price, but of the plants the public wanted. Lilac sold at $1.00 a bunch. 12 sprays in a bunch. It would probably shock eastern florists to mention some of the prices obtained. It was an exceptional Decoration Day here. The weather was finer than it has been for years, and the cut flowers all gone. Plants were all there was to fall back on.

Stock is still scarce, the weather cool Monday, May 19th, we had sleighs passing the store, there having been a fall of six inches of snow. But it did not last long. Wild flowers are coming in now, fine lilacs from Missouri and Cape jasmines from Texas.

The finest wedding decoration ever seen in Butte was that for the Templeton-LeBeau nuptials, June 4th. A photograph showing part of the church is sent with this. Mr. O. A. C. Oehmler, with the Butte Floral Co., was the artist. White flowers and greens were most prominent, and palms and similar decorative plants were freely used. At the house the decorations were of roses, carnations and palms, pink and white predominating in the flowers.

The dining table had a center piece of pink and white carnations. Rising out of a base of foliage and carnations was a pink satin wound standard holding aloft a shower of the carnations, in which was intermingled delicate vines of Sprengeri, the latter drooping over effectively. Overhead, the chandelier, massed with smilax, was also shrouded with white tulle, pink and white taffeta ribbon completing the decorations. At two corners of the table stood fairy lamps, trimmed with large taffeta bows in pink and white and holding bisque rose shades. The bridal cake also occupied a place on the table and was wound with tulle and adorned with a cluster of Bride roses. RAMBLER.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—The board of trustees of the school of agriculture and horticulture for some time past conducted at Briarcliff Manor, N. Y., has purchased over 400 acres of land here for the permanent establishment of the school. The agricultural course for students will be considerably extended. Geo. T. Powell is director.

DU BOIS, PA.—James Bros. report an excellent spring business and say their first year's experience in the trade has been very satisfactory.

NEW MEMBERS OF S. A. F.

During a recent call on the secretary of the S. A. F. in Boston, he reminded me that I was a state vice-president of that body for Eastern Pennsylvania. I made some remark about that being an easy job and was inclined to make light of it, for which top-lofty air I promptly got rapped over the knuckles. Assuming a more serious attitude I asked: "Well then, what are the duties of a state vice-president, anyway?" Among the most important of all, I was informed, was the duty of keeping the membership fences of the district one belonged to in repair. I quickly realized that that was a job indeed. I have worked in too many societies not to be well aware of what it means to "go for" the laggart, the disgruntled and the indifferent. However I set to work and here is the result of my last week's work:

Ira H. Landis, Lancaster, Pa.
H. H. Battles, 108 S. 12th St., Phila.
J. Henry Bartram, Lansdowne, Pa.
David Bearn, Bala, Pa.
Frank Polites, 13th & Chestnut St., Phila.
Chas. Mecky, 17th & Erie Ave., Phila.
John G. Gardner, Villa Nova, Pa.
Frank Whitely, 16th & Chestnut St., Phila.
Eugene Bernheimer, 1604 Ludlow St., Phila.

Next week I hope to have another batch to report and if I do not, it will not be my fault. I publish these names because, although not a very large bag for a week, it shows that something can be done and there may be some other vice-president like myself requiring a little stirring up. Individual members can also talk to their neighbors and every one should try to send in at least one new name. Three dollars a year is not much and will not be missed. Never mind whether one intends going to Asheville or not; all should be members whether they go to conventions or not. It's rather a disgrace, I think, for a florist not to belong to his national society.

EPIPHYLLUMS.

Though Epiphyllum truncatum and its numerous forms are not so generally grown as was at one time the case, they are for all that very beautiful and extremely useful where flowers have to be maintained all the year round, the month before Christmas being their most attractive period. The type was introduced from Brazil as long ago as 1818, and the varieties appeared later on. They vary in color from deep purple to a light rosy tint, while, in addition, some of those with salmon tinted blossoms are very pretty.

Epiphyllum truncatum is generally grown as small standards, being grafted onto a naked stem of Pereskia, about a foot high, while taller specimens are sometimes met with. This, however, by no means exhausts its possibilities, for the different forms readily lend themselves to culture in suspended baskets, under which conditions the flowers are seen to great advantage. For furnishing a sunny wall in a warm house the epiphyllums are well suited, provided the wall is faced with network to hold some rooting material in position. This may consist chiefly of peat and moss, in which the plants will grow well, if they are syringed freely during the summer.

The propagation of the different epiphyllums is a very easy matter, for if a piece is broken off at any time and placed under favorable conditions, it will root in a short time, hence I have seen some well-furnished hanging baskets that have been in the first place lined with moss, then filled with suitable soil, in which pieces of epiphyllum, just broken off, were dibbled, and hung up in the stove, with an occasional syringing till rooted. Grafting is very simple, for, given the stocks of Pereskia established in small pots, all that is needed is to cut the stock to the required height, split it, take a piece of epiphyllum from three to five inches long, fashion the lower portion in the shape of a wedge, and tie in position, or it may be kept in its place by the insertion of two or three spines from the Pereskia itself.

When grown in pots these epiphyllums which flower best in an intermediate house temperature should, when the blossoms are past, be given a little rest in the warmest part of the greenhouse. If the plants need repotting, this is best done in March or April, and a suitable compost for the purpose consists of two-thirds loam to one-third brick rubble and sand. They need firm potting, and after this do best in an intermediate house, where moisture must be given. Towards the latter part of the summer the plants may be removed into a sunny greenhouse, in order to induce the formation of flower buds. Potting every year is, however, by no means necessary, as, if the drainage is good, they will, when once established, stand for a long time without being disturbed at the roots. In this case a little weak liquid manure given occasionally during the growing season is of service.

The above remarks apply to E. truncatum and its varieties, but there is another desirable species quite distinct therefrom. This is E. Makoyanum, with bright cinnabar red flowers, more regular in shape than the others, added to which they are borne in the spring instead of the early winter months.—M. E. in Gardeners' Magazine.

Holyoke, Mass.—E. D. Shaw, the florist, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $3,300 and no assets.

Wooster, O.—After June 15th the address of Prof. F. M. Webster will be University of Illinois, Urbana, Ill.

Wilton Junction, Ia.—Friederichsen Bros. report spring trade as very good. They sold out completely on bedding stuff. Demand in all lines very good. Outlook encouraging.

Duluth, Minn.—The public school officials have caught the "no flowers" disease and have forbidden the use of flowers at the school closing exercises.

I am well pleased with the Review. Every grower ought to have it.—H. C. Blewitt, Des Plaines, Ill.

TEMPERATURE.

Temperature is such an all-important factor in plant life, ranking indeed only second to light itself, that its study is one of the first essentials to the cultivator. The range of most plants is altogether determined by it, all but perfectly hardy or frost-proof ones demanding a temperature which never falls below 32 deg. Fahr., while many collapse altogether if this be even approached; the hardy ones, on the other hand, if constantly exposed to warm conditions, will perish sooner or later, owing to the lack of rest which the cold period affords them, and thus are equally limited. Plants in fact, like all other organisms, are the outcome of the environments of their natural habitats. Alternating periods of cold and heat or drought and moisture, induce corresponding periods of rest and active growth, and under culture, a main factor of success is the closest possible imitation of these conditions, a fact which is too often lost sight of as regards the resting period, which only an intimate knowledge of the natural environment of the plants concerned can properly indicate.

It is frequently overlooked that the term tropical and sub-tropical do not necessarily imply the constant high temperature of tropical and sub-tropical climates at the levels frequented by humanity. Many plants are introduced from elevated mountain regions, in which practically all climates exist, from the tropical heat at the mountain foot to arctic cold at the snow line. A consignment of plants, therefore, from the Equatorial regions may possibly embrace, intermingled with the tenderest tenants of valley glens which perish unless grown in a hothouse, a number of which are almost or quite hardy and would perish just as surely if placed in the same quarters, and yet the uninstructed recipient of such a consignment would naturally treat them all alike, and probably attribute the consequent failures to quite other causes than the true one. Even when plants survive which are thus unfittingly treated, it frequently occurs that their habit is greatly altered and their flowers adversely affected, as is evidenced by attempted culture of some of our native vegetables in foreign lands, where choice varieties deteriorate and become altogether valueless.

On the other hand, it is remarkable how some foreign introductions adapt themselves to and even improve under greatly changed conditions. Take for instance the tulip; in its native habitat we find it growing in hot, rocky localities on the Oriental hills, where the soil for the best part of the year is absolutely baking in a fervid sun and must be literally "dry as a bone," while here, as we know, it thrives, and, with many fine varieties, increases year after year in loose loamy soil, which in normal seasons is always wet or damp. Nevertheless, the bulbs refuse to respond to the stimulus of humidity, and take their rest as soundly as they do at home. Despite this, however, there is no doubt that in most cases the rule holds good that the nearer we approach the natural conditions, the healthier and more satisfactory the plants will be; but to attain these conditions, much greater knowledge of the, so to speak, normal temperature is required than is often acquired by the grower who learns the geographical position of the native country but ignores the material point of elevation.—Gardners' Magazine.

LETTUCE.

When should Grand Rapids lettuce seed be sown so as to have lettuce large enough to cut by Nov. 15th?

M. W. W.

Plants from seed sown Sept. 1st will be in good shape by the middle of November, and for a continuous crop sow a little every week. An ounce of seed will produce 4,000 to 5,000 plants, so M. W. W. can sow accordingly. C. T.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

It will be remembered that at the Indianapolis convention of the American Carnation Society a committee was appointed to convey to President Bertermann the great regret of the members at his enforced absence from the meeting owing to ill health. The committee, consisting of Messrs. Lewis Ullrich and James Hartshorne, duly forwarded a letter expressing the sentiment shown by the members and received the following acknowledgment:

Gentlemen: Your very kind and encouraging letter received a few days ago, being delayed as you see by being sent to a wrong town in this State. I have been in Pacific Grove, Cal., up to within two weeks; am now here for a month or so.

I certainly thank the Society very much for their remembrance and your Committee in special for their kind sentiment. I have surely missed the treat of my life in not being present but of course the state of my health would not permit me to stay during the cold weather. I am recuperating very slowly, don't hope to be much improved; however, a long stay may do wonders.

Again thanking you, gentlemen, I remain
Respectfully and sincerely,
Wm. G. Bertermann.

PLANTS FOR SCHOOL CHILDREN.

The National Plant, Fruit and Flower Guild is undertaking to encourage the school children of New York City to cultivate ornamental plants, and hopes to place a plant in the possession of each of the ten thousand pupils of the eleventh school district. Mrs. Henry Parsons is chairman of the potted plant committee of the guild and is also a member of the local school board. She hopes that florists will contribute their surplus plants to the guild for the work being carried on.

Those who wish to contribute plants, either with or without the pots, may send a postal card to the National Plant, Fruit and Flower Guild, No. 70 Fifth avenue, and they will receive labels to place on their boxes which will entitle them to forward their gifts free through the express companies. Directions will also be sent as to the manner of packing the plants, etc. The pots sent should be four inches in size, and should be forwarded to the West Side Settlement, No. 460 West Forty-fourth street, New York City.

TIMID TOTTIE.

"Will you walk in the garden, my wee pretty maid?"
"No, thank you, kind sir! I am too much afraid."
"Why, what can you fear is a puzzle to me!"
"Oh, sir, the snapdragons might snap at me!"

"Oh, I will protect you, my pretty wee maid. Come, put on your bonnet." "Oh, sir, I'm afraid."
"Pray, what is it now?" "Why, I never could go,
For a big tiger lily might bite me, you know."

"We'll walk in the fields, then, my pretty wee maid."
"Oh, that would be worse! I shall feel so afraid."
"What makes you so timid, you strange little child?"
"Why, sir, in the meadows the flowers are all wild."

HEATING.

Replying to the inquiry of M. W. W., for the heating of the lettuce house 90x33 feet, with glass on the roof only, 15 lines of 2-inch pipe would be required, connected by means of 3½-inch flow and return mains to the boiler. In the 90x22-foot house, to 50 degrees temperature, 13 lines of 2-inch pipe would be required, this also connected to the boiler by means of a 3½-inch flow and return mains.

I notice that it is contemplated to put the boiler in a shallow pit with the top of the boiler above the floor line of the greenhouse; this is very poor policy, as it entails not only a complicated system of installation, but adds materially to the fuel consumption and the cost of labor of handling the increased amount of coal every season. It would be much better to invest a little more money in Portland cement and labor to make a small water-tight pit deep enough to insure a perfect and economical working apparatus.

HENRY W. GIBBONS.

New York.

PIPING.

Would 2,000 feet of 2-inch pipe be sufficient for two carnation houses each 20x100, connected by iron gutter and no partition? Houses are 11 feet high to ridge. There is 16 inches of glass all the way around the sides.

SUBSCRIBER.

Replying to "Subscriber's" inquiry, 2,000 lineal feet of 2-inch pipe will not be sufficient for heating the two houses he describes. In order to secure a night temperature of 50 degrees, he will require at least 2,500 lineal feet of 2-inch pipe distributed through the houses, and he would find it advantageous to increase the quantity to about 2,800 lineal feet, but under no circumstances, should he use less than 2,500 lineal feet.

HENRY W. GIBBONS.

New York.

YOUR BOILER.

How long since your boiler has been cleaned? Many boiler troubles are due to lack of attention in this respect, especially in localities where the water carries sediment. Every boiler should have a cut-off at both flow and return so the boiler may be emptied and sediment removed at least every month or so, without emptying the pipes.

Where water carries sediment (and all water carries more or less) the latter settles in the lowest parts of the boiler and when sufficient has accumulated to keep the water away from the surface next the fire the boiler burns out just as will a dry tea kettle left on the fire. Boilers are costly and every care should be used to prevent injury to them through the accumulation of sediment. Now is a good time to make sure that your boilers are not suffering deterioration in this way.

IRONTON, O.—P. H. Therkildson, formerly manager of the Miller Greenhouses, this city, and more recently in the business at Chillicothe, O., died here June 1 from cancer of the stomach. He was born in Denmark and came to this city 27 years ago. He married Miss Hattie Miller in 1878. He is survived by his widow and seven children. Frank, the eldest, is now manager of the Miller greenhouses here.

HERE IS A BUSINESS BOOK FOR BUSINESS MEN

NO SCIENCE BUT LOTS OF PRACTICAL COMMON SENSE.

It don't tell you the botanical classification but it does tell you how to produce marketable plants and cut flowers in the best and cheapest way.

It don't list every plant in cultivation but it does tell you just what you want to know about every plant that there is any money in for a Commercial Florist.

The articles are arranged alphabetically so that when you want to see what Mr. Scott says about Cannas you turn to the Cs and in an instant you have it.

FLORISTS' PUBLISHING CO.

Caxton Building, CHICAGO.

The book treats of over 200 subjects and is freely illustrated with fine half-tone engravings.

It is a book that you need in your business just as you need any other useful labor and money saving implement or device.

The price is $5.00, carriage prepaid.

If you have not already obtained a copy of this book order one now.

If you cannot spare the full price at once, write us for our monthly payment offer.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

School Closings.

Prohibiting the public presentation of flowers at school closings is a matter for serious consideration and action by florists and florists' associations. Every effort to prohibit or decry the use of flowers should be met by intelligent and determined opposition. Two motives may be assigned as actuating the school authorities in this matter. One, selfishness, the other charity, and in any action to be taken these must be fully considered. The extra appreciative or wealthy parents may delight for appearance sake in sending their children flowers, but there are very many poor people who through ignorance of the present price of flowers or pure indifference or possibly inability to go father than providing the necessary graduating outfit, welcome the rule of prohibition.

It may be rightly argued that the school is no place for a display of the powers of wealth, at least in such a way as to create unhealthy jealousies in the juvenile heart. The school is supposed to be a place where all are equal except in the matter of intellect. True it is that merit is rewarded in several ways and pity it seems to us that provision could not also be made to use flowers in addition to the many vulgar brassisms sanctioned by the powers that be. There can be no disputing the fact that plant life and flower beauty constitutes (though meagerly recognized by almost all school boards) the great refining influences of all lives, be they ever so highly educated; in fact education is lost where there is a lack of appreciation of nature's most beautiful gems, consequently the florists' argument is clear and the arbitrary rules should be modified or so amended as to permit the profuse use of flowers as a crown to youth's first accomplished ambition.

It devolves upon those who have the training of children to devote a portion of their time to a child's life to something beyond and above that all-devouring spirit of commercialism that tends to absorb or choke the finer instincts of matured life. It will be a sorry day for America when the education of its boys and girls is entirely devoted to measuring the circumference of the dollar and placing within that circle the whole path of their lives. In bestirring ourselves to in every way protect the interests of floriculture it can never be charged that there is an entirely mercenary spirit behind our efforts, because flowers in a thousand ways are a real necessity. A luxurious necessity if you will, but an absolute one on the occasions that mark the important events in human life. And if narrow minded despotism will persist in oozing out from those who by their acts prove themselves unfit for the positions they hold in municipal or state affairs, then it is the duty of every florist to see to it that such are replaced by those who know better the requirements of advanced civilization.

It appears to us that there is very little that is impossible to determined concerted action. Every section of the commercial community is organized to protect their particular interests, and florists have in numerous cases a double incentive to work; they are those of self-preservation and public education. Here in New York, too, pupils are not permitted to have flowers presented to them on the platform during the ceremonies on graduating days, but they can be and are sent to the class rooms, and if it should come to pass that they be presented to them even at the door of the school when departing, it should be done. During the present condition of affairs florists should advocate the importance of presenting flowers to graduates and guarantee their safe delivery.

We must say that there are very many poorly executed and inappropriate designs sent to these affairs. Any kind of flower is suitable but they should be tied in loose light bunches and have ribbon attached when possible and the name and date painted on the streamers. Boxes and baskets are not suitable for these events. The former hides what is intended to be seen and the latter is too cumbersome for young hands to struggle with. Therefore let us show in our work that we understand what is best for all. We hope to see the day when the main hall of every school will be decorated with plants and flowers on the first and last days of attendance.

Summer Vases.

There has been during the past few years quite a revolution in the way of filling summer vases and in general exterior plant decorating. Formerly the material used to a great extent in this class of work consisted of geraniums and other such flowering plants. Now it is Aucuba japonica, furnished well down, and heavy vines of ivy, and exceedingly well they look and stand the trying climate of New York. Plenty of water is all the care they need. Palms, particularly latanias and phœnix, look well separately, and some very fine effects are obtained by using a variety of palms, ficus and general or highly colored foliage plants with vincas and ivies.

It is surprising to notice that many of the plants hitherto considered too delicate for outdoor work are now used with impunity. Sub-tropical effects are the most popular, and a vast amount of stock is being used up that could not be offered in the ordinary market channels.

A summer vase needs be well filled to be effective, and while it is necessary to put in some good plants almost anything will do for filling in. There has been and will be a big run on ivies this year; not nearly enough of good stock is grown. The same may be said of variegated vincas. Last week cannas and geraniums were sold here at auction at $1 per 100, with scarcely enough buyers even at that price. Better for the growers to use them at home to help hide the rubbish heaps or beautify their grounds. We cannot help thinking also that a vast amount more of this kind of stock could be used profitably in the cities were it offered at right figures earlier in the season.

Bobbink & Atkins' Ligustrum ibota compacta makes up a pretty vase or window box, and is destined to become very popular for use in such work. A little green of any kind is welcome to the eye in the sweltering city, and even if there be but very little money in some of the work, one never knows what a small order may lead to.

Ivy is being used entwined up the stems and tacked round the tubs of standard Bay trees, and it takes away the objectionable stiffness of these trees.

There are several new varieties of the Boston fern to be offered next spring and some that we have seen are fine acquisitions. Pity we have to wait so long for them.

There are many lovely flowers to be seen in the herbaceous gardens now, such as delphiniums, phlox, Clematis recta, thalictrums, Chrysanthemum carneum, aquilegias, Spiræa aruncus, and a whole regiment of others, which can be utilized for all manner of decorative work, and an eye ought to be kept on the best. Nothing finer now than masses of Liliums umbellatum, elegans, elegans roseum and E. robustum. A vase of mixed outdoor flowers can be made equal to any, no matter how beautiful. One or two or a larger cluster—yes, even a wreath of white or blue passifloras—look pretty and are very expressive.

Dendrobium superbum is a pretty white orchid in bloom at the present time.

We congratulate the American Rose Company on the beauty and adaptability of the White Golden Gate rose for funeral work. We recently made up for Weeber & Don's employes a wreath containing 300 of this rose. The design was sent to the funeral of the late E. Downie, for many years with Peter Henderson Co. Everyone admired the rose.

IVERA.

CARNATION NOTES.

If you have kept any carnation plants growing in pots, intending to plant them on the benches this spring, you should lose no time now in getting them planted. Two years ago we planted a house with Jubilee and America early in May, and it paid us well. They got a good hold on the soil before the extreme summer heat, and they suffered very little, with almost no shading on the glass all summer. Last spring we did not have a house ready to plant that early, so we tried a little experiment which worked real well. To avoid disturbing the roots was one reason, and to prevent stemrot was another reason for having 3,000 4-inch pots made with holes 1¼ inches large in the bottom. We potted the young plants into them in the spring and grew them along until we were ready to replant the house. Then, instead of taking the plants out of the pots, we just plunged pots and all into the soil up to the lower edge of the brim. There was no more disturbance than if the plants were moved over and weeded, and the reason we felt sure it would help to prevent stemrot was because after the roots got down into the soil we could if necessary water only the soil in the bench and keep the soil in the pots and the stems perfectly dry without the least bit of trouble. Two years ago, in spite of the early planting, etc., we lost quite a number of plants from stem-rot, but last season out of the 3,000 I am sure we did not lose a dozen plants.

We also tried another variety, part in these pots and the balance from the field, planted in the bench, both put on the bench at the time time. Those in the pots gave us finer blooms on better stems, both longer and stronger, during the early winter, but the number of blooms per plant was about 10 per cent less. The plants in pots will not grow as bushy as those in the field, hence there are less shoots and less blooms, but less cropping, I believe. It is the check the plants get in being transplanted that causes the cropping to a very large extent. The growth is arrested almost entirely for a few days, until the roots catch hold again, and when growth does commence again they all come along together and bloom within a short space of time. The small shoots that were really a month behind the larger ones do not wilt quite so much as the larger ones, and begin to grow sooner and more rapidly when the roots take hold.

You will always find that the later you plant the more your carnations will crop, and if you plant on the benches in the spring you will have less cropping than when they are grown in the field during the summer and housed in August or later. Plants that are housed in July will crop very little more than those planted from pots, and it does seem to do most varieties good to be out a few months.

This year we are working another scheme that promises to prove satisfactory. Having decided in the winter to build a large new house 45x200, we staked off the house and made beds and walks just as we expect to have them arranged in the house hereafter, and planted our carnations right where they are to stay next winter. Now we are engaged in building the house over them, and although it takes a little more care and perhaps a little more work in building, just think of what advantage we gain. When you build your house first you are compelled to rush it through so as to be ready to plant by August or you will be late, and many another job that needs doing will have to wait, and perhaps none of your carnations will be planted until that new house is finished and your fall crop of blooms is ruined, to say nothing of the lowering of the quality of your winter crop.

Our plants are getting the benefit of field culture and will not need to be disturbed at all this fall, and don't you think we will have some good blooms this fall and a steady cut right along? I do. We do not need to rush the house up unduly. Just so we get the glass on and a few steam pipes connected by September is all that is required, and we can stop a few days now and then to look after other jobs that need doing, and we can plant the other houses at the proper time. The only objection we can see at present is that the plants will have no drainage beneath them this winter, but with careful watering no serious injury should result.

These rains are causing an unusual growth of weeds, and you must keep your carnations free from them if you want good plants to house next fall; even if you have to pull them by hand it will pay you to do so. Keep the cultivator going after each rain, too, as the ground will bake quickly at this time of the year. A. F. J. Baur.

Cattleya Mendelii, Showing Habit of Plants.

CARNATION SOIL.

Would it be safe to use for carnations next winter the soil in the benches in which roses were grown last winter, and which has been dried out for a month?

L. Z.

Up to a few years ago there were more carnations grown in old rose soil than in any other kind except by those who grew nothing but carnations, and those were few. The carnation does not like fresh sod nor fresh manure, and I suppose that is what led up to the practice of growing them in the soil that had roses growing in it the previous year.

This soil would not be so bad if it were spread out in a pile about a foot high and left exposed to the weather a year or two, but when it is used right over without this exposure it soon becomes sour, and nothing will grow well in it. We have often used it over this way with good results, but if we can get fresh soil without too much trouble we always prefer it to soil that has been used.

If L. Z. has no soil piled up for his carnations, he had better get to work and get some. I would not get a heavy sod, but would prefer it from a field that has been under cultivation up to a year or two ago and on which there is no heavy growth of weeds or sod. Add well rotted manure in the same proportion as with sod and work it over once each month. A. F. J. Baur.

CATTLEYA MENDELII.

In this species we have one of the finest cattleyas known. It is a native of Colombia, though it is regrettable to have to state that it is becoming very scarce in its native home, according to the collectors. It is very variable in coloring, running from pure white to deep pink in the petals and sepals, the lip being large and generally a rich magenta color. There are many beautiful varieties of this species, the pure white form, C. M. Bluntii, being an exquisite thing. Plants such as the one in flower, can be bought at from $2.50 upwards. There is no limit to the "upwards" for there are some splendid clumps in cultivation, if one will pay the price for them.

I know of no cattleya that will respond to intelligent care as will C. Mendelii. It is the freest of growers and we sometimes cut blooms with stems no less than eighteen inches in length. The three plants in the illustration will give the reader an idea of the wonderful vigor of this species when well grown. It is not at all unusual for plants to make two and even three growths in a season and flower on all of them together.

The plants in the illustration are growing on fern root with an annual top dressing of moss, in a house with top and bottom ventilators, which are open night and day in the summer time. This, with ample water supplied during the growing season ensures a well ripened bulb, which will produce wonderful spikes, with four and five flowers to a spike. We have plants that produce annually from 30 to 50 flowers each. But aside from its commercial value this species should be grown by everyone who loves orchids, as it so well repays the grower for his labor.

The flowers will appear from March to July, according as the plants complete their growth in the fall. We always like to keep the temperature well up to 60 degrees nights in the coldest winter weather, and never dry off your plants to any great extent. The present is the best time to repot if the plants need it, that is to say as soon as the flowers are cut and before the young growth is much advanced. C. T.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

During the hot weather newly planted houses should have all the ventilation possible during the day, and should never be closed down tight over night, especially in dry weather. If the leaves show dampness in the morning, that is a sure indication that the ventilation has been deficient. This dampness is caused by condensation of the moisture in the house, and if allowed to continue for any length of time, the foliage will become of a very thin and soft texture, which with the first application of firing will assume a sickly yellow hue. Foliage of this quality becomes an easy prey to mildew and leaves the plant in such a condition of weak vitality that it is unable to resist any trouble.

Cattleya Mendelii.

Give the plants plenty of water around the ball, syringe twice daily, and keep the paths wet. As a measure of safety the foliage should have a dusting of flowers of sulphur every week.

If thrips or green fly make their appearance fumigating will have to be resorted to. This, to obtain the best results, should be done in the early morning while the glass is cool and the soil in the benches comparatively dry as the smoke will descend lower under these conditions, and remain longer around the foliage. RIBES.

SOME ROSE QUESTIONS.

Please let me know through the REVIEW what is the best to do with Bride and Maid roses that have grown all winter and not bloomed very much?

Also please state how many eyes to leave when cutting back.

We want to fumigate with sulphur. Please let us know what caused mildew. The house has not been damp, yet mildew has been on the plants all winter.

A SUBSCRIBER.

The best thing to do with these roses would be to throw them out and replant with young healthy stock. Plants which have been infested with mildew all winter have been in no condition to make either roots or wood fit to do profitable work if carried over another season.

If to be carried over, all the small wood should be trimmed out and the stronger or flower-bearing wood cut back to the last three fully developed eyes.

Fumigating with sulphur is an operation that should never be attempted by any but an expert, and they seldom have to resort to such heroic measures, prevention being so much better than cure.

The cause of mildew is usually ignorance of the laws of ventilation or carelessness in their application, resulting in the foliage having a flabby texture which makes it susceptible to the attacks of mildew and other pests. Proper ventilation consists of a careful study of the outside temperature and so regulating the inside temperature that there will be no sudden change, as this creates the condition favorable for the germination of mildew spores.

Keep the night temperature as near 58 degrees as the season will allow, and after starting the fires keep a small crack of air on all night as long as the weather will admit, and on all favorable occasions. The temperature on bright days should be 70 or 75 degrees. In the morning the ventilators should be raised a little at a time as the sun gets higher, until noon. In the afternoon, as the sun descends they should be lowered with the same care. By careful attention to these rules the foliage will acquire a firmer texture, which will help them to withstand in a greater degree the attacks of mildew. RIBES.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Shading.

"Should newly planted benches be shaded?" This is a question that often perplexes the beginner in chrysanthemum growing. The answer to such a question is: It all depends. It may sometimes be necessary in the case of a house facing directly south, which would get the full blaze of the sun at midday, and did not happen to have bottom ventilation. In such a house the thermometer runs up out of sight unless one stands there spraying with the hose all day long. It should be remembered that the chrysanthemum is a cool-growing plant, and, in such a case as quoted, particularly if one cannot afford to spend much time syringing, a little lime sprayed over the glass with a syringe will be beneficial. It will wash off in a week or two, but by that time the plants will be well rooted, and will be able to continue in good shape the start they have made.

Any house that is to be used for growing mums in ought to have side or bottom ventilation in addition to the top air, so as to be able to get a current of air either through the plants or under the benches. Speaking generally, chrysanthemums do not need shading after being planted out, the idea being to build up your plant from the first and have it produce stocky, short-jointed wood, which is the kind that gives far the best results. My idea in recommending shading under extreme conditions, is because sometimes young plants in such case get too hard and will not come away as they should.

Cultivating.

Benches after planting should be kept scratched up once a week. This will keep the weeds killed off as they germinate, and allow the water to soak into the bench evenly and thoroughly. Never under any conditions allow the surface of the soil to become green and sour. Do not neglect this work if you happen to be busy, for while mums need lots of water the soil must always be in a sweet condition, unless you are looking for a dose of leaf spot or rust.

Doors and all ventilators should be left open night and day, more particularly nights, as the cool night air will refresh the plants after a hot day.

Syringing.

Spray your plants over several times a day during a hot spell, and not plants alone, but the paths and glass should be wet down. This will keep down the temperature considerably, and prevent red spider and kindred insects from getting a foothold. Care must, of course, be exercised to keep an excess of water off the benches, or they will get in a waterlogged condition. Any man if he wants to, can learn to spray properly.

Fumigation.

Now is the time to get to work and rid your plants of all aphis. Get every black fly killed now, and with an absolutely clean start you can often run the plants all the season till buds form, before again fumigating. We think we get the best results from burning tobacco dust, though of course any form of tobacco will do the business if properly handled.

Buds.

Some of you may be bothered just now by your plants throwing buds instead of going ahead and producing good shoots. V-Morel is probably the worst variety in this respect, though sometimes many varieties will show more or less of the same trouble. The only thing to do is to keep the buds picked off close, and have a little patience. Your plants will get to moving eventually and come out all right. Where a sucker appears the old plant can be cut right out and let the sucker take its place. There are various reasons for this habit of bud producing in the spring. With some kinds as Morel, it is the nature of the beast. Again it will appear if the plants have been too long in small pots, and get hard and stunted; or too much heat early in their growth will also be sometimes responsible. While the mum is long suffering, once in a while it turns and shows by this method its disapproval of the culture to which it has been subjected.

Brian Boru.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Pots.

A general cleaning up will soon occur; a very humble subject and yet one of no little consequence is the care of our empty pots. The market grower sells his plants in pots and has to replenish his stock every year, but many of us sell few plants in pots and we are so much ahead. I don't take great stock in the porous quality of our pots, yet there is no question that all plants thrive better when shifted into new pots and perhaps it is because there is a healthy drying out from the sides. What I want to impress on you is that beneath a bench is the very worst place for pots to remain during summer or till you want them again next winter. Put them out of doors. The excuse of my beloved son in the city is that we have not room on an acre lot in the city, but there is always room if space is well utilized. Those that have two or three acres of an orchard attached to their plant establishment and producing only a poor crop of hay should put out all their pots and the wider they spread them so that the sun and rain gets at them the better. Do anything rather than have a moisture-soaked, greasy pot.

Painting.

I don't want to start you into hard work before you have had a week's respite from the hurry and bustle of June, but remember that any repairing of benches or painting inside had better be done as soon as possible. Carnations you begin to plant by middle of July, roses are already being planted and mums should all be in by July 1, so that houses that want a coat of paint inside should be done at once. It looks like a formidable job, but really it is not so overwhelming. Two men can paint a lot of sash bars in a day and the good it does in the way of light is beyond measure. A well painted house is practically a new house and we all know how well plants do, apparently without skillful management, in a brand new house. It is a hot job in June to be looking up at the glass, but that can be overcome by having some sail cloth or some such material on the roof over the painters. I know of nothing better than good linseed oil and white lead, but it turns a yellowish white unless you add a small quantity of blue coloring to it, which will keep it a pure white.

Putty and Mastica.

Putty rots in the houses that are lapped and every other year at least they should get a good coat of white lead. Appearance is most gratifying, but apart from that it is necessary to fill up those leaky places that are sure to occur where putty is used. (Those lucky fellows who butt their glass don't have this worry.) Really shaky glazed old houses that are in bad condition will take too much lead to make them water tight and there is where mastica comes in. It is inexpensive and will fill up cracks and holes. It has a dirty appearance, but answers well to keep out leaks in houses that you are not quite ready to pull down and rebuild.

Style of Houses.

There has been a great change of late in the architecture of many large ranges of houses of recent construction. In fact, quite a revolution, and I hope sincerely it is one in the right direction. With all our boasted intelligence, man—at least the average—very much resembles some of our four-legged animals and does nothing but follow the leader, and are stampeded into any new idea without giving serious thought whether it is logical or not in their own mind. The long span to the south with a high north wall was considered fifteen years ago as the only house that it was possible to produce high class roses in. Then some man with wheels in his head thought that the direct rays of the sun was the only thing necessary and so started the short span to the south house, a crude abemination.

Now the latest and (up to this moment, I believe) the most economically built, the most airy and healthy, and with the greatest diffusion of light, are the blocks of houses with connecting roofs but no partitions. Gutters of various designs, either metal or wood; gutters from six to nine feet high. These houses are always built in our northern states running east or west or better still facing a few points east of south. The benches or beds are on the ground or very near it, and there being no partitions the gutter is the only shade and that you will notice is not continuous on any part of the bench for many minutes at a time. As the sun rises and descends (or rather the earth revolves) the shade of the gutter is not long on one portion of the bench. There is no doubt about the larger expanse of space having a purer and better air, less mildew on roses and a great deal more economical to operate and to heat and a great saving in construction. The houses can be any length and the width from gutter to gutter is from 16 to 25 feet.

This style of houses or block of houses is, of course, only suitable to the use of one kind of plant, because you can keep the temperature under one roof only slightly higher than under another. They are for a block of roses or carnations, mostly roses. Yet when these crops happened to be dispensed with from any cause, what grand houses they must be for lilies, or later any kind of spring bedding plants. Yet it is for roses and carnations that they are especially designed. This radical change in roof construction has brought about a small change in elevation and construction of benches or beds. You will readily see that in the houses with no partitions and high gutters the farther away from the gutters are your beds the more changeable will be the shade.

I have, many years ago, been presumptuous enough to say that the old fogy saying which is still often observed in the English gardening journals, "Keep near the glass," was nothing more than saying "Give them light." If the house is light the plant is as well off sixteen feet from the glass as six inches, but often plants on a shelf near the glass do remarkably well and light is not the only cause; it is the freer circulation of air. In this new style of houses no benches are used, or if so, very low, but I cannot see the utility of building a bench when it is to be used so near the ground. Some growers that make money in large quantities from their rose beds put them right on the ground and even have the ground beneath plowed and manured so that the roses will send their roots down a foot or two. These are truly solid beds and the roses are intended to remain there three or four years.

No doubt roses of good quality can be cut from these beds the year around and we are witness to a block of houses of this kind where roses are cut during winter (Brides and Maids) with stems three to four feet long and command the very highest price in New York City. They are nearly every one what you may call sucker growth. I don't say anything about their color or their keeping qualities, but they have the stem; but with all that I advise no one to go into that style of rose growing. It's peculiar and unique, and the man who is doing it is to be congratulated, for nothing succeeds like success.

But my advice is keep the roots confined in four inches of soil and let there be a space of some kind between the bed and terra firma. If the surface of the house is dry (which it always should be, if not naturally so, then well drained), there is nothing so good for the bottom of the bed as a 4-inch tile placed side by side with a 4-inch brick for the edge or a 2x4 scantling. This tile may appear to you as rather expensive, but it will be found to be less than 50 per cent more than 2-inch plank, and if you reckon in joints and legs for bench, scarcely any more expense. They are almost everlasting, while the wooden benches are continually wearing out, and they give absolute and perfect drainage. If that cannot be afforded, then a 2x6 on the ground across the bench at every four feet, and 6-inch fence boards lengthwise with a ¾-inch space between them, will do very well till you can afford the tile. This is a big subject and I would like to still keep on, but time and space forbid.

I will conclude by saying that while I have the greatest faith in this new style of houses for special purposes, and we all know that flowers are going to be produced in the future in the most expansive and wholesale methods, that if only one or two houses can be built, say for carnations, it is almost an impossibility to improve on the equal span, detached houses, some 27 or 28 feet wide, with four or five 5-ft. benches, with north and south side glass, such as you see at the establishments of Messrs. Dailledouze Bros. or C. W. Ward, and doubtless many others. Still I have seen enough of this connecting, equal span, no partition, high gutter style of houses to convince me that for roses or any other plant where quantity enough is grown to require all the same conditions, to feel sure they are the coming, up-to-date thing.

SUMMER BLOOMING ROSES.

Commenting on the interesting article in the Review on "The Future," C. T. Says: "Really good American Beauty roses would be worth more in July and August than they are at present in January, but how to get them, 'ah, there's the rub'". Is that a fact? If so, it is news to me. I had no idea that any such price could be obtained in midsummer for roses, whatever their quality. We, who live in small provincial towns, are told that in the large Eastern cities there is little demand during July, August and September for any kind of flowers. The flower-buying people are on the ocean, or at the coronation, or paddling in the surf, or inhaling the hemlock and spruce's spicy breezes that blow over the mountain tops of the Adirondacks or Catskills or Appalachians, and in cities like Baltimore and Cincinnati, where only a few can afford to summer away from home the would-be fashionable, who would like to get away but can't, pulls down the blinds, locks the front door and retires to the rear of the house for two months, and if a friend makes a call he is told by the hired girl that the family will return end of September.

This may be slightly overdrawn and not faithfully carried out in detail, but it is nevertheless founded on facts. In rural cool retreats like Buffalo, where people live in their homes all the year around, we expect and do get a steady demand for flowers every month in the year, but not in such quantities or at the prices we get in winter. Yet there is always a scarcity of good, clean roses from middle of June until the cut begins from indoors again in October, except perhaps for white, and the beautiful Kaiserin fills the bill for that.

Now, I am not going to spring anything new on "C. T.," for I have written about and even illustrated my attempt at producing American Beauty in July. It may be next to impossible and most likely very unprofitable to produce high class flowers on 6-foot stems in July, but to have an abundance of clean, fine flowers on stems 18 inches to 3 feet from middle of June to end of September is not at all difficult. There is no question about its being a profitable summer crop, that I know all about, four times as profitable as chrysanthemums, and you have something left after the summer crop is gone.

It was about seven or eight years ago that a small dose of inspiration struck us. I am not much of a believer in the orthodox brand of inspiration, but occasionally a small group of the "wigglers" that compose the grey matter of our brain will get an extra kick on them and the result is a new idea, sometimes it's called a bright idea, but that depends on results. This particular kick resulted as follows:

A bench, 100x7 had grown a crop of mums the previous summer. When cut the soil was left in and lilies stood on it, but each pot had a piece of tar paper under it to keep out worms and the soil of the bed did not get very wet and sticky. Easter that spring was on March 25th, and a few days before Easter this idea occurred to me: If the soil was well manured and it was in good condition, why not plant it with American Beauty roses just for summer culture? They were planted April 1st from 4-inch pots, very strong, healthy young plants that had been once stopped, propagated the previous January. We began to cut on June 1st and by July 1st were cutting large quantities. I remember one Sunday morning in the middle of July the cut at 5 A. M. was 150, and 50 more during the day. Of course they came in crops, but we got roses in abundance from June 1st until they were dried off in October. During June, July and August we retailed them at $3.00 per dozen and at that price they were the best crop we ever grew.

The plants were lifted and potted end of October, put into a cold frame until middle of January and then forced for Easter and made the best pot roses we ever had. You will say "Why don't you do it every year?" Because I have not given it personal attention.

THE NURSERYMEN.

Over two hundred members of the American Association of Nurserymen were present when the convention was called to order in the Plankinton House, Milwaukee, on Wednesday last week, by President R. C. Berckmans. Mayor Rose delivered a characteristic address of welcome, which was responded to by N. H. Albaugh of Phoneton, O. President Berckmans then delivered his annual address. He advocated the establishment of a large number of schools for nurserymen in the country. "We need such schools for those who help in the nursery business," said he. "There is no doubt that a graduate of such a school will go into the business and grasp the new details with the utmost ease, where an uneducated employe would have great difficulty. One large nursery house in Philadelphia now has such a school for its employes, and I should like to see others adopt the plan generally."

Prof. L. H. Bailey delivered an address to the association. He is a strong advocate of the establishment of a bureau of publicity in connection with the association and in his address spoke in favor of it.

"In this way," said he, "the public will be kept informed of new fruit regions, new gardens and growing interests in country life. It will create a public interest and lead to better planting. Another improvement that I would suggest is better catalogues. The effect of fine colored plates cannot be over estimated. The evolution of nurserymen and the importance of their business has taken place in the past fifty years, but the future will see greater importance attached to it. I look for greater specialization in the nursery business of the future taking the place of the attempt to raise everything, which has been a drawback to so many of our nurserymen."

Secretary G. C. Seager's annual report showed that he had received and disbursed during the year the sum of $1,459. Treasurer G. L. Yates made his annual report. At the beginning of the year he had on hand $2,232 and the receipts had exceeded the disbursements by $484.94, making the sum on hand $2,717.

The following were selected as State vice-presidents by the members in attendance:

Alabama—W. F. Heikes, Huntsville.
Connecticut—J. H. Hale, South Glastonbury.
Delaware—Alexander Pullen, Milford.
Illinois—Irving E. Spaulding, Spaulding.
Indiana—E. Albertson, Bridgeport.
Iowa—Samuel Lorton, Davenport.
Kansas—A. C. Griesa, Lawrence.
Kentucky—F. N. Downer, Bowling Green.
Indian Territory and Oklahoma Territory—J. A. Taylor, Winwood, I. T.
Maryland—C. M. Peters, Snow Hill.
Massachusetts—J. W. Manning, Reading.
Michigan—Charles E. Greening, Monroe.
Minnesota—E. A. Smith.
Missouri—J. W. Schnette, St. Louis.
Nebraska—H. W. Marshall, Arlington.
New Hampshire—J. C. Chase, Derry.
South Dakota—George H. Whiting, Yankton.
New Jersey—Hiram T. Jones, Elizabeth.
New York—H. E. Henry, Geneva.
North Carolina—J. Can Lindley, Pomona.
Ohio—J. W. Gaines, Xenia.
Pennsylvania—Earle Peters, Uriah.
Tennessee—N. W. Hale, Knoxville.
Texas—E. W. Kirkpatrick, McKinney.
Virginia— R. A. Wickersham, Winchester.
Wisconsin—Theo. J. Ferguson, Milwaukee.

At the second day's session the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Having suffered from the increasing numbers of insect pests and plant diseases, whose ravages already cost the fruit-growing and nursery interests of the country untold and yearly increasing millions, and believing that federal quarantine regulations restricting the free transportation of infected fruits and plants in interstate and foreign commerce, offer the only effective means of hindering the spread of such destructive pests and diseases, therefore,

We, the American Association of Nurserymen, in annual convention assembled, hereby resolve:

First—We believe that a well-guarded federal (quarantine) law regulating both foreign and interstate commerce in fruits and plants offers our greatest hope of relief.

Second—We favor the passage of house bill No. 10,999 now pending in the house of representatives, and ask our representatives and senators to favor its prompt enactment into law, without amendment.

Third—The secretary of this association is hereby authorized and directed to promptly transmit an official copy of these resolutions to each representative and senator in congress now in session at Washington.

The bill appropriates $50,000 for the payment of experts to be appointed in every state and territory to examine all nursery stock to be transported from one state or territory to another. Nursery goods from foreign countries will be inspected at the port of entry at the expense of the importer. The Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to quarantine importations of nursery stock or fruit. The bill provides other rules and regulations governing the importation of trees, plants, shrubs, vines, grafts, cuttings and buds and fruits, as well as for their inspection when they become subjects of interstate commerce or exportation.

The report of the board of vice-presidents was presented and adopted unanimously. The report selected Detroit as the convention city next year. The following officers were elected:

President—Charles J. Ilgenfritz, Monroe, Mich.
Vice-President—E. S. Lake, Shenandoah, Ia.
Secretary—George C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.
Treasurer—C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y.
Executive Committee — Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.; N. W. Hale, Knoxville, Tenn.; William Pitkin, Rochester, N. Y.

N. H. Albaugh of Phoneton, O., made the first address, a characteristically humorous effort. "There is a tendency," said he, "in the public mind to doubt the veracity of members of our profession; but let me tell you there is no body of men who strive to subserve the truth so notably as nurserymen. Even our friends, the entomological buggers, seem to want to hammer us as much as they can. They won't allow a nurseryman or planter to devise a remedy for any bug in the United States, not even humbug. They want to do it all themselves. They invent new insect pests and manufacture new diseases that we never heard of. In this way they play it on us, as Bret Harte said in his 'Heathen Chinee,' 'in a way I despise.'

A paper on "The Nursery Interests at the St. Louis World's Fair" was read by Professor Frederick W. Taylor, the head of the horticultural and agricultural exhibits there. He made many suggestions as to the effective grouping and display of nursery stock at the exposition.

The Friday morning session closed the convention. The session opened with the reading of a paper by A. Willis of Ottawa, Kan., on "The Responsibilities of a Nurseryman to the Community in Which He Lives." He took the ground that it was the duty of a nurseryman to strive to make the place of his residence beautiful and to encourage and aid his neighbors in the same line.

The importance of combating the San Jose scale was discussed, and E. W. Kirkpatrick of McKinney, Tex., took the ground that while vigilance was essential to exterminating the pest, continual talk on the subject did great harm by frightening people who intended to go into planting and fruit raising. He thought university professors talked too much in that particular line. A. L. Brooke of Kansas agreed with him.

A paper by A. L. Brooke, containing recommendations for the good of the association, will be published in the official report.

A resolution was adopted thanking the Citizens' Business league and its representative, R. B. Watrous; the delegates' brother nurseryman, T. J. Ferguson; the Plankinton house management and the daily press.

Just before adjournment President Ilgenfritz announced the standing committees for the ensuing year, as follows:

Transportation—Charles J. Ilgenfritz, ex-officio; A. L. Brooke, North Topeka, Kan.; William Pitkin, Rochester, N. Y.; Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.; N. W. Hale, Knoxville, Tenn.

Tariff—Irving Rouse, Rochester, N. Y.; T. B. Meehan, Germantown, Pa.; J. H. Dayton, Painesville, O.

Legislation—C. L. Watrous, Des Moines, Ia.; Silas Wilson, Atlantic, Ia.; Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Howard A. Chase, Philadelphia, Pa.

NEW YORK.

It is generally conceded that the business season is almost over, and the majority of the wholesalers declare that the spring was a poor one for them. They claim that the retailers have had the best of the season, almost dictating as to the prices they paid. Just now the man who speaks about business is not taken seriously. Vacations are more to the point. European trips are contemplated by some of the Broadway florists, and it is expected by one or two in the wholesale district, while others will use automobiles and the fishing rod.

The plant market at Laurel and West streets is demoralized. No one attends there at present but peddlers, who get the plants at starvation prices. The plant auctions are in a similar condition, the prices scarcely paying for pots or baskets.

The majority of the seed houses close at 1 p. m. Saturday, and pity it is that there is not a unanimity in this matter also among the wholesale florists, and, for all that, it might be extended to the retailers, at least in a way, to relieve the dreary monotony.

Prices are what you wish to make them, but as usual good stock will be scarce next month.

Alex Burns is out today celebrating the twenty-eighth anniversary of his wedding.

Dr. D. Y. MacDougal delivered a very interesting illustrated lecture on the vegetation of American deserts at the Botanical Gardens June 14.

The florists who have branch stores at Newport report a splendid plant season so far, and the future cut flower prospects look very bright.

F. R. Pierson's new fern is in splendid condition and is sure to be in great demand when sent out next season. Mr. Pierson will devote several houses to its culture. It is a mighty good thing.

Bowling.

At the regular meeting of the New York Bowling Club, Monday evening, June 16, the report of the treasurer was very satisfactory, showing a good membership and encouraging surplus. Arrangements were made for regular practice by the team on different alleys during the remainder of the summer. The scores during the evening were:

Burns	124	140	140	166	120
Thielmann	145	110	154	161	139

AUSTIN.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Plenty of everything except, perhaps, first-class roses, which have at times seemed a bit inclined to be scarce. There may also be a little lull in certain kinds of cheap material that have been coming irregularly, this being a sort of "between indoors and outdoors" season. One reason for scarcity of roses is the fact that quite a little mildew is prevalent among about half the growers.

Weddings and school graduations help to keep up a fair run of custom.

For some reason or other there have not been so many gladioli this spring as usual, and up to this date not half so many paeonies, although there have been as many of each as could comfortably be marketed.

Not so many growers as usual have thrown out their plants immediately after Memorial Day, which, of course, helps much in keeping up the supply of poorer grades of goods. Small white flowers for filling funeral designs are not so scarce.

Notes.

An item that particularly interests rose growers Wilson and R. Montgomery is the street railway connecting Wellesley Hills and Worcester, making a continuous route from Boston to Worcester. It brings their places into the pale of civilization.

A deadlock is reported between Penn and the builder who wants to tear down his old store on Chapman place. Penn asks $2,000 for his rights in the premises and the builder offers less than half that amount, and seems to be inclined to build on a small scale at present rather than submit. And the old buildings taken down upon that fraction of the premises were curiosities in the way of complex architecture. They were among some of the oldest now standing in the city, and the wonder is that they stood as long as they did. J. S. MANTER.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Business is falling off in the stores although there are still some good orders. Commencement flowers appear less popular than in the past. Shipping trade is still fair, on some days excellent. The quality of flowers coming in is poorer, especially in Brides and Maids. A great many sleepy carnations also appear; one lot received in the morning elicited an offer of 25 cents per 100 from a fakir, which was declined. They went to sleep the same night and did not awaken. Despite these drawbacks there is still a goodly array of really nice flowers which bring satisfactory prices.

Beauties and valley are in good supply and sell freely; select, long-stemmed flowers of the former bring from $1.50 to $2.50, and a few $3 per dozen. One dealer who receives great quantities of this rose was even obliged to buy to fill his orders this week. Valley brings from $3 to $5 per 100 and is very fine. S. S. Pennock received 6,000 Monday, the bulk of it being quickly moved. He is also handling a few cattleyas, which bring 50 cents each.

Tea roses range from $3 to $5 per 100 for the best; a very few bring higher prices. Carnations range from $1.50 per 100 downward for good ordinary stock; $10 per 1000 will sometimes buy a very fair grade. Sweet peas are very plentiful, except when it rains, and can be had at low prices, say from 25 to 50 cents per 100. Double petunias are fair sellers at about 50 cents per 100. Smilax is plentiful; 12½ cents is about the price.

Hillside.

June is the least desirable month of the twelve in which to visit the rose growers. First, because at that season there is little to see, and second, because then you are fearfully pushed yourself. But when you are out for information you must make hay while the sun shines, id est, go when you get the chance. So on a hot afternoon a few days ago a couple of florists journeyed to Hillside, a little station some ten miles out of town, where amidst the peace and quiet of the country dwells the redoubtable Adolph Fahrenwald. Now why, you ask, did we want to see Mr. Fahrenwald, when his houses were not yet in shape? Well, you see, I was out for information and I wanted it from the man who a few years ago was a small grower, "even as you and I," while to-day tho leading commission men of two great cities vie with each other for the honor of distributing his product.

Mr. Fahrenwald was at home and received us cordially. After a little discussion on the 17-year locust, illustrated, he showed us his houses and boilers. There are six houses, each 150 feet long, three of which will be devoted to Liberty and three to Beauty. So skillfully have they been handled that the quantity of high grade stock produced and returns yielded stand as records in the former rose if not in the latter. Now for the ideas—Mr. Fahrenwald believes Philadelphia ought to have a cut-flower market, where supply and demand would regulate prices. He believes that the stock should be sold out clean every morning for as much as it will bring, and handling, so expensive and ruinous to the flowers, be avoided as far as possible. The growers should carefully grade their own stock and then it should be sold right out of the supply boxes in the market or commission house.

Notes.

J. L. Dillon, of Bloomsburg, has been sending out some very fine young roses, both on their own roots and grafted. His varieties extend considerably beyond the big four.

J. Henry Bartram, of Lansdowne, is erecting two new rose houses, 26 feet wide, and a narrow propagating house.

F. W. Whiteley, of Lansdowne, has had a very satisfactory season. He will discard tea roses and plant his five houses entirely in American Beauties, 5,000 plants being used. The output is divided between Leo Niessen and Edward Reid.

Edward Towell, of Welldon, has had some fine roses this spring. Several houses are already replanted; a house of Liberty is still in good shape.

R. G. Palmer, of Doylestown, the well known expert grower of Brides and Maids, will be married this month.

John Westcott entertained a score of friends at his club house at Barnegat, last Saturday and Sunday. The fishing season had hardly opened yet but the sailing was glorious.

Edward Reid received an order for five large boxes of flowers from the south too late to reach its destination in time by ordinary means. He promptly packed the stuff, boarded a train for Baltimore, and delivered the shipment in person on board the boat, thus insuring its prompt delivery within specified time. His customer was greatly pleased.

Samuel S. Pennock believes that the interests of both buyers and sellers of cut flowers will be greatly advanced when the system of peddling is abolished. Too many flowers are injured, even ruined, by the grading and regrading and packing and handling and repacking, which this system entails. The probable effect, Mr. Pennock thinks, would be better stock (less bruising) and greater satisfaction, as the market conditions would be more easily judged. Mr. Pennock is not opposed to a co-operative market run by the growers who now peddle their stock, but thinks well of such a plan and says he would make a point of being represented there. He feels that such a market would facilitate business and become an aid rather than a rival of the commission houses.

The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society held its June meeting on Tuesday. Sweet peas were a prominent feature. The society's professor of entomology talked about the 17-year locust.

A game of baseball, Growers versus Pennocks, is on the schedule.

PHIL.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Market conditions have changed but little from last week. Shipping demand holds up well and the greatest difficulty is to find sufficient stock of shipping grade. The quality of all stock is still depreciating and the great bulk of it is poor indeed. There are practically no good roses of any kind, and Beauties are especially scarce. In tea roses the best are so poor that they would be classed as about No. 5 in the winter time. These are quoted at $5 and $6 with an occasional few good enough to reach $7. The great bulk go at $2 to $3 and from that down.

Carnations also show the effects of the continued weather changes and really good flowers are almost unobtainable. The best are quoted at $1 to $2 and the poorer qualities are jobbed off at any old price, especially in color, whites holding up best in demand and price.

Pæonies are a big help now, and the quality averages very good, the later varieties seeming to have kept better in cold storage than the earlier ones.

There are more good longiflorum lilies in the market than ever before at the season and they are selling well. We noted a few auratum at Kennicott Bros. Co.'s.

Gladioli are beginning to appear in the market, but few seem to want them and they move slowly.

Sweet peas are arriving in quantity but do not move as well as they should.

Another week will finish the school closings and then we may look for summer dullness of a high carat.

Various Items.

C. M. Dickinson, manager of E. H. Hunt's, is sojourning in the east.

Walter Kreitling & Co. have the decorations for the annual opening of the Washington Park Club prior to the Derby.

James Underwood, supt. of Franklin Park and a member of the firm of Underwood Bros., Columbus, O., was a visitor this week.

Louis Klemm, of Hammond, reports serious loss on account of standing water. Many of his frames are still under water.

The weather changes continue. When you start out in the morning in a straw hat and a summer suit you may need a fur cap and an overcoat before you return. And rain! Never before within the memory of the writer have we had so much rain. The ground is saturated to the limit and any further rain would do serious injury. In some sections the damage is already heavy.

At Lincoln Park many of the pœony buds failed to open. Evidently the weather changes were too much for them. The grass and trees were, however, never finer. The bedding out is completed. New features are beds of palms and crotons and beds of Pandanus Veitchii and crotons. Both combinations are very effective.

D. F. Simonds, of Olive St., supplied a large number of hanging baskets and palms for decorating the grand stand at the Washington Park track.

Derby day is at hand and a little extra demand for flowers is looked for at that time.

Mrs. P. J. Hauswirth is still improving but is yet far from enjoying her usual health.

Though J. A. Budlong has already put up 45,000 feet of new glass this season, he has decided to erect 30,000 feet more, the latest addition to be devoted largely to carnations.

BUFFALO.

A very showery time of late has been bad for outside work, yet grand for the carnations, asters and other things in the ground, and I don't suppose it has stopped any body from getting married. There seems to have been an unusual number of thoughtless people taking the fatal step this spring, but very few of them among the prominent people, so the flutter they cause in the floral world is small.

Trade all round has been very good, although just now dropping to rather quiet. Graduations and commencements are yet to come and after that the midsummer quiet will be here. The plant trade has been good, although not a great increase over other years, and there were more to do it this year. There was an immense quantity of really high class bedding plants raised here this spring. The market was the great distributing medium. Schwert & Berner, of Chicktawaga, and C. F. Christensen, of North Main street, have been sending in car loads of fine geraniums, cannas, coleus and other useful and well-grown stuff.

The vase business for our principal cemetery, as well as many other cemeteries, has been as good as ever, with a naturally increased demand. Vases in this city have to be well filled. The standard was set high some years ago and others have to follow suit. It is doubtful if there is much margin of profit. If we did not receive fair pay for care and watering it would not be worth doing. Perhaps another consideration in vase and veranda box filling is that in the majority of cases you use what you have and clean up your stock. If you had to fill with just what they ordered it would never do.

I notice that our Dan B. Long has been honored with the duty of getting up a souvenir for the Ashville convention. Mr. L. and Mr. Deake make a good team and no doubt a beautiful little book will be the result of their efforts.

Mr. A. Ringier, of Chicago, was here a few days ago. Same rugged-looking, ferocious man, and the same old subject on top.

Our club is in a slumbering state at present, but that is not the fault of the officers. Everybody is too busy and those that are not are too indifferent. We will get a move on by August. W. S.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The free rose and strawberry exhibition given by the Tarrytown Horticultural Society in the Lyceum Monday afternoon and evening, June 16, was a great success, considering the difficulties that come with a fickle season. No doubt a better display could have been made a week earlier, but it is next to the impossible to predict when outdoor flowers or fruit are to be at their best. Unfortunately the rain came down in merciless streams during the evening and prevented many from attending. We have nothing but the very highest praise for the efforts of this young and vigorous society. This exhibition, while not what might be expected in a locality boasting of more wealthy residents than any other in the world, yet even were it smaller it shows the good intent, and we are pleased to state it was the best summer show, and almost the only one, given in or about New York this year. All honor to the men who thus keep the best that is in horticulture before the public eye. In the name of the REVIEW we offer our congratulations and earnest support in future efforts.

There were fourteen classes, and the prizes consisted of valuable useful articles. For best 3 quarts of strawberries, 3 varieties, Geo. Middleton won first with grand dishes of Sharpless, Marshall and Henry. Honorable mention was given to Wm. Scott for his Gandy, Brandywine and Marshall. Francis Gibson, Thos. Cockburn and Jacob Knodel also exhibited in this class, showing Glen Mary and Nick Ohmer in addition to the varieties named. For the best one quart of strawberries, "Sharpless," Francis Gibson was first, with splendid exhibits from Thos. A. Lee, Geo. Middleton, Wm. Hartnett, W. H. Waite and Jacob Knodel.

For best quart of any other variety first prize went to Wm. Scott for Glen Mary. Honorable mention went to Geo. Middleton for Brandywine. The above named also competed, Cumberland Triumph being the only variety added. John Humphrey got honorable mention for display of Alpine strawberries, and Francis the same for an excellent brace of cucumber Duke of Edinburgh. All the strawberries shown were of excellent color and size. The flavor we are unable to write about.

David MacFarlane won first for the best collection of outdoor roses, with about 90 vases in as many varieties. They were a remarkably fine lot, among them being many too seldom seen around New York. Mr. MacFarlane also won firsts for best vase of roses, 12 Margaret Dicksons (they were the best we ever saw); for 3 varieties, 6 of each, with Magna Charta, Margaret Dickson and Mrs. John Laing; and for 6 varieties, 6 of each, with the above sorts and Baroness Rothschild, Jacqueminot and Belle Siebrecht. Mr. MacFarlane made a clean sweep in all the rose classes he entered, and his blooms were very fine. Wm. Scott, W. H. Waite and L. A. Martin received honorable mention for their very creditable exhibits in above class, and Howard Nicols was awarded a certificate for his 50 fine vases of as many varieties of garden roses.

F. R. Pierson Co. were awarded first prize for a remarkably fine collection of hardy climbing roses, all the well known and some also too little known. Ramblers were shown to splendid advantage. Dorothy Perkins, Snowball, Meg Merrilles and Psyche were particularly fine. All the roses were good. Among the newer element that stood out prominently were Jubilee and Mrs. R. Sherman Crawford.

The exhibits of flowering shrubs were notable; first prize went to L. A. Martin for 50 vases, among which Styrax japonica was fine. Certificate of merit to F. R. Pierson Co. for a splendid lot with Syringa Pekinensis pendula, a leader. Honorable mentions to Geo. Middleton and Thos. Cockburn for their fine displays. First for paeonies went to W. Hartnett, and for 30 vases of showy herbaceous flowers Wm. Scott won first. Thos. Cockburn set up several large vases of foxgloves.

The vegetables shown were very good for the time of the year. David MacFarlane, Wm. Scott, W. Hartnett, Abel Weeks, Francis Gibson, Thos. A. Lee, were each deserving of the prize. Jacob Knodel was awarded a certificate for peas. L. A. Martin won first for sweet peas, David MacFarlane a certificate for gooseberry, Hyle's Golden Prolific, and Geo. Middleton certificates for melons, Royal Favorite, and grapes, Black Hamburg.

W. H. Harvey and W. C. McGowan were the judges. Another year it is possible that the summer show of the society will be held alternately in the large towns of Westchester county.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

The past week was the hottest of the season, the thermometer registering 96 degrees in the shade, making it mighty uncomfortable working under glass. Business started in very much as if our usual summer dullness had arrived, but later on trade picked up and Saturday saw the market cleaned out very nicely.

The hot weather is making itself felt in the quality of stock coming in. Roses are smaller, if possible, and pop right open in the ice box, and a good carnation is a thing of the past. Lawson is about the best to be had and sells at sight. America has been doing nicely also. Great quantities of Marquis are to be had and are really first-class, but that sleepy appearance knocks it out, as you cannot convince the average buyer that it really is not going to sleep. Some very good Daybreak and Scott are coming in from the lake regions and they are better than the fancies grown farther south.

Some of the best roses to be had are coming from the Lakeview Rose Gardens, Jamestown, N. Y., and for the season of the year the stock is fine. It meets a ready demand also and brings the top price in this market.

Large quantities of Candidum lilies were on the market and in some cases sold at ridiculously low figures. Those that were first on the scene brought from 2 to 3½ cents per stalk. They are about over now.

Some fine Longiflorum lilies are to be had and there is a good demand for them at 8 to 10 cents per bloom. More could be sold.

Meeting of the Florists' Society.

Saturday the annual meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society was held and the following were elected officers for the ensuing year: Wm. Murphy, president; William Schuman, vice-president; F. W. Ball, secretary; Ben George, treasurer; George Murphy, director. The newly elected board immediately took possession of their respective offices. The annual outing was the main topic under discussion, and a committee was appointed to select a suitable place to hold it.

Notes.

Fred Heckman, son of A. C. Heckman, of Covington, Ky., died suddenly at his home on Saturday last.

Theo. Bock was a caller and all his friends were glad to see him, as it has been a long time since he has been here.

Wednesday, June 18, is the date set for the wedding of Miss Sophie Thullen and Geo. E. Tromey. They will take a wedding trip through the east, visiting New York, Washington, Atlantic City, etc., being away two weeks or more. Mr. Tromey, better known as "Spunk," is Fred Gear's right-hand man.

Mr. T. J. Conger, Hartwell, Ohio, lost considerable glass during the hail storm last Sunday evening. He carries insurance in the Florists' Hail Association, so is well secured.

C. J. OHMER.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The past week was a very busy one for St. Louis florists. Nearly everybody was busy with some kind of work, mostly school commencements and weddings, but from now on the demand for flowers from this source may be considered over for this season. We would have had still more to do had it not been that flowers were not allowed at the exercises in the schools, and something ought to be done to overcome this one bad feature which hurts our business very much.

Second quality stock of all kinds was quite plentiful, but in first-class stock the market was weak. The only first-class stock in the market was fine sweet peas and a few carnations. Of these not nearly enough came in to go around. Saturday, some excellent valley was seen in the wholesale houses. Capes and pæonies are out of the market and about the only flowers that can be had now are roses, carnations, sweet peas and valley.

Prices on stock runs much the same as in my last report, only that first-class stock has advanced somewhat. Firsts in roses went as high as $6 and as low as $1 per 100. Carnations did not go over $2 and from that down to 50 cents per 100. These are becoming very scarce and feel the effects of the hot weather we have had. The past week sweet peas were a great glut and the bulk of them were very fine. These are sold very cheap, as low as 50 cents per 1,000 in 5,000 lots. By the single hundred the best brought 25c with the demand good. Valley is very fine and calls for $3 and $4 per 100 with a fair demand. There is plenty of smilax in the market which sells well at 15 cents per string. Hardy ferns and Asparagus Sprengeri were also in good demand the past week.

Notes.

Frank Weber, of Weber & Sons, nurserymen, at Gardenville, is back from Milwaukee, where he attended the annual convention of nurserymen last week. Frank is well pleased with his trip and the way the Milwaukee brothers entertained them.

Ellison & Tesson are now in their new place at Seventh and Locust streets and report a good trade the past week.

A thief ran away with the horse and buggy belonging to Henry Berning last Monday. The horse and the buggy have been recovered, but the harness is still missing.

A visit to the Grand avenue florists Wednesday evening found them all tired out after a very busy day's work. Geo. Waldbart says "Trade is very satisfactory this week, all we can possibly do." Mary and George Ostertag, a few doors down, have their hands full of school work and decorations. Mrs. Ayers reports a very busy week with schools, weddings and funeral work. Charles Schoenele, formerly on Washington avenue, is now with Mrs. Ayers and he and Will Adels have their hands full.

The employes of R. F. Tesson have organized a base ball team and say they will play any team of florists at the annual picnic next month. Here's a chance for the C. Young & Sons Co.'s base ball team.

At the Charleston Exposition, which closed June 1st, the medals for Missouri were as follows: 49 gold, 30 silver, 27 bronze and 37 honorable mention, making a total of 143. 58 of these are for horticultural exhibits. These with the Buffalo awards, which were 311, make a grand total of 454. Secretary Bell says that these will all be on exhibition at our World's Fair in 1904.

R. F. Tesson has been quite sick the past week, being unable to leave his room, but from reports today is mending and will be able to attend business by the end of this week.

Bowling.

The fine, cool evening failed to draw a large attendance, and only seven of the regulars were present. The following scores were made:

	H	1	2	3	Total.

BUSINESS METHODS FOR BUSY FLORISTS.

VI.

Collections and Correspondence.

These are two very important branches of the florists' business and ones which are so apt to be neglected and overlooked.

No matter what your skill as a grower may be or how successful a salesman you are, or how large your volume of business is, your profits, the real, tangible surplus of coin at the end of the season, will be measured by your ability as a credit man and collector. I make this rather broad assertion on the assumption that not more than one in a hundred does a cash business. If you are that one you need no advice on collections.

Whenever credit is extended it should be after being fully assured that the account will be paid. If you are doing a small local business you will most likely know all your customers personally and have a good idea of their paying propensities. If your business is largely shipping you should subscribe for the commercial agency rating books or try some of the trade collection agency reports. Never sell any one on credit unless you feel confident he can pay. Your losses will be heavy enough on those whom you feel certain are honest without running any risk on poor or doubtful ones.

But having judiciously extended credit you should exercise the greatest care and diligence in collecting. When an account is due ask for payment of it. If collection cannot be made then ascertain when it can be; get a promise and after you get it be persistent until the promise is fulfilled. It is the following up of promises that brings success in making collections. Remember that "eternal vigilance" is always the price of success, and this is emphatically so in the collection business.

Many customers will have some excuse for not paying when their bill is due and presented. Be polite and courteous when collecting the same as when selling the goods and you will hold your trade even though you are persistent in making collections. If your collections are outside your town use the same or greater vigilance in following up the account until it is finally disposed of. Avoid law suits as you would poison. They consume time and money and in the end the profits are always found in the hands of the attorneys. Except in rare instances and for large amounts never resort to the courts to make collections. The writer has in mind a large concern whose business amounts to millions yearly, much of it on credit, who has never yet sued a creditor. Perseverance, tact and systematically keeping after them will work wonders, where the law would accomplish nothing. In a word be careful and systematic in extending credit, and persistent in making collections and your losses will be lighter than if you resort to more stringent measures.

Your correspondence should also be received, answered and filed away in a systematic manner. If your trade is local your correspondence will be light. If your business is mostly shipping your correspondence will be heavier. But whatever its volume or nature, take care of it at once and answer it promptly and intelligently. A nice neat, well-worded, courteous type written letter will oftentimes make a sale where a personal interview would not. A good salesman can sell goods by correspondence as well as orally. It requires tact, a thorough knowledge of the goods and plain, convincing language to sell your goods by mail. Answer all inquiries promptly and intelligently and follow them up in a week or ten days with another letter if your first does not sell the goods.

Employ a stenographer as soon as the volume of your business will warrant the expense. A neat type-written letter is always plainer and more business-like than a pen-written one, especially if written by a florist after a hard day potting or planting. If you can secure a stenographer who is also a bookkeeper, so much the better.

Secure neat printed or lithographed letter heads and envelopes. If your local printer can't do a neat job send away and obtain them. Appearances in any business have a great influence on results. This is especially true of the florist business, in which God's loveliest productions are reared and sold. Keep an impression book and letter press and copy all your correspondence. Index it daily and it will always be a handy reference book to all your correspondence. File all the letters you receive in a systematic manner so that you can turn to any desired letter instantly. Practice neatness in your office and in all the details of your business. It costs no more than slovenness and wins you many dollars in trade in the course of a year.

Many of the smaller florists will not agree with me as to the importance of these minor details of the business. They are just as important as a thorough knowledge of growing, or in fact more so, and any one who supposes for a moment that a business can be successfully conducted without strict attention to details, is lacking in the elements for complete success, no matter what line of business he may embark in.

SYSTEM.

SEED IMPORTS.

The treasury department at Washington has issued the following circular to collectors and other chief officers of the customs, under date of June 4, 1902:

At the instance of the Secretary of Agriculture, it is hereby directed that, commencng July 1, 1902, and continuing for six months, 2-ounce samples of all importatons of 100 pounds or more of grass, clover and forage-plant seeds be prepared at the earliest practicable date after entry, and forwarded to the Seed Laboratory, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., labeled with names and addresses of consignors and consignees, name of seed as given in the invoice, and quantity of the consignment.

BALTIMORE.

Trade and Personal Notes.

Summer seems to have arrived at this port on time or ahead of time, and the mercury is already coquetting with the 90's. There have been some good showers, which have freshened up vegetation, but no general soaking rain, which is much needed.

Trade last week was dead, except on Wednesday, which was a general wedding day, when there was a rush for flowers, especially white roses.

This week begins better, and today (June 16) there is active demand for carnations. Roses are going down hill in quality, but the quantity keeps up, and those from outside are overabundant. Sweet peas, too, are in oversupply, and so, for the first time in months, are greens. A prominent item of supply just now is Lilium candidum, which is seen everywhere. Saturday night the street fakirs were selling quantities of carnations at a dime a dozen.

A great many roses are pulled out, and some growers are far advanced with their planting.

One of the most attractive of our June weddings was that on the 11th of Miss Rose F. Cook, daughter of John Cook, the widely known rosarian and florist, and Mr. Thomas J. McCormick, son of John McCormick, also well known here in the trade. The spacious St. Joseph's Church, at Irvington, decorated with great taste with plants and flowers, was filled to its very doors with interested friends of the contracting parties. The bride was a vision of delight, and the wedding procession accompanying her of charming flower girls and stately and beautiful bridesmaids was a picture of loveliness and grace. The ceremony was impressive, the music appropriate and delightfully rendered. After the nuptial celebration there was a reception at the home of the bride and a handsome supper served to a large number of invited guests.

There died here last week advanced in years Mrs. Joanne Seidewitz, mother of Edwin A. Seidewitz, one of our prominent florists. She was a woman of many excellent qualities and of bright mental power, and was widely known and respected.

Trade is keeping up very nicely, and between June weddings and funerals most all the good stock is being used up. Everybody reports a heavy spring season throughout, and no complaints are heard. Roses and carnations are fast coming down to summer quality, and the colors are narrowing down to pink and white. Red carnations that are not afflicted with that sleepy look are hard to find, and variegated ones are out of the market altogether. In roses La France and Kaiserin are coming to the front again to take the place of Bride and Maid, and many a young bride will carry a bunch of Empress (Kaiserin) to the altar this month. All white roses are Bride roses to most people, and perhaps 'tis well it is so. No doubt many would object to having anything but Bride roses in a bridal bouquet.

E. A. Nelson is cutting some fine spikes of a fine pink gladiolus, and they find a ready sale at good figures.

John Hartje is getting his house right up and ready to plant on time.

A good deal of trouble is experienced by some in getting their glass for the new houses. None were able to get it at the time it was contracted for, and some will be quite late in getting theirs, especially if the contract is not ironclad.

Friends of F. Sidney Smith will regret to hear that on June 7 his aged mother was thrown from a street car and seriously injured. The hip bone on the right side was badly crushed, and, owing to her advanced age, she being 69 years of age, it is all the more sad and doubtful if she will ever fully recover.

Robert McKeand has accepted a position on the Indianapolis Flower & Plant Co.'s place. Robert is a good plantsman and will do his part in turning out some good stock.

IRON PIPE.

A leading manufacturer of iron pipe reports that the demand for 4-inch iron pipe of standard weight has been so great during the past month that his firm is over a quarter of a million feet behind their orders. There is no change in price in view. The next meeting of the manufacturers will be held in July and until that time present quotations are likely to rule.

Present quotations on 4-inch cast iron pipe by manufacturers is $34 per ton.

San Antonio, Tex.—The P. D. Hauser & Sons Floral Co. has been incorporated with a capital stock of $50,000. The incorporators are P. D. Hauser, Pres.; F. H. Hauser, Secy. and Treas.; Wm. T. Hauser, Vice-Pres. They are making extensive improvements in their greenhouses this season, and now have over 25,000 feet of glass.

Troy, N. Y.—The Sunday Observer of June 1 prints an interesting illustrated description of the greenhouses of Mr. John H. Duke, giving special attention to the fine new house built last fall, designed and erected by the Lord & Burnham Co.

A rate of one and one-third fares for the round trip on the certificate plan has been granted by the railroads for the convention of the American Seed Trade Association to be held in Minneapolis, June 24 to 26.

FLOWER DECOYS.

One of our native orchids, Listeria ovata, has a flower which in shape resembles a species of beetle by which it is fertilized. Perhaps in the case the insect mimics the flower, as certainly happens with a pink colored Mantis in Java, which so exactly resembles a pink orchid that butterflies are attracted to it in mistake. The insect is carnivorous, and lies in wait for its prey, which is easily secured by the help of this strange disguise. Mutual resemblances of this description are rather characteristic of the orchideæ. From their resemblance, real or fanciful, to butterflies, moths, bees, spiders, etc., various species of habernaria, neotinea, and ophrys derive their names—the butterfly, spider, bee, and fly orchises. Parnassia palustris, one of the saxifrages, has five fan-like scales alternating with the stamens; the margins of the scales are fringed with hair-like processes, and each hair is capped with what appears to be a drop of honey. These are really hard dry knobs, but so much do they resemble drops of honey that flies lick them before discovering the imposture. The intention of these sham nectar drops may either be to decoy unprofitable guests from the real nectar, of which a limited supply is produced in the hollow of each scale, or to advertise it for the benefit of the more intelligent visitors. Somewhat analogous to these pseudo nectaries are the greenish swellings which arise on the veins of the petals of eremurus. These little swellings present a striking resemblance to aphides, or plant lice, and Kerner states that a fly accustomed to hunt after aphides pierces and sucks the swellings, apparently mistaking them for the insects.—"Knowledge."

WINTER-FLOWERING BEGONIAS.

The magnificent begonias now in full bloom (December 14) at Messrs. J. Veitch & Son's Nurseries, Feltham, are not from retarded tubers, like the liliums, lily of the valley, spiræs, azaleas, and other plants remarkable for their beautiful flowers at the Aquarium Show of Chrysanthemums which were produced by plants which had been subjected to the process of retarding by means of low temperature. They are simply the result of skillful cultivation and anyone having good greenhouse accommodation may enjoy their lovely flowers at this time of the year and for a couple of months longer if the right species and varieties be selected and proper attention is given to them.

In the first instance it may be interesting to state that all of them are hybrids of first or second degree from B. socotrana a lovely species introduced into our gardens by Messrs. J. Veitch & Sons some twenty years ago and one which possesses the great advantage of flowering naturally in midwinter. Unfortunately this most distinct plant is of a somewhat capricious behavior and on that account has not met with the general cultivation which it deserves and is seldom seen in first-class condition. The same drawback, however, does not apply to the several varieties resulting from the crossings which have been made with some varieties of the popular tuberous-rooted species. In begonias, as in the generality of hybrids produced by crossing distinct species, and notably orchids and nepenthes, the offspring are endowed with much greater vigor than their respective parents. This one reason undoubtedly accounts in part for the robust appearance of the plants grown at Feltham, and a skillful culture, such as the one directed by a grower of Mr. John Heal's experience, accounts for the rest. Be this as it may, it is an indisputable fact that the splendid winter-flowering begonias make at the present time a magnificent show which, if we take into account the innumerable quantity of flower-buds in various stages of development still on the plants, is most likely to last a couple of months longer and bring us well into the new year.

There are close upon a dozen varieties of these useful plants already in commerce, and if there are no white, yellow, or blue forms, on the other hand one may see and admire among them all the various tints and shades from pale pink to dark crimson, red and bright scarlet. Although three or four of these have quite single flowers, the majority produce double or semi-double flowers, and this is a certain advantage, inasmuch as in nearly all classes of plants a double or semi-double flower possesses the faculty of remaining longer on the plant than a single one. It may be of some interest to recall here the fact that the first of these hybrids, "John Heal" by name, was the result of a cross between B. socrotana and a crimson-colored variety of the tuberous section, called Viscountess Doneraile, and also that as a seed-bearing parent B. socotrana has only produced John Heal, Winter Gem, with flowers of a deep crimson color, with socotrana foliage, and Gloire de Lorraine, which at Feltham was the result of a cross between that interesting species and B. Moonlight; whereas, the original B. Gloire de Lorraine of Lemoine was given as the result of a cross betweeu socotrana and, I believe, B. Dregeana.

But if the offsprings of B. socotrana as the female parent are few in number, those resulting from crosses in which that species was used as pollen parent are numerous, and also varied in colors. There are Myra, Mrs. Heal and Winter Cheer, all three very bright rich red, large flowers, those of Mrs. Heal measuring fully 3 inches in diameter. The seed-bearing plant in this case was an orange-scarlet variety of the tuberous section. A semi-double flowering variety of the tuberous section, with rose-colored flowers, acted as the female parent which produced Ensign, a double bright pink variety so free-flowering that seveuty to eighty flowers and buds have been counted on plants 18 inches high, and grown in 32-pots. Winter Perfection, a variety of somewhat dwarf habit, with double, pink flowers, disposed on well-branched racemes, and with fine, dark shining foliage; and the remarkably pretty Ideala, a particularly dwarf variety, with double flowers of a deep, rich rosy-pink color, and disposed on racemes showing well above the foliage. In Venus we have a very fine semi-double variety, with bright red flowers, issued from a crimson-flowered tuberous form crossed with B. socotrana. But one of the most distinct of all that section is undoubtedly Julius, the result of a cross between a white-flowering variety of the tuberous section and B. socotrana. It is thoroughly distinct from all others, and its flowers, which are produced in great abundance, greatly resemble flowers of the justly popular double-flowered pink oleander, in color and shape, as well as in size of its very attractive flowers.

The only hybrid of the second degree known with certitude to this day is the variety Adonis, which is the result of a cross effected between an orange scarlet form of the tuberous section and John Heal, already an hybrid from B. socotrana.

As to the duration of the flowering season of the plants belonging to this interesting section, the reader may draw his or her own conclusions from the fact that the plants above described and now in full perfection at Messrs. J. Veitch & Son's Nurseries, have been exhibited two or three times this season at the Drill Hall, in which locality flowering plants do not improve. That any one may easily grow these plants is made sufficiently clear by the fact that they do not require a high stove temperature at any time, and that many of the plants now in flower were raised from cuttings struck in August last, and these of course, are only single shoots in 60-pots, but they each bear a spike of their lovely flowers, and measure only 8 inches to 9 inches high, whereas the one-year and two-year-old plants, which are grown in pots 5 to 7 inches across, are bushy specimens 18 to 22 inches high, and produce flowers in great abundance. It may be stated here that it is of the utmost importance to insure thorough success, that the plants should be kept perfectly clean and free from injurious insects, and especially of those of a little yellow thrips which shows a great partiality towards their succulent foliage, but which may easily be kept off by careful attention and occasional fumigations, which should be of a light character and somewhat frequent during the period of growth of the plants, that is, from May to November.—J. Schneider, in Gardeners' Chronicle.

Bloomington, Ill.—The recent storm damaged to some extent all the greenhouse plants here. The Phoenix Nursery Co. and F. A. Baller sustained the greatest losses, each losing several hundred lights of glass. J. D. Robinson, W. T. Hempstead and A. Washburn & Sons were more fortunate, each escaping with slight losses. The vegetable forcing houses of all the market gardeners in this vicinity were considerably damaged. Stock in the field suffered considerable injury from the severe wind and heavy fall of rain, but under favorable conditions will soon recuperate.

Slugshot was somewhat criticized in a recent bulletin issued by the Department of Agriculture at Washington because it contained such a small percentage of arsenious oxide. Now Mr. Hammond is out with a circular letter in which he takes issue with the department. He makes some good points, but the best one, and the only one it was really necessary to make, is that for twenty-two years slugshot has been a decided success in combating bugs. Who cares what an insecticide contains if it "does business" and harms nothing but the bugs?

Pekin, Ill.—A cyclone struck the city the night of June 10. It blew down and uprooted trees by the hundreds. At Geo. A. Kuhl's east side place a 60-foot brick stack was blown down and about 200 lights of glass broken. It is remarkable that more damage was not done. Fortunately no great amount of stock was injured.

A copy of the catalogue of Edward S. Schmid, Washington, D. C., has reached us. Aquaria and aquatic plants are prominent features, but practically everything in the way of birds and pet animals is listed. Even snakes are included in the list of pets.

Harrisburg, Pa.—Acting under instructions from the State forestry commission, State Forester Geo. H. Wirt has established a nursery at Mont Alto, Franklin County. Arrangements are being made to plant half a million young trees next spring.

Alexandria, Ind.—The Alexandria Floral Co. has been incorporated with a capital stock of $5,000. The directors are F. P. Boyd, J. F. Merker, J. G. Brannum, S. J. Mack and V. P. Wilson. E. W. Marland is manager of the business.

Doylestown, Pa.—Prof. W. T. Pope, horticulturist at the National Farm School, has resigned to accept the position of horticulturist to the Hawaiian Islands under the direction of the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture. He sailed for Honolulu on June 17.

Houghton, Mich.—The Lutey Floral Co. has been incorporated with a capital stock of $25,000.

Chatham, N. Y.—Christ Schneider is building two houses, one for roses and one for carnations.

Madison, Wis.—E. S. Goff, professor of horticulture at the University of Wisconsin, died suddenly June 6.

BROOKLYN HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

At a meeting of the Brooklyn and Long Island florists held on Tuesday, June 10, at the Association rooms, 502 Fulton street, Brooklyn, New York, a society was formed to be named the Brooklyn Horticultural Society, organized for the purpose of taking in hand the preparatory work consequent upon the forthcoming meeting of the American Carnation Society, which is to be held in Brooklyn, N. Y., in February, 1903. The following officers were elected: President, C. W. Ward of Queens, N. Y.; Vice President, Alfred H. Langjahr, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Secretary, Alex. Wallace, 2 Duane St., New York City; Treasurer, C. G. Weber, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Another meeting was held at same place, Tuesday evening, June 17.

A fund to provide ways and means for the entertainment of the members of the Carnation Society was instituted, and from the amount subscribed at the initial meeting it is very evident that the Brooklyn and Long Island florists will take no second place in providing a most cordial and hospitable reception to the visiting brethren in February next.

All communications regarding the new society should be addressed to the undersigned.

ALEX WALLACE,
Secretary.
2 Duane st., Box 1697, New York.

BRADFORD, PA.

A boiler at the greenhouses of G. L. Graham exploded the night of June 8, wrecking the building and contents and causing a loss of $2,000.

A fire had that evening been started under the boiler, the weather promising to be so cool as to require some heat in the houses. Mr. Graham was on his way to the boiler house to fix the fire for the night when the boiler exploded. Had the accident occurred a few minutes later he would have been seriously injured.

The boiler was rent in two by the force of the explosion. One part was found 300 feet away in one direction and the other part 500 feet away in another direction. The boiler house was completely demolished. The greenhouse nearest the boiler was blown to pieces and another one was badly shattered.

Mr. Graham has a force of men at work clearing away the wreckage and will rebuild and repair the houses at once.

DALLAS, TEX.—J. R. Johnson, the nurseryman, reeently lost his only child, a daughter. She was passionately fond of flowers and at the funeral there was a wealth of blossoms from sorrowing friends. The grave was lined with roses. Mrs. Johnson is as prominent in horticultural circles as her husband, and was for years secretary of the Texas State Horticultural Society. Both have the sympathy of a host of friends throughout the state.

Seedling Carnation PRESIDENT McKINLEY.

This Carnation has never been exhibited except at the Kansas City Flower Show last November. At which time it won its name and the prize of $100 offered by the Union Bank Note Co., for the best pink seedling. We will endeavor to place this variety on exhibition at the leading flower shows this Fall and Winter. The color is similar to that of Lawson, with a better stem and a more regularly formed flower than the latter variety, averaging in size from 3½ to 4-inches in diameter, with a good strong calyx and as free as Dorothy. We will book orders for Rooted Cuttings of this famous Carnation at $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000, for January, February and March delivery. Orders filled in strict rotation. We will also furnish Rooted Carnation Cuttings of all the new and leading varieties at reasonable prices for No. 1 stock.

Read what JOHN THORPE writes of President McKinley:

KANSAS CITY, Mo., November 26, 1901.

E. T. GRAVE, Richmond, Ind. Dear Sir:—I desire to inform you of the great keeping qualities of your President McKinley Carnation. At the close of the exhibition on Sunday evening most of the flowers were even better than on the first day of the exhibit, the color equally as bright and without a trace of purple. It is exceedingly brilliant in artificial light. Respectfully yours, JOHN THORPE.

Read the clipping in the Kansas City STAR, November 21, 1901.

President McKinley Carnation is a splendid flower, said Edwin A. Kanst, one of the awarding judges. The petals are perfect and it is well built. The general construction of the plant indicates that it may prove better than the Lawson. The color is deeper and brighter than the Lawson and the coloring is more distinct. The peculiar purplish tinge noticable in the Lawson is absent from the President McKinley. It will become a favorite Carnation.

E. T. GRAVE, RICHMOND, IND.

SETTING POSTS IN CEMENT.

Would setting posts in cement increase the lasting qualities sufficiently to pay for the extra cost?

Would it be better to fill hollow iron posts with cement than to leave them empty? W. H. C.

If the ground is of such a nature as to afford a good foundation and bond for posts when well rammed, I doubt if casing in concrete would prove of any very material value. It does preserve the post somewhat under ground, but does not prevent decay at the ground line, which is the critical point. As to the filling of iron pipe posts, I believe it is advisable to seal the lower part of the pipe so as to prevent water rising within it, but in this respect only do I see any advantage in cementing inside.

A good, serviceable form of construction is to build concrete piers about 2 ft. 6-in. in the ground and 4 or 6 inches out of the ground. These piers can be anywhere from 6 inches square to 8x8 inches, inserting in their upper end an anchor bolt which would be used to fasten the wood posts which would set upon the piers.

Another good plan, where the shadow thrown by the large post would not be objectionable, would be to make the entire post of concrete, making them 8x8 inches at the base and 6x6 inches at the top. Henry W. Gibbons.

BOWLING AT ASHEVILLE.

The bowling committee of the Philadelphia Club had a meeting on the 10th inst. and made arrangements for a series of four outside matches open to all active members of the club—one each Wednesday, commencing on the 18th inst.—to determine who shall be their team to Asheville.

Incidentally, some talk was indulged in about prizes at the convention, and two members put their names down for $10.00 each as a starter. It is about time now that we were hearing something from the officers of the Bowling League, if that august body is still in existence. If not, then some other means should be adopted to work up a bowling program for the convention.

Perhaps some of our enterprising horticultural supply concerns want to put up a trophy this year. $25.00 or $50.00 in that direction would prove a very good advertisement. G. C. Watson.

The fifth annual convention of the New England Association of Park Superintendents will be held in Boston, Mass., June 20th and 21st. Headquarters will be at the Quincy House. The programme contains many attractive features. The annual dinner will be disposed of on Friday evening, at which President Pettigrew's address will be presented. On Saturday the members will enjoy a carriage drive about the city.

Peoria, Ill.—A terrific storm passed over the city last week. There was a heavy wind, and rain fell for hours, but there was no hail. Shade and fruit trees suffered most, large trees being blown down. The market gardeners had heavy losses. The florists suffered some damage in broken glass. Murray had one end of a greenhouse blown out. Kuhl, of Pekin, lost a smoke stack.

CLEAR CYPRESS ABSOLUTELY FREE OF SAP

All Cypress is good, but some is better than others. The best is open-air dried, and it must be open-air dried in the South.
It takes two years' open-air seasoning to make Cypress good enough to go into our Greenhouse Material.
Such Cypress can't be picked up every day.
We have 2,000,000 feet of it ready for use.
Shall we use some of it in material for you?
Our prices are reasonable and stock the very best.

HERE IS A BUSINESS BOOK FOR BUSINESS MEN

NO SCIENCE BUT LOTS OF PRACTICAL COMMON SENSE.

It don't tell you the botanical classification but it does tell you how to produce marketable plants and cut flowers in the best and cheapest way.

It don't list every plant in cultivation but it does tell you just what you want to know about every plant that there is any money in for a Commercial Florist.

The articles are arranged alphabetically so that when you want to see what Mr. Scott says about Cannas you turn to the Cs and in an instant you have it.

FLORISTS' PUBLISHING CO.

Caxton Building, CHICAGO.

The book treats of over 200 subjects and is freely illustrated with fine half-tone engravings.

It is a book that you need in your business just as you need any other useful labor and money saving implement or device.

The price is $5.00, carriage prepaid.

If you have not already obtained a copy of this book order one now.

If you cannot spare the full price at once, write us for our monthly payment offer.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

Funeral Designs.

Just a few remarks on what flowers are obtainable in the market and how they may be arranged. Funeral designs constitute no small portion of our trade at this time of the year, and although in a great many cases you are at liberty to use whatever you happen to have in stock, or can procure to greatest advantage, still there are numerous occasions where specified materials must be used. Yet if a florist's reputation is such as to command the respect and confidence of customers his recommendations will be adopted. The latter is a most desirable condition of a florist's business affairs and can only be obtained by giving satisfaction. Mail or telephoned orders are very often troublesome. Where an order is taken verbally you have a better chance to recommend a substitute if the flowers desired are hard to get or in your mind are unsuitable. Care should be taken, however, not to give the impression to any customer that the flowers they seek are not obtainable unless you are sure your rival in trade cannot procure them, because when an old customer or prospective one is told in your store that you have not and cannot get what they seek, and they go somewhere else (as they very often do), or see it in the window or stand down the street, you are liable to lose their confidence and trade.

We wish to remind our readers that we are one thousand miles away from the office of the REVIEW, and that in order to be up to and ahead of the day many of our remarks (which are always put down in haste) will be mere bald hints.

We are in a time of the year when color reigns supreme everywhere and fashion or fad supersedes custom. We have very often referred to the inappropriateness of colored flowers at funerals. If they be excusable at one time of the year more than another that time is now, and colors used on these sad occasions are only objectionable when arranged in a hotchpotch, mixed manner. A cluster or mass of crimson or pink, purple or lavender may enhance the beauty of any design, but while blue, yellow, orange and scarlet may be used with impunity at anniversaries, they should never be used unless in extreme cases at funerals.

You may be asked for or might suggest a floral casket cover. This is one of the most beautiful designs you can make and it is quite easy of construction. No need to hire a mechanic to construct the frame, which can be made from fine, flexible wire netting, covered on the under side with white or purple cheese cloth or Porto Rican matting, or it can be made entirely of double purple matting. The flowers can consist of all white pansies, with a cross of purple pansies in the center, or vice versa. The pansies must be wired separately to face up and last longer. You can put a distinct color fringe about 6 to 12 inches wide of the same flower around the outer edge and a narrower similar border around the face plate. You can use 2,500 to 7,500 pansies on a casket cover. They must be solid, with very little green showing; that can be almost anything—Asparagus Sprengeri is good.

Purple pansies make an excellent wreath when plenty of them are used. Tie with broad taffeta purple or white ribbon and fringe inside and out with border of adiantum.

The richest and most expensive casket cover you can make is of cattleyas. C. Gigas are magnificent now and you will be able to get some kind for some time to come. Farleyense fern is the most suitable green to use with these flowers and lily of the valley can be used in various ways to bring out the full beauty of the orchids. A cross and fringe of valley goes fine with cattleyas, or vice versa. White roses make grand material for covers, particularly the outdoor climbers. Where white roses compose the main part, a wreath or cross of crimson or pink can be used in the center.

A very pretty and acceptable idea in floral casket covers is to have the pall one solid color and have small rounded wreaths of other colors or distinct flowers suspended half way down the sides with white or purple ribbons. This is done where small children or relatives desire to have their offerings near or on the casket. Of course there are very many other flowers that can be used, particularly in a cheap sense, but it must be distinctly remembered that above all designs a pall or cover must not be clumsily or carelessly made. Neatness and expression are required in this class of work, and while a bow of good white, purple or lavender ribbon may be used to advantage on each corner, flowers, and flowers only, should constitute the principal feature.

Sweet peas are a godsend to the American retail florist, for with a nice assortment of them in your store (and they are always obtainable cheaply now) you need never be afraid of being unable to fill any "hurry-up" or after-hours order. These beautiful flowers can be used for any occasion in a push. A greater variety in color would be desirable, but the half-dozen varieties in as many shades of colors we have gets us out of many a difficulty. The lavender one, Countess of Radnor, makes a superb wreath. Make up round and solidly, tie with white ribbon, which should be very broad, and fringe round with adiantum. White, or in the case of children, a very light pink can be used. You can use one color as a circling frame to the other or have it as a cluster or make one side of each color. Where clusters or sides of colors are used it is best to use ribbon and tie as a connecting or harmonizing link between them.

Other Arrangements.

You can fix up a dining table for any occasion very prettily with pink sweet peas, and just now it is wise to suggest that they be tied in neat corsage bouquets with bow of gauze ribbon to match. They can be arranged as a centerpiece till after dinner. The gentlemen's coat flowers can be of the same material. It is a growing custom not to wear flowers during dinner; they are taken and worn with much more pleasure as souvenirs after dinner, and it should be known that where the company is composed of both sexes both or none should wear flowers.

Sweet peas make excellent material for bouquets of all kinds, for baskets or small vases, and where they are used in vases for table decoration they should have a little of their own foliage and be arranged in a light, graceful manner.

It very often occurs that you will be asked to get up a design in a few minutes. This is where many a good order is lost unless extreme quickness in eyes and fingers are used. It requires only a few minutes to tie up a pretty, loose bunch; that is the quickest thing you can make. There is an abundance of lilies on the market. The size of the bunch, of course, depends on the wants or pockets of your customer, but don't hesitate to chop off a pot of ivy or a leaf of Cycas revoluta or Areca lutecens, or any long-fronded fern to embellish your work if the price will permit or the act will please a good customer. In case of a wreath, which is the next quickest, the massing constitutes a very important part. Never mind paper or tinfoil. Put ferns or other greens in the bottom and sides of the frame, break and dampen the moss and tie it moderately loose. Asparagus Sprengeri is excellent for greening because it requires no stemming. In many cases you have no time to think of bothering with small flowers, and this is where such flowers as stocks, lilies, campanulas and stiff-stemmed roses are worth double their ordinary value. An occasional wire hook will help to secure the flowers, and in all cases of hastily made up work it is wise to have ribbon occupy a prominent part; it goes far to cover up the defects incidental to hasty construction and constitutes to a large degree the general effect.

In the matter of quick basket-work, plants of almost any kind will help you and then come your big, showy flowers. It is never wise to on any occasion start stemming or bothering in any way with old or puny flowers while your customer is near. Always commence with the best you intend to use, while they are there at least; such is not dishonest, it is merely good business methods to create a good impression. Very few outside the business know or care anything about the construction of a design; a favorable impression is what you must be careful to give on all occasions.

Indoor roses are very poor at present and it requires a greater quantity and a more extensive arranging of them to produce good effects. The American people can never properly be made to understand why they cannot get extra choice roses all the year round, and therefore it is difficult now to fill orders in an entirely satisfactory manner. Brides and Bridesmaids are poor and greatly mildewed, but roses of any kind or degree are more acceptable to some people than the best of other flowers. The time will come when more outdoor or special houses of roses will be grown to supply the midsummer demand. Much of the poorness of the present indoor roses can be covered or lessened by using plenty of the foliage of roses, such as the admirable Ramblers or climbing varieties sent out by Manda some four years ago. Kaiserin Augusta Victoria is the best white rose we can get in summer, and all the care you can devote in preventing the petals being bruised will be amply repaid with their great beauty and sweetness. There is more fragrance and depth of loveliness in outdoor roses now than in all your greenhouse pets, and wherever possible preference should be given them.

Lily of the valley is always a most acceptable flower for almost any occasion. It is the choicest you can get now for bride's bouquet or any particular order. A bunch of Liberties and valley is good enough for any queen. Bouvardia Humboldtii corymbiflora is an exquisite white waxy, starlike flower we are using for choice boxes or cluster or for mixing in a bride's bouquet. It must be used in fairly good clusters, though, to be most effective.

Ageratum, both the very light or dark colors, make good lettering on funeral work. Of course the letters must be larger and broader than the usual, but they give a more refined finish than immortelles or chenille.

Water lilies are good material for wreath or cluster or points of prominence in work. There is quite a knack in keeping them open, but they are useful even when shut if the outer petals are taken off. The night bloomers are very beautiful and specially adapted for dinner, or for that matter any decoration connected with aquatic life or event.

Carnations are a most prominent element in the cut-flower market. They are cheap and as good as anything you can recommend where general effect and lasting qualities are looked for. White ones are fine for wreath or flat bunch. Colored ones, particularly pink, are immense for vase or basket or general decorative work. Long, loose bunches, with broad ribbon, are being used for arm bunches for bridesmaids.

Lilium auratum are coming in, and while they are about the largest and showiest flower you can offer, their very strong odor prevents their use in any great quantity; nevertheless they are good for large funeral work or in a much modified way for vase work where there is plenty of air. They should not be sent to a sick room or used on a dining table. Orange blossoms can be had in limited quantity and the finer jasmine may take its place or be used to add fragrance and beauty to any box or bunch.

For yellow table decorations or other forms where very rich color is desired there can be nothing better than allamandas. This flower is a great favorite at Newport. It is fine when arranged with maidenhair fern. Allamanda neriifolia makes a fine bush plant and is very good for plant decorative work. Japanese iris are now very beautiful and are grand for funeral wreaths, bunches or for general decorative purposes. In the latter case they should, wherever possible, be arranged in Japanese or Chinese vases, long and graceful with a little of their own foliage. There are some lovely shades of color and splendid work can be done with them.

The different varieties of anthuriums make a very effective vase, or even one flower in a vase of others will lend much color. Their great lasting qualities and odd shapes and colors make them valuable. They will never be used to any extent as a decorative flower by themselves but one or two goes a long way as regards color and for that and other reasons they should be more generally grown.

Thorley has been making a specialty of a large white chrysanthemum which he has been receiving for months past. The flowers are large and make up fine, of course with large roses such as Beauties, Liberties or Brunners, or for funeral bunches.

There are many occasions where intense color is desired either in small or large quantity and for this such flowers as Phlox Drummondii, poppies, Lychnis chaleedonica, geraniums, sweet williams, Plumbago coccinea, and such are obtainable.

Some very beautiful decorations can be done by using masses of the different geraniums. Low bowls and Adiantum cuneatum are the best to use. Try them some time when fixing small tables for some big affair. Use one color on each table, white or green shades on all.

In flowering vines we have the different kinds of honeysuckle, Clematis paniculata and Cobea scandens; they are all fine for traceries, hanging effects or any form of decoration. Agapanthus umbellatus can be used to good advantage where long stemmed flowers are needed, but the color is hard to make effective unless white is in close proximity.

Seasonable Hints.

At this season when the foliage on young stock is succulent and tender many of the florist's insect enemies will put in an appearance, — hairy caterpillars, cut worms, etc., which soon create great havoc with the young leaves. In some cases they will strip a plant entirely of foliage in one night. Going over the house and picking by hand is too tedious a process in a place where roses are grown in quantity. Kerosene emulsion sprayed on the leaves with a syringe is a good method of killing them off.

I have lately been using a mixture of finely sifted bran and paris green in the proportion of one of paris green to twenty of bran and applying it to the foliage with the sulphur blower. This remedy is sure, quick, easily applied and harmless to the most tender foliage. I also used it with great success on smilax where the cut worm was literally destroying the crop. This is also a sure cure for sow bugs, grasshoppers or any chewing insect, the bran when moist having a sweetness which entices them to eat.

The weather in many localities has been so cold lately that many growers have been forced to fire up again; this is better than taking any risks. If the outside temperature runs down anywhere about the fifties, especially during damp weather it will pay to have some fire. This will save the young stock from getting a check and help to keep off mildew.

TROUBLE WITH BEAUTY.

I send you a sample of American Beauty rose. Please tell me what makes the blooms come injured in this way. Two months ago I cut the old plants back, gave them a mulch of fresh cow manure three inches thick, and they made a fine growth, but the flowers come like the sample sent. Have grown many Beauties but never had this trouble before. Plants are old budded stock and are in solid beds. C. W. K.

Cal.

This seems to be a clear case of overfeeding. Three inches of mulch of any kind applied at once is too heavy. Fresh cow manure is altogether too rank to apply to Beauties; the wood produced from such feeding is too soft and spongy to bear good buds.

A mulch composed of two-thirds well decomposed cow manure and one-third good fibry loam, with a sprinkling of bone meal added, and spread on one inch thick, will produce wood of a better quality, with a much smaller percentage of malformed buds.

The smaller of the buds I found contained some thrips, which would account for its lack of development. Smoking lightly and frequently in the early morning will soon rid the house of these pests.

ROSE QUESTIONS.

We are troubled with what they call the June rose bug. Please tell me through the REVIEW how to keep them off of the roses.

What kind of a climbing everblooming rose would be best to plant in a greenhouse? J. W. J.

From this letter I assume the roses are grown outside. J. W. J. also fails to describe the insect which is annoying him. It may be the June bug (Lachnosterna fusca) or it may be the rose chafer. The remedy recommended for both is spraying with some of the arsenites, paris green or arsenited Bordeaux mixture.

The rose leaf hopper (Typhlocyba rosea) is also in some localities called a June bug. Dusting the leaves with pyrethrum insect powder is a simple and sure remedy for this pest.

Gloire de Dijon, Marechal Niel, and Devoniensis make excellent pillar roses for inside growing. Golden Gate is also useful for this purpose.

THE ROSE CURCULIO.

We mail a sample of a bug that is new to us and which is this season proving very destructive in the field. It perforates the buds of roses and the stems of pæonies with its hard snout and ruins them completely. It has not yet appeared under glass. Can you give us its name and some information concerning it?

THE PARK FLORAL CO.

Denver.

Dear Sirs:—The red and black insect with the long snout received from Denver, Colo., where it is stated to be destructive to the buds of roses and stems of pæonies, is the rose curculio (Rhynchites bicolor), a well-known enemy of roses. Pæony seems to be a new food plant for this species.

There is also present in this sending a single specimen of a closely related and very similar beetle (Rhynchites mexicanus). This is comparatively new as a pest, and, so far as I know, there are no records of injury by it. I hope your correspondent will send additional specimens of this green species and any observations which he may be able to make concerning its habits. This latter species occurs in Colorado, New Mexico and Arizona, and is more abundant still in Mexico.

As to remedies, both species should yield to the same treatment, hand-picking and jarring the beetles from infested plants being all that is ordinarily necessary. They can also be sprayed with Paris green at the rate of 1 pound to 150 gallons of water, which will effectually destroy them. This last remedy, however, is not always applicable to rose bushes.

SPIRAEA VAN HOUTTEI.

The accompanying engraving is from a photograph of a specimen in full bloom on the grounds of Mr. Fritz Bahr, the florist, Highland Park, Ill. Referring to it Mr. Barr writes:

"Of all the spiræas, this one is the grandest, it being at home in all its beauty either as a single specimen, in groups or as a hedge. The graceful habit of the plant makes it an ornament even when out of bloom. This shrub should be pruned and put in shape directly after the blooming season."

CARNATION NOTES.

A question every florist asks himself over and over, and especially just at this time, when the benches need repairing or renewing is, "what kind of benches or beds can we put in our houses that are the most serviceable and beneficial to our plants?"

This is a great question and many things must be taken into consideration in solving it. If we wanted merely the cheapest, that would be easy to decide, but we want also whatever kind will produce the finest crops. There are a great many growers who would not think of growing a rose or a carnation on anything but a raised bench, while there are other places where every rose plant is set right into the ground after working it up good a foot or more deep. Each grows good stock and when you go through their houses you are inclined to say that theirs is the ideal way. If the man who plants in the ground can cut as good a crop for the whole season as the man with benches can we are sure that he makes more profit, but can he do it? That is the question we must decide for ourselves.

After several years of testing various kinds of benches and beds and noting the construction of same on other places we have come to the conclusion that a bed made as follows is about as durable and good as any we have seen: Set posts in the ground 4 feet apart and deep enough to insure solidity, leaving 18 inches above ground. Board up on inside with plank, or what is best of all, cypress boards. Last season we procured a lot of peck cypress lumber in 6 to 12-inch widths and they are just the thing. Fill up 12 inches of this box with cinders and the balance with good soil such as you would use on benches. We use the cinders or ashes from our boilers and find them perfectly satisfactory. These beds are as well drained as a raised bench during the winter and when spring comes with its warm draughts they do not dry out so rapidly and the roots keep cooler, thus enabling the plants to thrive until late in the summer. Especially is this good for White Cloud and all the reds, which soon succumb to the heat in the early summer.

Perhaps a little more care is required in watering during midwinter as they do not dry out as quickly as raised benches, but only a careless waterer will get them into a soggy condition, one who would do the same thing with a bench. The cost of such a bed is only a fraction of the cost of a raised bench and it will outlast it 3 to 1 at least. Last winter we cut much finer blooms and more blooms from a batch of White Cloud on such a bed than we did from a batch on a raised bench just across the path. Both planted at the same time and from the same batch in the field.

Another favorite bench with some growers is to lay about 4-inch tile side by side on the ground crosswise of the bench and fill the soil on these, but like the raised benches they dry out very rapidly during warm weather. They are more durable than benches and are therefore more desirable and can be raised up as high as you want them by putting legs and stringers under them. A raised bench is of course more pleasant to work on as you can stand up straight and work with your arms, while these low beds require a little bending of the back and at the knee, both of which are very distasteful to our older friends, but that is one of the last things we consider and if we are convinced that one way is better than another, then that is the way it is done regardless of backs or legs, etc. Try one of these low semi-solid beds and see if you do not agree with me. See that the cinders are moist when you fill in the soil else you will have trouble until they get soaked.

GLASS.

According to reports in the daily press an inventor has perfected a machine that will make window glass and do away with the glass blower in this line of manufacture. If the machine is a practical success and produces window glass of equal quality with that which has been blown, the price of glass will surely be considerably reduced.

Such a machine would break what is probably the most remarkable labor monopoly the world has ever seen. Glass blowing is peculiarly skilled work and the Glass blowers organization was strong enough to be able to dictate the number of apprentices to be admitted to the various factories. The art was generally transmitted only by father to son or other near relative. The organization was international in scope and it was useless to attempt to bring European glass blowers here. The men practically dictated the amount of glass that should be manufactured and the owner of a factory was helpless in their hands.

These conditions naturally greatly stimulated inventors in their search for a method of manufacture that would eliminate the blowers from the situation. If the machine now announced is as successful as claimed "glass shingles" may in time be less than half as costly as at present.

The present method of making window glass is briefly as follows: The blower takes from the pot of molten sand and other materials a small mass on the end of a long metal tube. By blowing through the tube he forms a large bubble about the size of a toy balloon. This is then inserted into a moistened wooden form, generally a log four or five feet long and hollowed out till the opening has a diameter of ten to twelve inches, the log being inserted in the ground. The blower continues blowing until a long cylinder of glass is formed. This is then cut from the tube and the operation repeated. These cylinders are later cut lengthwise and after being re-heated are flattened out into sheets of glass. As these sheets are rarely perfect the work of cutting them into the various sizes of window glass so as to get the most out of them is one requiring considerable experience and judgment. This is the reason it is impossible to manufacture all 16x24 glass or any other special size.

One of the greatest advantages of a machine would be in the avoidance of this waste. This in addition to the saving in high priced labor and the removal of the present limit on the amount to be manufactured should very considerably reduce the cost of glass, unless the machine should be bought up by some other sort of a trust.

Paeonia Festiva Maxima.

SOME PAEONIES OF MERIT.

I give a description of some not in general cultivation.

L. Esperence comes from France. Very fine rose colored, full center, highly perfumed and a free bloomer, besides being one of the earliest to bloom. It is also very vigorous and increases rapidly, giving it all the points of excellence desirable in a pæony. It is of superior value as a cut flower and will often bloom in the Northern States early enough for Decoration Day, when fine flowers are most in demand.

Marie Lemoine is a flower of delicate and exquisite beauty, opening slightly pink in color and fading to ivory white. It is one of the most highly perfumed of all. In short, there is a fragrance exhaled from it which loads all the air around it. It is quite a free bloomer. It does not increase as rapidly as L. Esperence.

Plutarch is a glory. It is of deep crimson with a delicate satiny finish, a great ball of dazzling beauty. People come from far and near to see it. "Be sure and save me one," and the silent, quiet beauty was its own salesman.

Richardson's Rubra Superba is much like the Plutarch, only on a larger scale, and it is one of the latest to bloom, making it very valuable for a cut flower. It does not bloom as readily as some others. It takes a year longer, but comes in with such grandeur that we forgive its tardiness. This originated near Boston and is equal to any of our imported ones.

Baroness Schroeder is from Kelway, England. It is yet very rare and he is fortunate who can get it for $2.00 a root. It is an ideal flower, filling all the requirements of perfection. In England it is called light flesh colored. Under our brighter sun it is the purest, softest white and in the center petals there lingers the faintest tint of gold, and from the wondrous beauty there is exhaled the most delicate perfume. The flower is so light, delicate, fluffy and ethereal it seems as if it might float away. It is a very full and free bloomer. Most flowers of such exquisite beauty are slow of propagation and shy bloomers, but I have cut eight strong roots from one in two years. I took up one late and sent it off 100 miles and in a month it was in full bloom. Its wondrous beauty, readiness to bloom, great vigor and easy propagation place it in the very front.

La Tulipe is from France. It is not widely known nor planted as yet, and so it comes high. By some it is considered the very queen of the whole family. It commences to show its beauty in the bud and it is interesting to watch its development—first, petals of green interlaced with crimson, then petals of light pink streaked with red, and as the flower swells to bursting it is a mass of delicate pink all woven with carmine, and when the flower opens it is flesh colored all streaked with red, and it sits there in its beauty as in a chalice of veined marble. It is also slightly fragrant. It is very robust and a free bloomer. I have cut nine strong roots from one in two years; so that, though expensive at first, it soon pays by its great vigor and productiveness. It has excellent keeping qualities as a cut flower.

The Newer Kinds.

Wild Rose. There are two kinds bearing this name. One is pink and the other deep red, very brilliant. They are single flowers of enormous size and contrast beautifully with other sorts.

Red Cloud is entirely new, has not yet been sent out. It is an enormous flower of the deep crimson family. It is of great vigor and I think will prove a ready bloomer. I chose it from 1,000 new seedlings, many of them of great promise.

Saul was so named because it stood head and shoulders above its neighbors. It is the largest I have ever seen of the whole pæony family. It is semi-double, outer petals pink, striped with white, with a deep gold center.

Tecumseh is of deep crimson. It is the most solid of all the pæony family. It has a system of deep, rich flowers packed and pressed together into a shapely ball of dazzling beauty. It was formerly called Grover Cleveland. It is so solid you could almost stone a dog with it. The blossoms retain their beauty a long time and as a cut flower it will probably keep the longest of any.

Nigra is one of the darkest of the deep crimson family, a shy bloomer, but making it up when it gets down to business.

Princess Ellen is a large, unique flower, opening light crimson, changing to the purest white, the broad snowy petals sandwiched with small, delicate and feathery ones, giving it a very fine appearance.

The Bride is snowy white, an early bloomer that, though the flower is not collection.

Walter Morgan shows more of the pure gold than any other pæony we know of. It is very fragrant, guard petals snowy white, inner of deep yellow, center buds green with a dash of carmine. This has not been sent out yet.

General Grant is an enormous pink flower, very robust and a free bloomer.

Sada Evans, Clara Barton and La France are fine white varieties of merit.

Belle of York is a very free, full bloomer, large pink flower edged with white. It is so robust and such a hearty bloomer that, though the flower is not first-class, yet it will win its way.

There is a tendency to put too many flowers on the list among the seedling pæonies. Though I have seen them by the hundred, I have not seen a poor one among them all. But floriculture is on the up-grade and we want the very best. There is a place for the thousands of seedlings for mass planting, where they will be very attractive, but we should name only the very best.

BUSINESS METHODS FOR BUSY FLORISTS.

VII.

Advertising.

It is not without fear and trembling that I take up this subject, knowing that there is such a wide diversity of opinion regarding it and that so many abler pens than mine have covered the field very thoroughly many, many times. At the same time, every opinion is worth something, if it only leads to something better and sets people to thinking. In the hope that these lines of mine may be of some benefit to some one I will submit them.

Every man in business advertises in some manner or other, else he would not be in business. As a rule, the most successful business men advertise the most, although there are a few prominent exceptions. The word advertise is from the Latin advertere—to turn the mind to—and that is the meaning and intention of the word to-day—to call attention to your business and the goods you have to sell. In its broad meaning, however, it refers to the free use of printers' ink in newspapers, magazines, posters, etc.

Every florist who builds a greenhouse, puts up a sign and offers goods for sale, advertises. He cannot exist in business unless he does. If he buries himself in a dense forest, keeps his business a secret, never tells any one and never offers anything for sale, he will not advertise, but he will not do any business. The moment he begins to sell goods he begins to advertise them. Starting, then, with this self-evident truth for the basis of our remarks, let us discuss a few of the best methods of advertising.

In the first place, grow and handle only the best goods. Choice stock is the best advertisement any firm can have. There is always a demand for the best, and once you get a reputation for growing and handling it you will have but little trouble in disposing of it. Don't try to grow too big a line of plants or flowers at first, for if you do you will fail in some. Better grow one or two things well than half a dozen fairly well. Your trade and reputation will grow in proportion to the quality of your stock, and no amount of printers' ink will make up for inferior goods.

In the second place, keep your place looking neat, tidy and attractive. This is especially necessary if you are in the retail business, as a grower or as a storekeeper. Thrift and evidences of prosperity will attract people every bit as much as choice stock, and when you once get them into your place of business be neat and courteous in appearance. You can sometimes grow nice flowers in dilapidated houses and roses are just as sweet if handled and put up in a slovenly, careless manner as they are in an up-to-date basket, but the style of the latter will attract 100 customers where the other does one. A tidy store, neat, polite clerks and nice boxes, etc., cost more than untidy ones, just as it costs a little more to grow good flowers than poor ones, but your customers pay for the additional expense, leaving you the same margin of profit on the stock. And the more goods you sell the larger your profits will be.

Good stock, a neat and appropriate way of displaying it, and courteous and careful treatment of your customers are the first three principles of successful advertising.

Having established your business by a conscientious adherence to these principles, we turn next to the best methods for increasing it. The common and accepted meaning of modern advertising is the liberal use of printers' ink, especially in the newspapers and magazines. We will consider all printed matter which a florist may put out as advertising. This may be divided into two classes—first, price-lists, catalogues, circulars, etc., sent out through the mails; second, public advertising in the newspapers, magazines, programmes, handbills, etc.

If your business is local you can do without a price-list, but a neat folder can be obtained at small expense and will save you the answering of many questions, talk while you are asleep or busy, and pay for itself many times over. If your business is general, a price-list or catalogue is imperative. As neatness is essential in presenting a "good appearance" to your local trade, it is equally so in presenting your goods through the medium of a price-list. Have it clear, concise, comprehensive and attractive. If you have a particular specialty for sale, emphasize it with a good picture. Halftones are now so cheap and easily obtained and are so true to nature that their use is recommended. You will need better paper for them than for ordinary wood cuts, and that is where their chief value lies—in elevating the general character of a price-list. They lend tone and attractiveness and in the end your customers pay for them.

I cannot now expatiate on the merits or demerits of certain catalogue advertising which is quite current in the trade, but may treat that in a separate paper at some future time. The average seedsman's catalogue is in a class by itself and cannot be discussed in a general paper at this time.

We come now to public advertising in periodicals, a subject which has engaged some of the brightest minds of the age. Does it pay? In a general way, yes. But millions of dollars are foolishly expended each year in this manner. If your trade is local and you desire to keep it so, a limited amount of newspaper advertising is sufficient. The kind of advertising is immaterial so long as you attract attention to your goods and get people into your place of business. Strive to get the best trade. You can't do it by advertising cheap goods or department store prices. If you have a superior article tell people about it and get them interested. Mention prices, but make your strong point on the superior merit of your stock. Never expect direct sales from your local paper advertisements to pay for your advertising. The way in which this advertising pays is to get people into your store to see your goods, when your goods and salesmen will do the rest.

If your trade is wholesale, then advertise in your trade papers, and always advertise prices on everything you offer. Your direct sales from this advertising should pay for the cost of the advertisement, else it doesn't pay you. You can dispose of your surplus stock through the classified Review advertisements at a minimum of expense. At the same time you can get in touch with the buyers, get your wholesale list in their hands and secure their future trade in other lines. Retail advertising in a general way is too big a subject to be treated in this article, and will be referred to in the future consideration of this subject.

In all your advertising keep a correct and systematic record of costs and as far as possible of results. A record book especially for this line of the business will be found interesting and valuable as the years roll round. As your business increases a certain amount of programme advertising becomes necessary. The direct result from this class of advertisements is very small, but indirectly in secret societies, churches, schools, etc., it may be of great benefit to you. The "good-will" feature in any community is worth considerable, though there should be a limit to such expenditures.

While much money is spent foolishly in trying to advertise and the sharpest are caught at times by "fake" schemes, it is very seldom we hear of concerns going bankrupt because they advertised too much. But we often hear of firms making millions by advertising their goods extensively. System.

NEW YORK.

Many important varieties of outdoor flowers have passed away for another year and the quantity and quality of indoor roses are fast becoming less and poorer. Mildew is very prevalent among old stock and only through very urgent need does much of it find its way to the stores. Good clean stock finds ready takers at fair prices. Carnations are good and plentiful and considerably help the situation. Outdoor roses have been more or less a disappointment here this season so far. Such flowers as valley, Cattleya Gigas, a few Beauties and Kaiserins constitute the cream of the market. Sweet peas are very short in stem, a vast quantity of them being fit only for groundwork.

The Cut Flower Market at the Coogan Building, Twenty-sixth street and Sixth avenue, opens at six a. m. and if any florist visitor to this city wishes to see one of the sights they should not fail to be there on time.

We very deeply regret to report the death of Andrew C. McConnell, brother of Alex McConnell, the well-known Fifth-avenue florist. Only a few days before his death, which occurred last week, we had a long, pleasant chat on old times. They are passing away one by one, leaving unfilled places behind them.

James Kidd, of Wm. Elliott & Sons, will leave here July 7th for a three weeks' excursion to the Pacific coast.

Albert Small leaves for Europe July 1st and Henry Small is expected to vacate Washington for awhile and enjoy New York.

Theodore Lang has a three years' lease on a fine cottage and grounds at Mount Marion, Ulster Co., N. Y., and with his family and automobile will leave here on Thursday to devote several months to growing corn, etc., and forgetting Sixth avenue.

James H. Carroll, one of Thorley's chief of staff, is open to challenge any golf player in the florist trade. Mr. Carroll has won two beautiful silver cups, the last one at a tournament among six champions at Van Cortlandt Park, his total being 84 in 18 holes. He says golf should be substituted for bowling at the S. A. F. O. H. convention, and that only that angel's feet are in the way the mountains of North Carolina would make fine tees for puts.

The ever good and generous boys of the Flatbush Florists' Bowling Club will give Papa Zeller a surprise on his birthday which occurs June 26th. We will have more about it next week.

Capt. Lang wishes us to announce that he will give a $10 prize to the member of the New York team making the highest average during the games at Asheville.

J. Austin Shaw expects to visit Chicago and the west this week, presumably among other things to sample lake trout and get inspiration to sing whilst climbing up the golden stairs next August.

The New York bowlers met on strange alleys last night. The scores were:

Lang	164	165	147	Burns	152	153	166
Seibrecht	164	133	199	Schenck	178	...	...
Elliott	119	182	131	Hermann	130	...	...
Thielman	160	160	171	Donlan	138	...	...
Bunyard	162	111	104	Traendly	147	...	...

J. I. D.

Only two weeks more and the annual outing of the New York Florists' Club will occur. The outlook is very promising and the attendance will be double last season's, while the accommodations, amusements and entertainment will be worthy of the club and satisfactory to all who come. Bowling, shooting, base ball and athletic contests are provided for, with dancing for the young folks. Everybody is going or ought to be.

Preparations for the great carnation convention in Brooklyn next February are under way. The new society formed for the purpose of furthering the interests of the carnationists is "busy" already, and a record attendance is expected. Brooklyn seldom has an opportunity to show its ability in this line and now that the "chance of a lifetime" has arrived let Indianapolis tremble.

The Asheville trip is less than seven weeks away. The east is awake to the fact and preparations for the event are going on steadily. It is about decided that the travelers from New England, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania will meet at Washington the Monday before the convention opens and go by as many special trains as are necessary via Southern R. R.

Arthur Newell of Kansas City arrived in town Tuesday on his way to Old England and the home of his ancestors, happy as a boy in the prospect of seeing his mother and the familiar scenes of his boyhood.

The Peter Henderson Co. had a decided novelty in its Cortlandt street windows last week—a novelty at least to those of "sweet sixteen" years and under—a glass case full of "17-year locusts." The crowds were too great for the sidewalk space, but it was a great attraction while it lasted.

Fleischman, the florist, is erecting a $125,000 apartment house not far from his Broadway store on an adjacent street.

Flatbush is a wonderful suburb nowadays. A few years ago the florists were on the outskirts, now fine buildings are being erected almost miles beyond them. Zeller & Son have leased their old establishment for another term so that with the Meissner place which they have purchased they now have facilities in the florist and nursery lines unexcelled. This has been their busiest season and Mr. Zeller, Sr., especially shows the effect of it. Everybody is wishing him many happy returns of his birthday, the 75th one now being celebrated by his confreres.

Louis Schmutz, who just four weeks ago had both legs broken, surprised his neighbors by walking around his grounds and greenhouses last Thursday with the aid of two canes; a remarkably quick recovery.

Henry Siebrecht, Jr., will make his first trip to Europe this summer and was expected to leave on Saturday last.

The eastern nurserymen from New York and vicinity who attended the Milwaukee convention have only pleasant things to say of that city and their big-hearted Wisconsin friends.

M. A. Purdy, wholsesale florist, whose place of business has been at 57 West 30th street, removed to 119 West 30th street on Monday, June 23.

BOBBINK & ATKINS.

A brief visit to the nursery of Bobbink & Atkins at Rutherford, N. J., leads one to exclaim, who may not have seen the establishment lately, "What hath five years wrought!" From a modest beginning, by two modest but ambitious and enterprising hortieulturists, has developed one of the most promising ventures in this vicinity. Nearly sixty acres of splendid ground now under cultivation, facilities for enlargement unequalled and a rapidity of development and patronage that must make these young men not only cheerful but "easy."

The nursery department of their business has grown marvelously, their herbaceous grounds are extensive while their stock of bay trees and ornamental evergreens is probably excelled by that of no importer in the country. Their greenhouses are filled at present with kentias of all sizes which they are disposing of rapidly in large shipments. Their offices at the nurseries are models of convenience and there seems to be no end to the projects and accomplishments of this progressive firm.

The accompanying engraving shows a block of bay trees at their nursery.

The Market.

The cut flower market is in pretty fair shape for the end of June. The commission men who have cards in the REVIEW are certainly doing some shipping which is felt decidedly now, for the supply of flowers is falling off and when 1,000 nice Beauties are shipped away by one dealer, as happened on Monday, their absence is noticed. This would hardly have been the case two weeks ago the supply then being much heavier. It is difficult to say just what causes the demand, a few weddings, a few funerals, and in the case above mentioned 600 of the Beauties went to a great social event in a town in western Pennsylvania. Kaiserins are improving and are preferred generally to Bride.

Carnations are still very fine. H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md., are sending grand blooms of Genevieve Lord Prosperity and Norway to S. S. Pennock. The stems are some thirty inches long and the price $4 and $5 per 100. Out door flowers are not selling particularly well, except possibly double petunias. These are fairly plentiful at about 50 cents per 100. Sweet peas are in oversupply and sell very slowly. A competent judge estimates that about one-third of those sent in are wasted even at the low prices asked. Cattleyas can be had at 40 and 50 cents each. Valley is less plentiful at $2 and $4 per 100. Robert Craig & Son are sending in some nice Lilium longiflorum averaging three or four flowers to a stem. These bring $6 to $8 per 100.

Plants.

It is generally reported and believed that bedding plants sold out cleanly this season. While this is true in some instances, I regret to find many places in which there is still a springlike appearance, and no late box or bed need lack adornment for want of gayly colored blooming plants.

American Beauties.

It is an interesting fact that several out of town growers consider this market as a desirable outlet for their Beauties in summer. So apparent has this become that Leo Niessen, who has given considerable attention to the development of the summer cut flower trade, was questioned regarding the demand for fine Beauties at that season. Mr. Niessen said that while he would not advise anyone to invest money in the production of this rose during the hot weather he would take the risk himself were he a grower. That shows there is good reason to believe summer roses properly managed will pay.

While on this subject it is pertinent to note that Myers & Co. have recently erected a Beauty house on a private place, John Lonber Welsh's, that has four rows continuous ventilating sash, two on top (one on each side of ridge) and two on the sides, front and back. This certainly ought to admit air.

Notes.

M. Rice has just returned from Europe.

A fire occured on Wednesday of last week in the store adjoining H. F. Michell's seed store. Fortunately the damage was not serious at Michell's. The store was somewhat the worse chiefly from over-watering, but the stock suffered but little, being promptly moved by an efficient corps of assistants.

Two of the storekeepers uptown, Charles H. Fox and John C. Gracey, have decided to close their respective stores five nights at 6 p. m. and the sixth, Saturday, at 10 p. m. This is a move in the right direction and every uptown store should de as well or better.

H. H. Battles is cutting four or five thousand sweet peas daily at his farm. The Century Flower Shop moves a great many of them.

A Voice From the Wholesalers.

You may say what you think
About valley or pink,
Sweet violets, orchids or teas,
But 'twill be a cold day
When our Beauty gives 'way
To even such rivals as these.

An effort in favor of closing the commission houses at 4 p. m. every day has not succeeded for want of support. It is to be hoped that some plan for shorter hours will be carried out during midsummer. Why cannot each house act separately?

The Henry A. Dreer Co. have a pretty show of seasonable flowers in their store windows, gaillardia, delphinium, early phlox, etc., all neatly labelled. This firm is well pleased with business. They are busy taking account of stock and "house cleaning" at Riverton.

Bowling.

It is well known that we are to have a team at Asheville and every effort is being made to make it a great team. The club has settled the financial part of the problem by appropriating the necessary wherewithal to meet expenses. The next step is to decide who shall represent this city. A series of twelve games will be rolled on the point system, three games each on four nights, June 18 and 25, July 2 and 9, to decide six places on the team and one substitute, seven in all. The first of these nights brought out sixteen players. John Westcott and William K. Harris chose sides, the losers to pay the piper, but that was only a side issue, the standing being the main thing. The total scores for the three games follow:

Moss	545	Habermehl	450
Robertson	488	Harris	450
Starkey	481	Westcott	430
Kift	478	Watson	410
Polites	473	Adelberger	376
Geo. Craig	465	Gibson	375
Anderson	460	Dunlap	358
Connor	459	Falck	351

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Roses and carnations are scarcer than last week, quality poorer and prices stiffer. The weather is mainly chilly and frequently cloudy and most of the old rose plants have been pulled out and houses replanted, which accounts for the short supply and poor quality, and demand has been decidedly strong. There are no really good flowers to be had and very few that would pass as seconds in winter. On roses the price is $6.00 for the best, with a few of the choicest reaching a cent or two higher, but the major part of the stock isn't good enough to command more than $3 to $5, even at such a time of scarcity.

Fairly good white carnations are especially difficult to obtain. A few of the best bring as much as $2, but on the rest $1 to $1.50 is the price, and the price obtained must certainly be satisfactory in view of the quality. The buyers probably find it less acceptable. Local retailers say it is useless to attempt to do business with so little available good stock in the market. The demand will, however, no doubt largely disappear after the present week and we can then settle down to the midsummer dullness, interspersed with the occasional demand for funeral flowers.

Candidum lilies are being received in fair quantity, but for some mysterious reason they do not meet with the demand they should under existing conditions in the market. Sweet peas are plentiful, but move rather slowly at 20 cents to 75 cents per 100. The range in price tells its own story regarding the demand for quality.

Pæonies are still a factor and move very well at fair prices. Smilax, which was scarce last week, is now quite plentiful. There are evidently some growers of smilax that don't watch the market as carefully as they should. If the receipts of this week had been divided between last week and this one their returns would have been much larger.

Various Items.

Klehm's Nursery, Arlington Heights, forced over 100,000 valley from pips of their own growing during the past season. And the flowers were better than those from imported pips, and it cost them considerably less to grow the pips than to import them. There seems to be no question that all the pips annually imported could be grown at home and money saved as well as better flowers obtained.

There is talk among the wholesalers of an arrangement to close at 5 p. m. during July and August. The matter will no doubt have been definitely acted upon before another week has passed.

The thermometer dropped to 45 degrees last Sunday night, certainly a remarkably low temperature for June. No wonder mildew is rampant.

Nick Wietor is off on another fishing trip, this time to Woodruff, Wis.

Mr. John H. Vesey, Kansas City, Mo., was a visitor last Saturday. He went from here to Ft. Wayne, Ind., to visit his brother, and will visit other points before returning home.

A "century plant" is about to bloom at Washington Park.

Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Hauswirth went to Mt. Clemens, Mich., last Tuesday. Mrs. Hauswirth will remain some time and Mr. Hauswirth will stay a few days at least, possibly a week. It is hoped that the baths will greatly benefit Mrs. H.

Geo. Ellison, Ft. Worth, Texas, was a visitor this week.

Geo. B. Scott and wife attended the wedding of a niece at Ottawa, Ill., last week.

BOSTON.

The Market.

A little scarcity along certain lines of good material, a fair run of wedding trade, more or less funeral work and a heavy traffic for commencement exercises in all kinds of schools have made us a fairly busy week and panned out quite well financially. Jacqueminot roses have had the best call, and other dark red roses about a foot long came next. Lilies seem to drive the hardest of anything in the cut flower line, but bedding plants at the auction sales go still harder. Low prices, indeed, is the order of things there.

Elliott's Law Suit.

The Herald prints the following clear and concise report of the result of Mr. Elliott's seven-year lawsuit, which has cost him the proceeds of the sale of at least 5,000 dozens of his roses at $2 per dozen:

The full bench of the supreme court today held, in the case of Jeremiah R. Downing against William H. Elliott, that the plaintiff, an ice dealer in Brighton, was entitled neither to damages nor to an injunction to restrain the defendant, a grower of plants and flowers, from using soft coal or other fuel that would interfere with or injure his (the plaintiff's) business or property.

The ground of the suit was that soot, dust and cinders fell from the chimney in the defendant's greenhouse into Strong pond, from which the plaintiff got his ice for his customers, leaving specks on the ice, and making it unfit for family trade, and that the use of soft coal by the defendant was a private nuisance to the plaintiff, and should be stoped. The plaintiff had to go to New Hampshire for his ice, and claimed $6,300 damages, but a master found he was entitled only to $2,451. The use of soft coal by the defendant was found by the master, however, to be only a contributing, and not the sole, cause of the injury to the plaintiff's ice; and because of this fact, that the defendant, by use of such coal, contributed only slightly to the injury, the plaintiff cannot prevail, even though the use of soft coal by the defendant is not a necessity, but saves him about $500 yearly.

The court says the defendant's business is a lawful one; he has a right to use his premises in any manner that will not interfere with the legal rights of others; it cannot be said that the use of soft coal for the purpose of generating steam of itself constitutes a nuisance, and there was nothing to show that his business was not properly carried on, and that the locality was improper. While every one has a right to have the air that comes to his premises as pure and uncontaminated as can reasonably be expected, still absolute purity in thickly settled communities is, the court says, out of the question, though one is not justified in adding to the impurity so as to further discomfort others or injure their business. But in every case the independent wrongdoer is to be held only for the consequences of his own acts or conduct. The court says:

"There was no finding that any unusual or extraordinary volume of smoke issued at any time from the defendant's chimney, and the fair import of the master's findings is, it seems to us, that while he cannot say that no soot and cinders from the defendant's chimney were deposited on the plaintiff's ice, if any were deposited, they contributed very slightly, if at all, to the injury to the ice, and the damage done by them was insignificant as compared with that resulting from other cause. He further finds that, while the use of soft coal is not a necessity in carrying on the defendant's business, it is more economical and saves him between $400 and $500 a year. If, therefore, an injunction should issue as prayed for, it not only will not afford the plaintiff the relief which he seeks, but will inflict great and unnecessary injury on the defendant. As the case stands, we do not think that the plaintiff is entitled to an injunction.

"Neither do we think that he is entitled to damages. If the alleged injuries are too slight and uncertain to be ground for an injunction, we do not see how they can be made the basis for an assessment of damages. The result is that we think the bill should be dismissed. So ordered."

Rumors.

A sweeping change in location of several retail stores is talked. J. W. Newman has already removed from Brattle street to a fine location among the quite small numbers on Washington street, and it is said that J. Newman & Sons must move, as well as W. E. Doyle, when rebuilding in that locality takes place, and that Zinn must move at the near end of his lease. His store is entirely surrounded on three sides by the gigantic Haughton & Dutton establishment and they need his room in their business.

Dead Beats.

This class of vegetable was formerly too well cultivated by the floral growers within the rim that encircles the "Hub." Growers would sell to a customer they well knew to be untrustworthy, upon his promise to pay, because it was a toss-up to do this or waste-barrel the goods. About a couple of years ago all hands seemed to think simultaneously that this kind of work was of no use, and as a result the larger part of that undesirable class of custom has been driven out of the business, helped partly by increasing competition. The better organization of hospital work under Mr. F. W. Clark's management had much to do with this, as it precludes the necessity of utterly throwing surplus flowers away, and much more satisfaction is derived from putting the flowers where they do some good than by the utilization of the snide florist. May his shadow never grow larger! An account against him must be earned four times over in collection.

J. S. MANTER.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The cut flower trade is somewhat depressed and is settling down to its usual summer dullness. Roses and carnations are getting scarcer and smaller every day. We need a soaking rain and unless this comes soon there will be a scarcity of flowers of all kinds this summer. Some of the West End florists had a few late June weddings which kept them busy, and, excepting these, it was quite dull as there was very little funeral work to speak of. Nearly all the stock that comes in is poor, and really first-class stock is out of the question.

Prices on stock are about the same, only that a few good carnations bring $2, but the bulk of them still sell at $1 per 100. Roses can be bought from $5 down to $1. Brides and Maids are very small and show the effects of the very hot weather we have had. Sweet peas have slacked up somewhat and come in with very short stems; price 25 cents for a single 100. Good valley still has a call at $3 and $4. Spikes of gladioli sell from $3 to $4 per 100. Good hardy ferns are somewhat scarce and are in good demand, also asparagus and galax leaves.

Notes.

The World's Fair officials are negotiating with Mrs. L. Tesson for 1,500 ft. frontage of her property on the Skinner road, which will be reserved for the Horticultural Palace and displays. Near it will be the ten acres for the Government's experimental farm.

Frederick W. Taylor, Chief of Horticulture for World's Fair, and J. W. Schuette have returned from Milwaukee where they attended the annual convention of nurserymen. Both are much pleased with their trip.

Visitors in town last Thursday were F. W. Ude, Jr., W. Winter and A. Berdan, of Kirkwood, J. W. Dunford of Central and J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville. All attended the club meeting at Belleville.

Mrs. John M. Hudson has gone to New York to spend the summer with her daughter, Mrs. L. Cores.

Frank Fillmore, son of F. J. Fillmore, who attends to nearly all the business at his father's place, celebrated his twenty-first birthday last week. His mother presented him with an elegant gold watch and chain. His grandfather, Francis Fillmore, who is very proud of his grandson, was present.

Mrs. M. M. Ayres, the Grand avenue florist, lost her two fine delivery wagons by fire last week. The loss is estimated at $600. Both horses were saved.

The Beyer Bros. are very busy just now remodeling and repainting their plant. Carl reports that when through with their work he will be with the boys again every Monday night at the bowling alleys.

Lost. John W. Kunz. Any information regarding him will be cheerfully received by his friends in the florist business, who are anxious to know his whereabouts.

George Augermuller, bookkeeper for C. A. Kuehn, is back at his post after a week's illness.

R. J. Mohr, of the Plant Seed Co., is back from the South and reports a good trade on his first trip out.

Club Meeting.

The June club meeting at Belleville last Thursday was a great affair. The meeting opened at 3 o'clock in the Commercial Club rooms with President Meinhardt in the chair and twenty-four members present. Dr. A. S. Halstedt introduced the Hon. John B. Hay, Mayor of Belleville, who welcomed the St. Louis florists and after a few appropriate remarks told the boys that the city was theirs for the day and to come often. The different committees reported and were continued for final reports at next meeting. Fred S. Plant, of the Plant Seed Co., was elected a member of the club. The vacancy on the board of trustees was filled by the election of William Adels. The trustees were requested to make arrangements for the annual outing to be held at Priester's Park, near Belleville, the latter part of July.

Mr. C. E. Fleming, of the L. & N. R. R., was present and made a few remarks about Asheville and how to travel the best and cheapest way. The fare will be one fare for the round trip, which is $20. J. J. Beneke was appointed by the chair to look after transportation to the convention of the S. A. F.

Mr. Carew Sanders gave a very interesting talk on his trip to California, which was listened to by the members with close attention. The talk was mainly on what he saw in the way of plants, flowers, trees and shrubs.

A committee was appointed to see the telephone people and have the wholesale florists listed under a separate heading of "Wholesale men". As it is now they are listed under the same heading as the retail florists, which simply reads "Florists". The committee consists of Thomas Miller, C. A. Kuehn, F. M. Ellis and J. J. Beneke.

Mr. J. W. Dunford extended an invitation to the club to hold its July meeting at their place, which was accepted; after which Mr. J. F. Ammann invited the members to hold their August meeting at Edwardsville, which was also accepted. So the nomination of officers will take place at Mr. Dunford's place and the election will be held at Edwardsville. As these outside meetings always draw a large attendance, a grand time is expected at each place.

A question from the box read "What is a wholesale man who makes bridal bouquets and takes the bread out of the retailer's mouth?" The answer was that he is a cannibal.

The meeting then adjourned to the bowling alleys below where a fine lunch was spread and a few games were bowled by all hands before the regular match game with the Stars of Belleville. In the All Hands game Max Herzog, our heavy weight, broke up the game by his long run of poodles. Windler, Winter, Jablousky, Halstedt, Sr. and Halstedt, Jr. all rolled fair games. After this the match game started with the Belleville Stars, of which Mr. E. W. Guy is a member. We won the first game and lost the next two. A return match will be played Monday night on our alleys at St. Louis.

The scores were as follows:

Florists.	1	2	3	Total.
Beneke	200	148	146	494
Kuehn	134	161	165	460
Meyer	216	126	163	505
Sturtz	183	132	161	476
Ellison	166	133	209	508
	899	700	844	2443
Stars	827	854	849	2530

Bowling.

The bowling club entertained the Belleville Star bowling team Monday night, and again after winning the opening game lost the other two. Young Meyer was in poor form and more or less responsible for the loss of the second game. The score was as follows:

Florists.	1	2	3	Total.	Ave.
Beneke	168	164	148	480	160
Kuehn	189	147	152	488	162 2-3
Meyer	116	113	139	368	122 2-3
Sturtz	195	173	156	524	174 2-3
Ellison	210	197	132	539	179 2-3
	878	794	719	2399	159 14-15
Stars	813	817	814	2444	162 4-15

Those who did not take part in the match game rolled among themselves with F. C. Weber again high man. This gave Mr. Weber a good lead for the first prize. The series will end next Monday night. The scores were:

	No.	1	2	3	Total.
F. C. Weber	35	179	174	167	520
Tho. Miller	30	159	179	155	493

CINCINNATI.

Trade has been highly satisfactory from all points of view during the past week. The demand for stock has been remarkably active; a shortening in the supply has helped things wonderfully, and prices had an upward tendency. A spell of cool weather has also added its influence and there is a marked improvement in many kinds of stock.

The retail stores, too, were doing a good business and every morning there is a rush at the commission houses that sometimes resembles a bargain counter at a dry goods store. The buyer is fast recognizing the fact that the early bird gets the fattest worm, and many florists are waiting about the doors of the wholesale houses before the latter have opened in the morning.

All this has its effect on the market, and generally ends in helping to fill the purse of the grower. It goes without saying that the wholesale man is also benefited and I believe that the retailer is also, as when flowers are scarce business is plentiful, and vice versa.

The cool spell did wonders for the carnation and I doubt if there is another market that is receiving a better grade of carnation than Cincinnati is at present. Although a week ago it looked as if the carnation had seen its finish for this season, a few cool days told another story, and I do not doubt that the first of July will see a better grade of them in this market than ever before at that time. White ones are scarce. Red is holding out very well as to color and size. Ordinary grades in all colors bring 75 cents to $1 per 100; medium and fancy, $1.50 and $2.00.

Roses, too, are doing nicely and anything fit to sell is sold out clean and quick. The demand for them is much greater than the supply, so the price is well sustained. There are great quantities of red roses, both Liberty and Meteor, to be had and this color is the only one that you are sure of getting at all times. Some very good Beauties are seen at times and the best of them are first class and bring $2.50 to $3 per doz., other grades down to $1 per doz. The very best Brides, Bridesmaids, Liberties, etc., bring 5 to 6 cents, others 2 to 4 cents, and, owing to scarcity, these figures are well sustained.

In other stock, Sweet peas are very slow sale and the majority go for 25 cents per 100, and many at less. A few pæonies are still to be seen but they meet slow sale. Although there is a very good demand for longiflorum lilies there are next to none to be had. It would pay some large grower of this bulb to try this market.

Smilax is unusually fine and there is enough to fill all orders at $12.50 to $15 per 100. Asparagus in strings and bunches sells well at 50 cents each. Eastern ferns are now in and bring $1.50 per 1,000.

Notes.

The first out-door meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society will be held on July 10th, Thursday, at Chas. Pommert's farm at Amelia, Ohio. Trains going leave Carvel street station, East End, at 9:15 and 11:25 a. m. and returning leave Amelia at 4 p. m. The majority of the florists will take the 11:25 train. Everyone is invited to be present.

DETROIT.

It is a long time since any note appeared from Detroit but we are still alive, though in rather a torpid condition, resulting from the very changeable weather with which we have been favored, and at this writing one cannot sit out of doors and must have a fire to be comfortable inside. Yet everything in vegetation seems to grow and do well, especially weeds and carnation plants.

Spring sales have been better than for some years, all the florists reporting trade as very good, the last week being especially so in the cut flower line on account of the graduating exercises of the public schools, so that both wholesaler and retailer feel satisfied with the wind up and are looking forward to a well earned outing.

Club Notes.

The last meeting was mostly taken up by a discussion of the merits of different brands of so-called sheep manure brought out by Mr. Scribner asking a few questions of a representative of an eastern firm, one of which was: "What do you put in it to make it smell so strong?" But he was not able to elicit much information.

It was decided to take an outing to Bois Blanc Park early in July with all the families and employes, where games, etc., will fill out the day.

Mr. Bigsbee, of Clucas & Boddington was present and gave a very interesting talk on the various new carnations he had seen growing this season.

RAG.

LONDON, ONT.

Now that the season is nearly over and we can view our empty houses and have a little time to compare the season's sales with those of last year, it is very gratifying to note the decided increase in sales and the improvement in prices, the latter a fair average of 25 per cent on all bedding stock. Cut flowers, too, have maintained a uniform price and steady demand, with no surplus worth speaking about. On the market enormous quantities of bedding plants and annuals, pansies and vegetable plants in boxes and baskets, have been disposed of at better prices than for several seasons. The weather has been very favorable for planting; though cold and frosty at times there has been an abundance of rain and vegetation is luxuriant.

It is not too early to think about convention matters, and with the central location of the convention city (Hamilton, Ont.) there should be a large attendance, not only of Canadians, but its convenient location should induce many from across the border who find the distance an obstacle in attending the S. A. F. meeting.

ROCKFORD, ILL.—Mrs. James Corlett, daughter of Mr. C. H. Woolsey, the florist, died last week, aged 23 years. Her death followed an operation at a local hospital, from the shock of which she failed to rally. Much sympathy is felt for the stricken relatives and friends.

WE ARE sorry to have to report that Mr. William Scott is laid up with an attack of neuralgia. He was therefore unable to send anything for this week's issue.

ST. PAUL.

The June trade in cut flowers has been very good. Everything has been in demand. Beauties retail at $3.00 to $6.00 per dozen, other roses at $1.50, with a few fancy Meteors at $2.00. Carnations are 50 and 75c per dozen. Sweet peas 25c per bunch of 25. Valleys 75c per dozen for good stock. Pæonies are about all gone; they have been in fair demand at 50c to $1.00 per dozen.

All stock is now quite scarce. The growers are throwing out their old roses and there are not enough planted for summer blooming to supply the local demand. Carnations are becoming quite small, owing to the hot weather. Outside sweet peas are beginning to come in. Funeral designs have been in great demand, and there has been an unusually heavy shipping trade for weddings, school commencements, etc.

A. S. Swanson is cutting some very nice longiflorum lilies which are in good demand at this time.

Holm & Olsen are receiving some choice carnations from P. Clausen of Albert Lea.

Carl Petersen, who came here in the winter from Chicago, and has been working for L. L. May & Co., has started in business for himself. He will erect some houses on Stryker avenue and grow bedding stock principally.

N. C. Hansen has purchased five acres of ground containing a house on Dale and Maryland streets and will soon erect a range of houses for growing carnations.

L. L. May & Co. will erect six new houses with an aggregate of 15,000 square feet of glass and rebuild their large show house erected 15 years ago. Mr. Ickes, with A. Dietsch & Co., Chicago, was a recent caller, coming up to draw plans for these houses.

Holm & Olsen have broken ground for a range of houses, on Duke street near Pleasant avenue.

J. McHutchinson, representing Aug. Rhetert, of New York, was a recent caller.

Visitors to the Seedsmen's Convention in our sister city are beginning to arrive. Among those calling to-day were C. P. Branslan, of San Jose, Cal.; Mr. Craig, of Memphis, Tenn.; and Mr. Corneli, of Schisler-Corneli Co., St. Louis, Mo.

L. L. May and family have moved to their summer home at Mayfield Farms, near Lakeland. X. Y. Z.

De Haven, Pa.—Wm. Scott, formerly with Bassett & Washburne, Hinsdale, Ill., has taken a position with John L. Wyland here.

Trade Conditions.

The florists are having a chance to recuperate after their hard work of the past six weeks. The demand for plants has been far greater this year than ever before, and instead of having a large number left over, the different florists have been chasing all over to get stock to fill their orders.

Prices have been fair. In cut flowers good stock is scarce and in demand, while much of the common stock goes into the trash heap. There have been the usual June weddings, some of which used elaborate church decorations. Roses are selling from $1 to $3 per dozen; carnations, 50 cents to 75 cents.

Notes.

At Benson's new place in South Denver we find his carnations and violets all planted in the benches and doing nicely. He will not put in his glass until later in the season. At his old place in Petersburg his carnations look well for this time of the year; in fact, they have been at the top notch during the season. He gives up this place, which he leased, in July and Andrew Haig will lease it and grow flowers and vegetables.

A. W. Lewis, of the Gallup Floral Co., has been quite sick, but I am glad to state is again up and around the store.

Ben Boldt, foreman for the Park Floral Co., has resigned and accepted a position in the same capacity at Daniels & Fisher's plant "Mud Lake". Ben is very popular among both his employers and those employed by him, as was shown one evening just before he left. The boys prepared lunch in the potting sheds and during the evening presented him with a watch charm, and Mr. Valentine, representing the Park Floral Co., gave him a handsome gold watch.

The Denver Floral Co at its next meeting will discuss the question of having a 'mum show this fall and we expect a large attendance at the meeting. The club is doing nicely, with fair attendance, considering that we meet twice a month. One thing that favors the attendance is the fact that rarely, if ever, have any of the five officers been absent since the first of the year. That brings out the boys. The club is going to give its annual picnic soon and all are looking forward to it with much pleasure, especially as it is in the hands of an A 1 committee — Fraser, Haig and Shiloock.

The club had made and presented to A. J. Graham, manager of the spring show, an elaborate Masonic watch charm. Mr. Graham was called to the floor and thanked for the care and attention he had devoted to the show to make it the success it was, and was presented with what he thought was a set of resolutions, and on being asked to read them he opened the scroll of paper, handsomely tied with ribbon, and you can imagine his surprise when instead of written resolutions there was the charm. Though taken aback, he rallied and replied in his usual happy manner.

Trade Conditions.

The phases and conditions of weather are so closely connected with the operations carried on by those to whose interest this journal is devoted that naturally the subject comes foremost in any discussions of gardening operations and trade prospects. In this section we have had ample rains, and the crops out-doors show the effects; but the weather is again cool, almost phenomenally so.

Last week, numerous commencements and weddings notwithstanding, trade was only ordinarily fair for the season. Good stuff was in demand, and like the proverbial hen's teeth very scarce. To-day (June 23) good roses are sought for. Carnations are fast running out, though a few good ones arrive, our friends on the mountain tops contributing quite a liberal proportion of those so graded.

Sweet peas were injured by the dry weather, but are now coming in better shape. Cochet roses, pink and white, are abundant outside, making now longer stems, and dahlias and phlox are in evidence.

A Notable Decoration.

A wedding notable for the handsome and tasteful decorations supplied by Wm. J. Halliday took place Saturday at Mt. Washington, one of our residential suburbs, the bride being a daughter of General Thomas J. Shryock, late state treasurer, and Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Masons of Maryland, and the groom Mr. J. M. Price.

The house is one such as rarely falls into the hands of the decorator, giving unusual opportunities for effective composition. On the exterior, columns the whole height of the structure support the pediment of the gable, and those were entwined with heavy garlands of green and white flowers. The house is a square one, built round a central hall open to the roof and nearly 40 feet high, with a gallery around the second floor. The front doors were closed, access to the hall, where the ceremony was held being through the side rooms opening on to spacious verandas, and a temporary altar decked with a profusion of white flowers was raised at the usual entrance and facing a generous stairway, down which came the wedding party. In the center hanging clear from the roof was a marriage bell made of white peonies and asparagus, whilst the balustrades of the gallery and of the steps were profusely covered with Harrisii lilies, Bride roses and smilax, palms of noble stature and graceful ferns being disposed to give effect to the scene.

The bride's bouquet was of valley, white orchids and maidenhair ferns; the bridesmaids carried large bunches of adiantums, and the flower girl a basket of valley and ferns. About 600 guests were present, many of whom were enthusiastic in admiration of the floral embellishments. R.

DENVER, COLO.

On June 14 Bernhard Boldt severed his connection with the Park Floral Co. to accept a similar positien at the Mud Lake greenhouses of Daniels & Fisher at Harris station, the inducement being a very substantial increase in salary. Ben (as he is generally called) came to the Park Floral Co. from Rebstock's place in Buffalo two years age, and he has shown himself a good grower and a good fellow.

The employes of the concern gathered in the potting shed on Ben's last night and were served refreshments by the company. John Berry then presented Ben with a handsome Odd Fellow's badge on behalf of the employes, and in a neat little speech expressed the sorrow that all felt at parting. Ben was much surprised, but managed to express his thanks and appreciation in words that were none the less heartfelt for being so few. Every one present was then astonished when Mr. Valentine stepped forward and expressed his appreciation of the good and faithful service that had been rendered to him by Boldt and his regret at losing him. He finished by handing Ben a handsome geld watch, suitably inscribed. This was the last straw, and Ben's were not the only eyes that filled with tears. The occasion was one that will long be remembered by these present. A considerate fereman, loyal workman and an appreciative employer make a combination all too rare. PARK.

AMERICAN ART INDUSTRIES.

Under the above heading the New York Tribune is printing a series of interesting descriptive artieles, and the third one, whieh appeared June 14, is devoted to horticultural architeeture. It contains a very interesting description of the work done by the Lord & Burnham Co., Irvington-on-Hudson, N. Y., together with an illustration showing some conservatories ereeted by the company at Bethayres, Pa.

Our readers are thoroughly familiar with the large bnsiness done by the company in the designing and erecting of conservatories and greenhouses and in the mannfacturing of heating and ventilating apparatus, but the following extract from the historical sketeh of the firm will no doubt be of general interest:

The Lord & Burnham Company was founded by a man of versatile genius, Frederick A. Lord, a Boston boy who was educated as a mechanic, and who rose early in life to a position at the head of the old Eaton Mills, in Buffalo. Mr. Lord, who was full of artistic tastes, then lived in Delaware Ave., one of the most beautiful streets in any American city, and occupied his leisure in horticulture, and soon acquired such a reputation in this avocation that he became a consulting authority for the entire region. He coveted and finally built a vinery for his own establishment, and as a result found himself engaged in building greenhouses, at first as an amateur, but as early as 1856 as a business. Working alone for sixteen years, Mr. Lord erected greenhouses all about the country, recognized everywhere as an artist in the truest sense; but he had not been at work a year before he began to recreate his product. He was not satisfied to build glass houses which, when sheltered and warmed, would grow plants. He had a practical genius for invention, which transformed everything it touched. He furnished the Chickerings with the first scroll music holder for the piano. He got up the first machine for "rope moulding." Always thinking out toward the beauty that arises from supreme fitness, he soon evolved a series of architectural improvements in greenhouse building which are largely in use to-day. The elliptical roof was invented by Mr. Lord early in his career, but it still furnishes the principle upon which the best modern greenhouses are built.

The business of greenhouse construction, however, cannot be said to have reached its present development under Mr. Lord. It waited the advent of Mr. W. Addison Burnham, who, having married the daughter of Mr. Lord, entered the concern in 1872. To the administration of the building department Mr. Burnham brought a business man's trained grasp of detail, and as an outcome, Lord & Burnham began to manufacture the constituent parts of their greenhouses in quantity. These being always in stock, it remained for the architectural department to design and plan with the detail of the stock in mind. This resulted in a great saving of time and expense to the purchaser, and a very great economy of labor to the builders. Customers who had heretofore been obliged to wait months for the manufacture of each component of their houses, could, under this system, be supplied expeditiously and with a much more perfect building. With the manufactory began a steady perfecting of the details of greenhouse work. The introduction of the iron frame by the Lord & Burnham Company followed in 1881. This announces the modern American greenhouse, and its appearance gave a tremendous impetus to the business. It was quickly adopted by other builders, but the latter made a mistake carefully avoided by the more experienced inventors. Discarding the use of wood altogether, the imitators undertook to build solely of iron, which resulted in a condition impossible to plant life. Either the house was cold or, if heated, required a temperature uncontrollable and excessive. The method of the Lord & Burnham Company has always been to cover the iron with wood, the non-conductor, which by protecting the iron, prevents contraction and expansion, and consequent breakage of glass. It may be added that cypress is the wood most used by the company in its greenhouse work, a material almost as indestructible as iron itself.

New London, O.—On June 12th a hail storm swept through this little city, but fortunately Chase & Son, the florists, suffered damage to their houses amounting to only about $25. They are very thankful that they escaped so easily. Six years ago they lost $1,000 in five minutes time from hail.

Middletown, Pa.—Mr. Linus Fenical, the Main street florist, will soon add some new glass to his establishment.

ADDRESS

H. H. BERGER & CO., (Established 1878.) 47 Barclay Street, New York City.

PIPING.

In reply to the inquiry of J. D. S., assuming his houses are level, the method he proposes, of starting a circulation from the near end of each house, dropping into the return main at the far end, and have this return main extend through the house back to the rear end again, is practicable but not desirable; it would entail a trench the entire length of each house to accommodate the return main.

A more simple and effective plan is suggested by the accompanying plan; it consists of the steam pipe or flow rising directly from the boiler to the highest point overhead, then grading downward in the potting shed along the end of the houses; from this main connections would be run through the partition and drop to each coil as indicated, the coils then grade all the way down around the house from A to B, then dropping into the main return connection. In this manner, by valving the several pipes, one or more circuits around the house can be opened.

The main steam connection from the boiler should be 3-inch and the return connection 2-inch, reducing at the necessary points as shown. Of course, with this plan, it will be necessary to step over the pipes to get out of the house at the far end, but a small platform at the door readily overcomes the slight inconvenience. Henry W. Gibbons.

New York.

FLUE FITTINGS.

Are there any fittings on the market to be used for connecting 2-inch and 2½-inch flues? B. Co.

In reply to the inquiry of B. Co., fittings for 2½-inch tubes or flues can be procured from any representative house manufacturing greenhouse heating fittings, but I know of no one making a line of fittings especially for 2-inch tubes and flues. In my practice I use for connecting 2-inch tubes 2½-inch wrought iron collars, caulking in the joints, and have some of these collars threaded on the outside at one end for insertion in the regular 2½-inch screwed steam fittings.

New York. Henry W. Gibbons.

Olean, N. Y.—D. R. Herron has glass and other material on the ground for a large addition to his greenhouse plant. The new houses will require 12,000 feet of glass and this addition will double the size of his plant.

I would no more be without the Review than I would be without a boiler.—H. G. Fishel, Corfu, N. Y.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL.

After reading Mr. Wm. Scott's Manual, we wish to say that we consider it without equal as a book of reference for busy florists.
GEORGE M. KELLOGG.
Pleasant Hill, Mo.

Mr. Scott's superb work, "The Florists' Manual," was indeed worth waiting for. When compared with the amount of practical information it contains, the selling price, $5.00, seems a mere bagatelle.
Oakland, Md. H. WEBER & SONS.

It is the best book of the kind ever published. There is more in it than in any other book I have ever seen. I am delighted with it.
Chicago. JOHN THORPE.

The copy of the "Florists' Manual" was duly received. I am very well pleased with same. The more I read it the better satisfied I am with it, and there are one or two articles alone in it that are each worth all you ask for the book, for everything is made so plain and all details are right to the point. I trust you may have a good and ready sale for the same. M. S. WORDEN.
North Adams, Mass.

The only fault to be found with it is when you get reading it the midnight oil is liable to run low and you have to go on to gas or reluctantly break off, either going to bed or first taking a look over the houses to see if the temperature tallies with the Manual.
Hartford, Conn. GEO. S. OSBORN.

We are in receipt of "The Florists' Manual," by Mr. Scott, and may say it is the right book for the florist, published at the right time. It is what we all need.
BOBBINK & ATKINS.
Rutherford, N. J.

Am much pleased with the Manual. It is just what I have been looking for. Something that we can understand, and enjoy reading.
Etna, Pa. M. NAUMAN.

I am very much pleased with the Manual. It is just what we have needed for a long time. N. ZWEIFEL.
Milwaukee, Wis.

It is certainly a neat and handsome book and does you credit.
BENJAMIN HAMMOND.
Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y.

It is a work of art and should be in the hands of all live florists. Its useful and instructive contents cannot fail to be a benefit to all in the trade.
C. C. POLLWORTH CO.
Milwaukee, Wis.

I greatly appreciate the Florists' Manual. It is a splendid text-book.
JOHN WELSH YOUNG.
Germantown, Pa.

The Florists' Manual is worth five times the price. It is just what a busy florist wants.
Columbus, O., B. BUEHLER & SON.

Am well pleased with the Manual. It is a practical, everyday helper, concise and to the point. W. A. KENNEDY.
Milwaukee, Wis.

Am very much pleased with the book; it is very handy for reference.
Macomb, Ill. F. E. BONHAM.

Unlike so many of our books, it has the very flavor and essence of actual experience.
Ithaca, N. Y. L. H. BAILEY.

We find the book very useful as a reference in answering the many questions about plants that we receive almost every day.
Philadelphia. JOS. KIFT & SON.

We have gotten much valuable instruction from the Florists' Manual and prize it highly.
Franklin, Tenn. TRUETT BROS.

The Florists' Manual is a gem. No florist can afford to be without it.
Madison, N. J. A. J. BAUR.

If everyone has enjoyed your book as I have it's a successful publication. It is different from our usual horticultural works, being plain and concise—just what one wants.
Flushing, N. Y. H. D. DARLINGTON.

I am more than pleased with the Florists' Manual. OTT BROWN.
Cape May City, N. J.

Manual to hand. Am well satisfied that it is the best work of its kind ever published.
Joliet, Ill. JAS. HARTSHORNE.

No progressive florist, old or young, can afford to be without the Florists' Manual. The old florist needs it, for reference, to aid a defective memory, and the young florist wants it as a guide in this progressive era of the florists' business. J. T. TEMPLE.
Davenport, Ia.

The Commissioners of Parks and Boulevards some time since directed that a library be started of such books as deal with subjects pertaining to park work, and to that end an order has been given for a number of books, among which is your "The Florists' Manual."
After reading this book carefully, I am greatly pleased, and wish to congratulate you on the practical manner with which you have treated the subject.
The book is placed where it will be accessible to all of our greenhouse employes, where this board expects to reap a reward many times the cost of the book. Respectfully yours,
COMMISSIONERS OF PARKS AND BOULEVARDS, R. J. CORYELL, Gen'l Supt.
Detroit, Mich.

The book is written for the working gardener, and Mr. Scott's reputation is so well secured that he will find among his gardening friends a host of genuine admirers. As a writer on practical gardening subjects, he is a recognized authority. * * * Mr. Scott has long been an employer and knows what information young gardeners, or those with little experience, need, and he has his whole subject so perfectly at command that he can give the most desirable and essential information in the clearest language and with satisfactory brevity. The book is a distinct and important gain to the practical garden literature of this country, and it should be in the hands of every gardener, and everyone else engaged or interested in ornamental horticulture. The price of the book is $5, which seems somewhat high, but for useful information it is worth every cent of it.—Vick's Magazine.

Florists' Manual, by William Scott. Publishers, Florists' Publishing Company, Chicago. Price, $5.
From advance sheets of the Florists' Manual, kindly sent us by the publishers, as well as from those which have appeared from time to time in the trade press, we have formed an idea of the general scope and usefulness of Mr. Scott's book, and we now hail with a great deal of satisfaction the work as a completed whole. Several handbooks of a more or less similar nature, dealing with commercial plant culture in America, or some portions of it rather, have been placed on the market; but the teachings which they convey have, as the years rolled by, become to a greater or less extent obsolete, owing to the continued mutability in methods, etc., so that the Manual containing, as it does, matter which is strictly up-to-date, and thoroughly practical, should meet with a ready acceptance among all engaged in the industry upon which it treats. The caliber of Mr. Scott's instructions, in matters horticultural, is too well known to the trade to require any elaboration at our hands; suffice it to say that the same soundness of doctrine, and masterful handling of every subject dealt with, generally characterizes the text of the book now before us. Nearly 200 individual items are discussed, and, as regards plants, largely those of commercial value, the staples of the trade receiving greatest attention.—Florists' Exchange.

The Florists' Manual, by Wm. Scott. Florists' Publishing Co., Chicago. A reference book for commercial florists.
The author's first aim in preparing this work was to fill a long felt want among florists—a book describing the best plants commercially, with cultural advice founded on experience. Viewed in this light, it is a valuable and instructive work, very complete in its details. But it need not be confined to circulation among the florists and others commercially connected, although gardeners and amateurs need not expect in it a work exactly fitting their requirements. Rather judge it through the author's own words, i. e.: "If those who favor us with a perusal of its pages glean only one hint which may help them * * * they will have received value for their money." A work resulting from Mr. Scott's long and varied experience, "from selling a bunch of violets over the counter to planting a tree or seeding a lawn or building a greenhouse," cannot but throw out many hints of value to any one interested in any line of horticulture or flower gardening. The comparatively small index confronting the reviewer at first is far from encouraging, but as the purpose of the author is more clearly brought to light, it is better appreciated. It shows the intention to treat of the most desirable and profitable things to handle—a condensation which many will enjoy. Many interesting subjects are brought to headings, such as "Easter Plants," "Watering," "Decorations," "Potting," "Bedding Plants," etc. Not the least of value to the possessor of this book are the beautiful half-tone illustrations, numbering more than 100, and thoroughly illustrating the subjects treated. Critical persons may object to the interspersing of advertisements with the reading matter, though it is not made very obtrusive; yet it must be remembered that the work is designed for commercial purposes, and not strictly as a library book.—Meehan's Monthly.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL...
By WM. SCOTT

IS A BOOK of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review) and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopædia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

Flowers for Wearing.

Every few years, nay at some periods every few months, the people adopt some craze that most forcibly reminds us of the logic in Darwinian theories. In no other country has the wearing of badges and buttons become so general as in the United States. The Grand Army adopted their button and it was recognized as a badge of honor, but now every woman, man and child wants to wear something that means nothing except to be in line with the vast army of faddists. These buttons and badges have long ceased to be of any value, but do an immense harm to the florist's trade. These crazy baubles have dispensed with the wearing of flowers to such a degree that it may be safely said that the boutonniere and corsage bouquet section of the business has dropped to 20 per cent of what it was even ten years ago. Is it possible that "familiarity breeds contempt" and that florists as a class are adverse to the wearing of flowers? It might be well to do otherwise and grasp every opportunity to make flowers popular on all occasions.

Blue corn flowers make about the best or at least the most modest boutonniere or corsage bouquet to wear during the day. Dark crimson or pink carnations are worn by some, and the ladies just now are using a combination of white water lilies and blue cornflowers. But as stated above, flowers are not worn as much as we would like. Gardenias continue to be a favorite flower among those selected to be wealthy. There are quite a few good blooms coming into the market, and they are sure to be even more popular than ever next season. Might be just as well to study and pay more attention to the cultivation of this elite flower.

Specialties.

And by the way, Mr. Grower who does a local or fancy shipping trade, it might be well for you to plant that empty or nonprofitable bench with some old, sweet, once popular rose. Make your place famous for one thing, which can often only be done by growing something nobody else has got. It will pay you to break away from the beaten track in the matter of flowers. Double flowering hibiscus will be a most valuable flower this month. The white are very good for funeral work, the colored ones cut in branches, make good decorative material. There are some very beautiful varieties which it would be well to get acquainted with. They are the best the nursery can give us when flowers are scarcest.

Phloxes.

Just now and for some time to come phloxes give us the very best material for showy decorations. These beautiful flowers can be used for almost anything. The white, lavender and purple sorts are excellent for funeral work, be it bunches, wreaths or base embellishment. They mix well with other flowers, say flat bunches of lavender or purple phlox and Lilium longiflorum, or you can make crosses of the white or the above colors in conjunction with other flowers. There is no large design in which you cannot use these flowers, and we have done some of our best summer wedding decorations with them, tying large bunches of pink or red down all the pew ends in the center aisle and having the altar one mass of white with just a cluster of light pink to give tone to the work. These flowers are good for general vase work and for cheap table decorations. They are fine when used in separate colors.

Blue Flowers.

Blue flowers are often wanted for college or national colors in design work and very often purple is used as a substitute for blue. Many shades of blue flowers will be procurable for the next few weeks. The delphinium family gives us every tone and shade of color wanted. Some of the light blues are lovely and can be used in almost any kind of work. There are many cases where the lobelias are useful, the compact kinds for solid or fringe work and the gracilis or trailing ones for boxes or hanging baskets. We have seen them doing finely in high altitudes, such places as roof gardens, etc. Yucca filamentosa is a fine thing to use for funeral work when flowers are scarce, and used in its immense spikes they are about the most impressive flower you can get for large decorations. They go fine in alternate clusters with gladiolus and lilies.

Gladioli.

Speaking of gladiolus reminds us that they are another family of flowers it will be difficult to dispense with. They are despised by some, same as most things that are over plentiful, but nevertheless their great beauty and general usefulness will always make them the most valuable of flowers. They constitute one of the best and most showy window flowers during hot weather. The white and purple are excellent for funeral; the others, which almost cover the entire range of colors, can be used to great advantage in general work. We would strongly advise retailers who do much of a summer trade or who consider it necessary to keep up a show of flowers to occasionally visit some large bulb grower and make a contract or arrangements for regular supply of showy outdoor flowers. Growers who have grounds and do a local trade should always have a supply of seasonable flowers.

Lilies.

Lilium longiflorum in some cities at the present time may be considered a drug on the market, but they are nevertheless a God send, and it seems to us far better to grow them for summer trade, even at a small price, than grow them for Easter with the severe losses through blight that has of late years made the venture a most expensive one. Continue to give us lots of them all the year around if you possibly can, and as with other flowers, consider the average and not the accidental price.

Galax Leaves.

I know that when we say anything derogatory to the extensive use of galax leaves we win disfavor in some quarters, but the facts compel us to say that they have become in a measure a curse to American floriculture. They have been and still are a blessing, a savior to many, for there is more profit in them perhaps than in anything handled in the retail store, but as it is today where they are recommended and pushed on every possible occasion they do incalculable harm to the cut flower trade. To be sure a wreath of galax can be made to look very pretty but there is no sentiment about it except in the design. We must once in a while consider the millions of dollars invested in floriculture and it might be well to remember that things overdone never amount to much.

Funeral Designs.

Hollyhocks will be in demand. The long spikes of single and double colored ones are splendid for decorative work and the white will, of course, be good for groundwork in funeral designs. The days of stiff funeral designs promise to return shortly. Although they have been in disfavor among the wealthier folks they have always been a necessity in the poorer sections. In such places the people want good big, showy designs and it either costs much or is impossible to supply suitable materials for loose work.

You can, especially at this time of the year, buy many kinds of short stemmed or small flowers cheaply, which enables one to give more satisfaction, providing you can choose your way of making up. And even now, when roses are poor and small, it is necessary to compactly arrange them in order to have them show to advantage. To the majority of people who order funeral designs roses are the most considered flower, but you can satisfy most people by giving them an apparent value for their money, and this can often be done by using almost any white flower and making roses, or a favorite flower, a prominent feature. This can seldom be done by a scattering arrangement. One dozen roses are more impressive in a cluster than twice that many scattered in design work. IVERA.

PAEONIA FESTIVA MAXIMA.

This description should have been given with the cut in last issue of the REVIEW. With M. Pailette of France and T. C. Thurlow, the paeony prince of New England, this flower stands at the head of the procession of beauty. It has been propagated for from fifteen to twenty years in Europe and America and it is impossible to supply the demand for it. One of the largest wholesale growers sells the flowers in Chicago for $2 per dozen and wholesales the roots at $1 each. Western growers are in the market now hunting places where they can buy by the hundred thousand.

This is a very large flower of pure snowy whiteness, with the center sprinkled with drops of deep red, which seem to emphasize the whiteness. As a cut flower it is one of the finest. Taken just as the buds open and placed in cold storage it will keep for weeks. When brought out into the light and warmth it unfolds its peerless beauty. It must be cut with long stems and these seem to store vigor enough to push the flower to its full unfolding.

On some accounts it surpasses Baroness Schroeder in its climatic adaptations. The dry air of the west suits the former to perfection and makes it the very queen of loveliness. It does not do so well in the moister air of the east. Festiva Maxima is quite fragrant, which adds much to its value. One trouble has been to secure plants true to name. Some Holland dealers have flooded the country with spurious ones, and those who bought them have scattered them far and wide.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

The End of the Fiscal Year.

The 1st of July of each year has always been with us the end and beginning of the fiscal year. Others may have found some other date to suit them better, but it seems to us that whether you are in the wholesale or retail business, whether you both grow and retail or only keep a store for retailing, that from the 1st to the 10th of July is the deadest calm in the whole cycle of 365 days.

"Open confession is good for the soul" and I don't mind owning that for many (too many) years we went along in a happy, go-lucky style, not knowing within $1,000.00 what had been the profits or loss of the business. The way we figured was, "Well, we don't owe as much as we did last July, and then we built that house last fall, and we have lived, and we paid $600.00 for paving the side street. Oh, we must have done pretty well."

Now, perhaps I was in the minority in this slovenly way of looking into the business, yet I believe I was numbered in the great majority. There is no doubt the largest firms know to a cent what they have made and where they stand, but the great army of florists, those whose sales amount to from $10,000.00 to $20,000.00 a year, have little idea what their year's business has returned, or what is of still more importance, what department did pay and what department had a leaky attachment through which the profits of one department flowed out in a steady but continuous stream. I will just interpose the remark here that I am well aware that every business has to carry some department that scarcely returns any profit, but no one is obliged to continue a branch of his business that is a real loss and pulling down the profits of another.

I know a man very well who until about three years ago did quite a large business at his greenhouses in the residence portion of the city, which included almost all departments. He also ran a store or shop in the center of the city, paying a large rent. For years this man sent cut flowers produced at the greenhouses to the store, as well as the flowering plants they could use. Orders taken at the greenhouses were often filled at the store, and orders for decorations taken at the store were filled from the greenhouses. No separate account was kept, no credit given for the flowers and plants sent to the store, and no credit given the store for flowers that were purchased for the store and then wanted at the greenhouses. The general result of the two places was lumped together and guessed at, as above described. If he was hard up he had done badly; if he was comparatively easy and the atmosphere and environment were rosy he had done well. He had no definite knowledge whether the store was keeping the greenhouses or the greenhouses paying the expenses of the store.

I trust there are many hundreds who have such a business and not only know what each end is doing but find them both profitable, but alas, I feel sure there are many who do not, and they sail along with several leaks, yet they blindly stick to the pumps and labor along just sufficiently hard to keep the old ship afloat. This man, who would rather talk plants or building and several other things, thought it was time to see how the store paid, and three months' accurate watch of the business with careful figures proved that the store was eating up fifty per cent. of the greenhouse profits, so as soon as possible this end was "cut out" entirely. The greenhouses were sufficiently among the people that the store could be dispensed with.

In many cases, however, the store would be indispensable and then instead of abandoning it reform would have to take place. It would have to be run right, better stock, better attention, better window and all that goes to make a successful business, of which I am not going into now. I merely cited this man's experience to show that he jogged along for years and then discovered the big leak. This man has told me since that the few dollars he spent in extra bookkeeping and which discovered to him the true state of affairs was the best money and time he ever spent.

Now, reader, don't take what I have said of this man's experience as any inference that the store, even at high rent, is not a good end of the business. In the highest civilization and most advanced state of society division of labor is the condition that prevails, and perhaps there are as many instances which could be cited where a successful store man has run a "growing establishment" at a loss as the successful greenhouse man making a failure of his city store. The all important thing to do is to find out and remedy the weakness where it exists. I have attempted to illustrate where a serious loss may occur by having two branches of your business and without accurate bookkeeping you may be unaware at which end it exists. There are, however, for every firm who is so situated at least twenty florists, big and little, who do all their business at the greenhouse, or keep a retail store and grow nothing, depending entirely on buying everything. It is just as essential for them to know what they are making or losing as for those who are more spread out.

It is notorious, if not to the world at large, at least to me, that the really good gardener and successful grower, yes, and even good talker to his customers, is seldom a good financial man. To be bothered with figures and small affairs is beneath him. His mind soars higher, and he is apt to be absorbed in new plans and methods, new ideas, and to consider that as long as he is not in trouble that accounts and bookkeeping are of least importance. In this cruel world, where every dog is trying to rob the bone from the other dog, the financial end is of the utmost importance, and smaller minds whose vision sees a dollar bill continually before their noses, realize this and may neglect other ends of their business, but they grab the dollar. I don't wish to flatter or attempt to exalt the florist, and by that I mean the real gardener, the lover of his plants, the conscientious executor of his business, has, I believe, an intellect above the average business man, and will be found too often indifferent or lacking in the financial end of his business, and for this carelessness the penalty is often a chronic state of "hardupness" or near the ragged edge.

Now for the practical part of this story. Every one of you should keep an accurate account of your business. In the matter of stock taking our business is not so easily got at as the dry goods or hardware merchant's, who can, on a certain day of the week or of the year, take an inventory of all that his store contains, but that is not of so much consequence with us, as you can form a pretty good idea of how your stock compares with a similar date a year ago, especially when it is at its lowest ebb. I am not going to tell you how to get at an accurate knowledge of your business, because there are many methods, all good if faithfully carried out. It is merely to keep a daily record, all on one sheet, of your cash sales, your charge sales, your cash purchases, your credit purchases, your steady or monthly expenses, your daily incidental expenses. There is more detail to it than I have attempted to describe, but it takes but a few minutes at the close of the day or week, and if you know at the end of the year what your business has paid you, you can tell more easily what each month, week or day has developed.

There are many men, brilliant in many ways, yet cowards at money matters. They would much rather give $5.00 to a needy creature than to go out and collect a just debt. Face the music, know just where you stand and be ready to retrench if needed. Don't let your mother-in-law's small legacy of $900.00 put into the business lead you to think you have done well, but find out what your business has actually done. If not paying, find out why not, and if it is you are warranted in increasing your area of glass.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

During such weather as we have been having lately, cold and an excess of moisture in the atmosphere, great care will have to be used in watering young stock. It is safer to have them a little on the dry side than to get the benches sodden. In such weather, when there is little evaporation, the act of syringing will supply sufficient moisture to the roots to keep up a good action till brighter weather comes.

As this is the season when disbudding has to be done, I wish to call attention to this subject again, as this is an operation very frequently done in a careless and slipshod fashion. To get strong wood for a first cut and to also form a good bush, the bud should be cut off along with the three or four eyes below it. The strength of the plant is thus diverted to the remaining eyes, which will break much stronger than if all the eyes were left. A pair of well sharpened scissors is about as handy a tool as can be used for this purpose as it saves that dragging of the roots which is the consequence of an ill sharpened knife. Even for cutting blooms this is handier and makes a neater and shorter wound than a knife does. After a little practice I find that the men favor this instead of the knife. RIBES.

RED ROSES.

Please tell us through the REVIEW which is the best red rose to grow in the same house with Brides and Maids. We have tried Meteor, but on account of mildew we were unable to get a favorable result. The red rose must be a good free bloomer. H. C. G.

This is one of the questions which has been puzzling experts and hybridists so long. We all thought that Liberty was to fill the bill, and fondly hope so yet. It is a little cranky, to be sure, but it is head and shoulders above all the others.

Wootton is also a good rose for such a house, but it is very liable to black spot under such conditions. RIBES.

DAMPNESS IN ROSE HOUSES.

In his seasonable rose hints in the REVIEW, Ribes says: "If the leaves show dampness in the morning that is sure indication that the ventilation has been deficient."

I wish Ribes would tell me through the REVIEW why mine are always damp in the morning, drops hanging from every point of the leaves of the young plants. I leave plenty of ventilation on at night, the ventilators being often nearly full open and the temperature not below 65 degrees either inside or out. We always have trouble this way except during heavy firing in winter.

I will be very glad if Ribes or any one else would throw any light on the subject. Ribes would not advise using fire heat at this season even in this case, would he?

Beauty is the principal rose grown, and although it grows well I have much trouble with black spot, owing to dampness at night. How low a temperature is it safe to allow a Beauty house to drop to before starting steam? How high should ventilators be at night when temperature is 60 degrees outside?

INTERESTED READER.

I have seen just such another case as this, the cause in this case being that the house was situated in a much sheltered spot on low marshy land little above water level. The house was raised four feet and filled up with ashes, and the surrounding trees cut down and the trouble ceased.

This can also occur in a house where water is stored in open or partly open tanks. If the house is on high ground, with an ordinary exposure, and getting the careful attention I. R. evidently gives it, I am at a dead loss and cannot even guess at the cause.

During wet weather it is safe to turn on a pipe or two when the temperature drops below 60 degrees. With a temperature of 60 degrees or over outside during dry weather and not too much wind, the ventilators can be left full open. RIBES.

THE QUEEN OF THE COLUMBINES.

This is now an immense family of about fifty varieties and the number is increasing on account of the tendency to hybridize. I keep a large collection of thousands and it is a delight to watch them. They commence blooming early and keep at it a large part of the summer. For the most part I prefer mixed sorts on account of the rich variety of form and color. Some are deep purple, very double and quilled like a dahlia. Others are single with long spurs, some white, some golden and others deep blue, with other rich colors.

Four kinds grow in the Rocky Mountains. The canadensis is very early and continues in bloom a month. It has much shorter stems and brighter flowers than the Eastern type. Then there is the blue, and the golden, which is a flower of wondrous beauty with its immense and showy spurs. But the grandest of the whole family is the cærulea, which seems a photograph of the intensely blue and fleecy clouds which float over the mountains. This is the state flower of Colorado and the Columbine Association, with headquarters in Boston, are making an effort to have the columbine adopted as our national flower. In some parts of the mountains the cærulea grows to immense size. I have seen it over three inches in diameter. The long spurs and the deep blue and clean white make it exceedingly attractive.

Hitherto there has been some trouble in wintering them in the prairie states, even with the precaution of mulching, but a neat and tasty lath screen can be built and under this they will bloom beautifully and winter without mulching. You have then given them their own first conditions. It is better to plant these choice flowers in sheltered places and not give them the full sweep of the winds. When one gets fairly acquainted with this wonderful family he will not be without them. The golden columbine will break out in bloom almost all summer and often late in the fall.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the American Rose Society held in New York on Friday, June 21, it was resolved to accept the cordial invitation of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society to hold the next annual meeting at Horticultural Hall, Philadelphia. The meeting will take place in conjunction with the usual spring show of the horticultural society. Present: F. R. Newbold, J. N. May, B. Dorrance, E. G. Asmus and L. Barron, secretary.

CARNATIONS.

Varieties Least Subject to Bursting.

Which carnations, white, pink and maroon, are least subject to bursting of the calyx. F. B.

The varieties of carnations in pink, white and maroon that we find least subject to bursting of the calyx are as follows: In pink we have no variety that gives us a more even grade of bloom than Mrs. Joost. The quality is not so high as some others, but it will always grade as a good commercial bloom and never bursts a calyx. Dorothy has never burst a calyx with us nor have we heard any complaints from others. Would recommend this variety to those who want an easy grower and free bloomer. The Marquis also has a calyx that never bursts. The new variety Mrs. Nelson is another such variety. We have seen it growing for three years and have never seen a bursted calyx. This is one of its strong points. Last season I saw Cressbrook several times and found that it never split its calyx as far as I could see. In light pink we grow Elma and find it a good one. The originators claim a very strong calyx for Mrs. Higinbotham and several who have seen it growing tell me it is true, but I have only seen exhibition blooms. Morning Glory is very free and will burst its calyx but very little if you are not too reckless with it.

In white we found last season that Lorna was perhaps the least inclined to burst of any, unless we would except Queen Louise. Norway was not as satisfactory with us as the above two in that respect. Floral Hill needs 55 degrees in winter to keep it from bursting, but in spring and fall it is perfection itself. We hear this variety maligned a good deal, but we also find that every spring we are unable to propagate enough cuttings to fill our orders, and in the fall every plant we have left in the field finds a ready sale. Can you ask for better proof of a variety's good qualities? White Cloud does not burst any with us; grown in 52 degrees and in a heavy soil and as a mid-winter white it is grand. Lorna will likely take its place and Queen Louise will become a favorite commercial variety on account of its florif-erousness.

I cannot say much about the maroons as we do not grow them, but Gov. Roosevelt I am told never splits its calyx. Maceo and Gen. Gomez both have a more pleasing color, but I cannot say as to their calyx.

I forgot to mention in the pink class the variety Avondale. This variety, like its parent Armazindy, from which it sported about five years ago, never bursts its calyx and like its parent it is very prolific and a good money-maker. There are two others from the same source, namely The Sport and Guardian Angel, and both are good.

THE SEEDSMEN.

The twentieth annual meeting of the American Seed Trade Association at the West Hotel, Minneapolis, June 24 to 26, was one of the most interesting and profitable ever held.

Papers and discussions of infinite importance to the trade, entertainment in the free and unlimited western manner, an attendance never before equaled and the many evidences of good fellowship in the trade, all combined to render the meeting of unusual interest and profit.

The meeting was presided over by J. E. Northrup, than whom a better chairman never called an assemblage to order. Prof. Conway D. MacMillan, of the State University, welcomed the visitors in behalf of the Commercial Club, to which C. L. Allen, of Floral Park, responded. The report of the secretary showed the association to be flourishing financially, there being a balance of $233.48 in the treasury.

The following interesting papers were read and discussed: "Plant Breeding," by C. L. Allen; "The Government Seed Distribution," by Dr. B. T. Galloway, of the Bureau of Plant Industry, Washington, D. C.; "A Fair Contract," by Albert McCullough, Cincinnati, O.; "The Dollar and the Test," by J. C. Vaughan, Chicago; "Uniform Order Sheets for Traveling Salesmen," by S. F. Leonard, Chicago; "Rural Free Delivery," by Walter P. Stokes, Philadelphia; "A Seedsman's Collection Bureau," by Chas. H. Breck, Boston; "Seed Trade Associations, What Have They Accomplished," by F. H. Ebeling, Syracuse, N. Y., of the Am. Seed Trade Association; W. Atlee Burpee, Philadelphia, of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League; Mel L. Webster, Independence, Ia., of the Northwestern Association; S. E. Briggs, Toronto, Ont., of the Canadian Association; "What Seed Associations Might Accomplish," by Howard H. Harries, Chicago.

The report of the committee on Tariff, Customs and Express, evoked considerable discussion as to the unjust rulings of the Treasury Department in raising prices and inflicting penalties, and the best methods for remedying the evils. While all were agreed as to the injustice imposed there was quite a radical difference of opinion as to the proper course to pursue to obtain redress. As one member tersely put it, full and complete justice can only be obtained by abolishing the tariff entirely.

Mr. Page, of Des Moines, and Mr. Burpee, of Philadelphia, reported the efforts of the committee on Postage Legislation. It was not thought probable that any relief would be granted at this session of Congress, but with renewed effort on the part of all members of the association at the next session of Congress, prospects were encouraging for favorable action. The main object of this committee is to modify the present postage law so as to permit the mailing of 3rd class matter in bulk at the present rate of postage without affixing stamps, and the issuing of postal currency in small amounts for sending through the mails.

Mr. Stokes in his paper urged the cooperation of all seedsmen and mail order houses in securing a parcel post law, so as to expedite the transmission and delivery of large packages now sent by express at a great loss of time.

The committee on experimental stations was abolished.

The officers and committees for the ensuing year are as follows: Pres., Walter P. Stokes, Philadelphia; First Vice-Pres., C. N. Page, Des Moines; Second Vice-Pres., S. S. Burge, Toledo; Sec'y. and Treas., S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Ct.; Asst. Sec'y, A. N. Clark, Milford, Ct. Executive Com.: W. A. Burpee, Philadelphia; J. C. Vaughan, Chicago; H. W. Wood, Richmond, Va.; S. G. Courteen, Milwaukee; W. H. Grenell, Pierrepont Manor, N. Y. Membership Committee: Everett B. Clark, Milford, Ct.; S. M. Pease, Rochester, N. Y.; Mel L. Webster, Independence, Ia.

The social features of the meeting were of the highest order and pleasant memories of the occasion were carried away by all fortunate enough to be in attendance.

On Tuesday afternoon the members and wives were conveyed to Lake Minnetonka, where supper was served at Hotel St. Louis, after which a moonlight excursion was made around the lake on the steamer Puritan, the train returning the party to Minneapolis at 10:30.

On Wednesday afternoon the party were taken on special cars at 1 p. m., to the State University, where Prof. MacMillan gave a brief talk on "The Fundamental Structure of Seeds with special relation to a scientific explanation of sports and hybrids." At 2:30 p. m. the party, as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. L. May, accompanied by Pres. and Mrs. Boardman, of the Commercial Club, Mr. and Mrs. S. D. Dysinger, Mr. and Mrs. John A. May and other prominent citizens of St. Paul, were conveyed on chartered cars to Minnehaha Park.

From this point (the head of navigation on the Mississippi) the steamer Gracie Mower carried the party down the river to the landing in the Minnesota river under the ramparts of Old Ft. Snelling. Here the company was met by a fleet of boats from the St. Paul Yacht Club, commanded by Commodore J. A. O'Brien, a leading attorney of the city. A short cruise up the beautiful Minnesota river and a delightful trip down the river with the city in full view, built on commanding bluffs and crowned by its beautiful new capital of white marble, completed the water ride. At the docks tallyhos and carriages were in waiting to take the visitors around the business and residence portion of the city, its Summit Ave. being preeminently the finest residence street in America. Returning to the spacious dining hall of the Commercial Club at 7:30, the guests sat down to a most sumptuous repast, which was doubly welcome after the exciting trip of the afternoon, while a stringed quartette poured forth sweet music and threw a charm of delight over the pleasures of the event.

At 9 o'clock the cars were again boarded, taking the company directly to Como Park, than which there is no more beautiful spot in the whole paradise of nature. A half hour stroll about the grounds, along the lake and in the pavilion, where soft drinks were served, and the cars were reluctantly entered for the homeward trip to Minneapolis, where at 11 p. m. the St. Paul contingent bade adieu to their guests.

On Thursday morning visiting ladies were taken to Minnehaha Falls, one of nature's beauty spots which are so abundant in the North Star State. In the afternoon visiting ladies were escorted around the city in tallyhos and in the evening the remaining guests were conveyed in special cars to Lake Harriett to listen to Ellery's Royal Italian band, arriving at Minneapolis at 11 p. m., after a most enjoyable trip.

At the close of the meeting on Thursday afternoon, Mr. Burpee, on behalf of the Association, in a few most befitting words, presented the retiring Pres., J. E. Northrup, an elegant silver loving cup with stag horn handles, containing this inscription: "To Jesse E. Northrup, from His Friends of the American Seed Trade Association. Minneapolis, June 26, 1902."

The Late Wm. G. Bertermann.

Mr. Northrup returned his thanks in a few well chosen words.

At this point Mr. Howard Harries called upon Mr. May to come forward, and in a well framed speech tendered him and Mrs. May a most artistic and beautiful fern jardiniere of oxidized silver of a unique and curiously wrought style and shape. Mr. May, taken completely by surprise, responded quite feelingly, thanking the donors for the beautiful gift.

The annual meeting time was changed to the fourth week in June. Milwaukee, Toledo and Cincinnati all invited the association for next year, but Toledo will probably be the selection of the executive committee.

W. Atlee Burpee and family are enroute to California, going via Vancouver, B. C. Jerome B. Rice and party came up by way of the lakes, arriving on Wednesday. F. W. Bruggerhof and Burnet Landreth arrived Thursday to attend the Wholesale League meeting which was in session Thursday evening and all day Friday.

A number of the members visited the experimental farm on Friday as the guests of Profs. Green and Hays.

OBITUARY.

William G. Bertermann.

We regret to have to announce the death of William G. Bertermann, the well-known Indianapolis florist, which took place at Sacramento, Cal., June 29th.

As is well known to the trade Mr. Bertermann has been in declining health for a number of years, due to kidney trouble, and a fatal termination was not unexpected though hope was still felt. He has been for some time in California, hoping that the milder climate would help him in his fight with disease. Though president of the American Carnation Society this year he was unable to attend the Indianapolis meeting, and in a recent issue we published his acknowledgment of a letter of regret sent him by a committee appointed by the society.

Mr. Bertermann was a comparatively young man. He was born in Germany and came to Indianapolis in 1872. The firm of Bertermann Bros. has conducted a large and steadily growing business, and owing to the interest the deceased took in every thing that tended to advance the best interests of the profession he had a national reputation as a progressive and helpful member of the trade. He will be mourned by a host of friends.

BOSTON.

Not Much Doing.

Weddings, school commencements and the great Boston School Festival made business quite good for the last week of June; but we shudder to think of the weeks or even months to come. July 2nd is the middle of the calendar year, 182 days having gone and 182 more to come, but it also just about marks the end of floral trade for this season.

Goods continue rather more plentiful than is usual at the date and asters are beginning to come in very small lots, so it looks as if the supply of bloom will be maintained. Prices have a slight downward tendency upon about all lines and especially in the matter of all kinds of carnations except good ones. These are somewhat scarce and hold prices better.

Sports and Fashions.

Of course a man must have a Panama hat anyway and no florist is exactly up-to-date unless he has a good healthy boil on the back of his neck. Have you noted how many are wearing them?

And now a ball game is talked of between the wholesalers and the retailers. And the "Brimstone Corners" from the Park-street market are ready to tackle anything!

This swell-head condition is caused by the fact that they went out to Natick on Saturday and fairly walloped the ground with the remnant of that old tribe the "Wabans" as exemplified by the Rose Co. of that name.

Unfortunately I was unable to attend the massacre but the byplay of talk on the part of the winners upon their return from the war-path reveals the fact that "it was a famous victory!" Runs seem to have been manufactured so fast they could not be counted since it is yet unsettled whether they bea' upon a score of 28 to 16 or worse than that!

Splinters of talk hint at a great double play by Charnock, a regular toboggan slide home by Tailby, and that Hawkes as catcher rivaled his feathered brother when after a chicken.

But the most is said about Norton's work. It seems he stole all the bases on the field. I did not hear whether he took anything else or not, but presume he also captured the bats, ball, masks, etc.

The victors did not come off unscathed, however, as most of them are nursing some part of their anatomy although so far as I have seen, no scalps were lost. Honestly, I suppose every feature of the game was played to the limit.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

June, a very busy month in the cut-flower market, is over. Nearly all the maids who had made up their minds have become brides, and business is rather quiet, this week being in marked contrast to last week, which was very good indeed. Roses hold up well, Kaiserins being especially fine; in fact they are better than ever. Carnations are not very plentiful; good white sell well; the colored varieties only fairly so, unless of extra quality. Sweet peas are falling off both in quality and quantity, the cold weather last week followed by the heavy rains this week proving trying for these dainty favorites. Some days they were in short supply. Valley is not coming in so freely. Of the outdoor flowers Japanese iris has at times proved useful; they are now about over.

From Over the Water.

M. Rice, who returned last week from abroad, encountered very rough weather, both outward and homeward bound. He noticed a number of things while on his trip that may be of interest to the readers of the Review. One wrinkle was the use of what may be termed advertising ribbon with cut flowers, baskets or designs. Narrow white ribbons so universally used for attaching the giver's card to the floral gift is neatly marked with the florist's name and business address in black letters. Should this plan meet with favor in this country it might be improved upon and individualized by the use of autographs, gilt or colored letters, or other devices that fancy might suggest. Mr. Rice was much pleased with some well grown plants of Edelweiss with frosty carnation-like foliage and a variety of four-leaved shamrock new to him with glossy green and brown foliage. Both were offered in 4-inch pots. Mr. Rice thought that the leading Berlin florists could not compare with our retailers in the effects produced, their tendency being toward contrast, and sometimes far from pleasing, rather than harmony in color.

Notes.

Jennings Bros., of Olney, are sending in some very fine La France to this market. The price is $4 to $5 per 100.

Robert Scott & Son, Sharon Hill, have just completed and planted a 200-foot house of Liberty. This house has side ventilation in which Mr. Scott is a firm believer.

The repairs to the seed warehouse of Henry F. Michell, have been completed. Fortunately the large stock of seeds, bulbs and instruments was uninjured by the fire.

Lord & Burnham Co. have secured the contract for roofing material to be used on William Berger's new carnation house. This house did service during the past year as a mushroom house. The boards have been removed leaving the sides in readiness for the sash bars.

Edward Reid expresses himself as strongly in favor of a central meeting place where cut flowers may be sold. He believes that much loss of time and deterioration of product would be avoided as well as disappointment to the buyers, who so often depend on some one for what he doesn't happen to have.

Frank Gaul, who has been ill for some time, is now back at his post at the Century Flower Shop.

Bowling.

The second night's play in the series of games to decide the team to represent the club at Asheville took place at the Mannerchor alleys last week. These alleys proved inferior to the Pennsylvania alleys used the previous week. Splits were frequent and a light ball proved almost useless. Many changes were made and the race for the six places proves very exciting.

Total score for the three games follows:

D. T. Connor.....	475	J. Dunlap	391
W. R. Gibson.....	450	S. Adelberger	381
Geo. M. Moss....	417	Frank Polites ...	373
B. Starkey	417	Geo. Anderson ...	364
G. C. Watson.....	412	Geo. Craig	356
Robt. Kift	404	John Westcott ..	345
W. Robertson ...	401	W. K. Harris....	329
J. P. Habermehl..	394	Falk	327

In the above match the Connorites defeated the Andersonians.

Score in points in the two matches played: Moss 2, Starkey 2, Kift 2, Polites 1, Robertson 1, Connor 1, Craig 1, Watson 1, Gibson 1.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Stock continues poor in quality and there is not enough to meet demands, even at the opening of the dullest part of the year. Roses average poorer in quality than last week, though with a few there is an improvement, this being invariably where the grower has maintained fire heat during the chilly nights that have prevailed of late. No better investment could possibly be made than a few dollars in coal the past week or so, and those who made it are reaping a rich reward. Not that prices are especially higher, but all good roses sell readily at $5 to $6, with a few specials reaching $7, while the poorer stuff brings only $2 and $3, and even $1 for the very poorest.

White carnations are particularly scarce and the best command $3 a hundred, certainly a remarkable price for the season. Others range in price from $1 to $2. Business has held up remarkably well, taking everything into consideration, and the past June will go on record as one of the best if not the best.

Pæonies are still in the market, and may yet be had in quantity. Auratum lilies are coming in somewhat freely. Of longiflorum and candidum lilies there is a good supply. The heavy and continuous rains have checked the receipts of sweet peas.

Various Items.

The weather has been even more remarkable than prior to last report. Heavy rain nearly every day and frequently all night. This amount of water falling on the already oversoaked soil has no doubt done a good deal of damage to carnations in the field as well as crops in general. And the rains have been accompanied by a very low temperature for the season.

Arrangements for the trip to the S. A. F. convention at Asheville have been made and an announcement regarding same will be found elsewhere in this issue.

Recent visitors: Andrew Peterson, Paxton, Ill.; J. R. Fotheringham, representing F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y.

Mrs. Alex. Bains, Glasgow, Scotland, is in the city.

Mr. C. M. Dickenson is still sojourning in the east.

Nick Wietor says the catch was mostly pickerel.

BUFFALO.

It is the general opinion that the six months ending now has on the whole been a falling off from last year. Some will say no to this and others yes. Last spring was Pan-Am., with thousands of visitors and it must have made a considerable difference, and if this spring had been as good it would have shown a marked improvement in what we could call normal trade. June has been undoubtedly a good month. Graduations called for more flowers than for some years past, and for two weeks past every kind of flower has been well cleaned up.

Mr. Stroh, of Attica, and C. Guenther, of Hamburg, have both been sending in very fine carnations for this time of year. What an all round wonderful carnation the Lawson is! You begin to pick in October; if you feel in the dumps during the dark days of winter you have only to go to the end of the Lawson bench and your blues will be dissipated for its an enchantress and now it stands up loaded with buds and blossoms, as green and fresh as in January and not falling over or needing a stepladder to pick it.

Roses are showing the effects of summer weather and the Maids and Brides not thrown out have the seasonable touch of mildew.

The plant business has been about as usual, certainly not in excess of last year. The hanging wire basket has taken a great tumble. It always was a very artificial style of ornamental gardening and its passing away is only a natural consequence of a better taste. A well-filled large basket of nephrolepis or Asparagus Sprengeri will always find a place, but the hotch potch mixed basket for the veranda is about over. Another plant which last year even was very popular has had but a poor sale this year, and that is the Hydrangea Otaksa. Neither large tubs or medium-sized plants are wanted in any quantity.

Our city is passing through a period of horticultural education. There is a society formed here known as the "Beautifying Buffalo Society," and although some may laugh at it, it is sure to have some effect on the taste of the people. The men and women at the head of it are people of education and refinement and some of them are sure to have good taste. The use of vines to cover factory walls, healthy and suitable trees for our residence streets, the use of more flowering shrubs and herbaceous plants, to instill the love of flowers and their culture in our public schools, is part of the work set out by the society, and it's not likely they will advocate the making of more beds of geraniums on our lawns, so I don't look for any increase in future years in the use of geraniums, coleus and the rest of the cheap bedding plants, but I do look to an increase and a large one, in the use of vines, shrubs, roses, herbaceous plants, specimen palms, etc. It is only what other larger and older cities have passed through.

We have been particularly barren of drummers of late till the advent of Harry Balsley a few days ago. After two months' severe illness and a close approach to that large kiln where pots are burnt very hard and never sold, he turns up well and hearty, and it is consoling to know that for length of stay and hot air diffused he makes up for a score of the ordinary drummer. W. S.

NEW YORK.

The scales containing prices have been bouncing up and down according to circumstances during the past week and some grades of roses and carnations have become scarce or have disappeared altogether. The annual clearing out is responsible. Many wait till after school closings before they reluctantly pile their pets and beauties into rubbish heaps to make room for the younger set.

We have nothing worth relating. There ought to be some mighty good checker players among the New York florists, because that is the occupation in many stores. Ping Pong, too, is being played on the tables hitherto occupied by orders and an epidemic of golf is threatened.

Monday next is the club's outing and many are practicing baseball, running, etc., in the rear of the wholesale stores. It is expected that this will be a "Red Letter Day" in New York. The committee have worked hard on the details attending such and assure all a jolly good time. The late comers may get their tickets at the boat or can take train to College Point and get out to Wetzel's Grove, but they will miss the misses and the fun of the sail.

Mr. John Burton, president of the S. A. F. O. H., and Mr. T. Cartledge, of Philadelphia, were here during the week. Such men are always welcome in New York and it is to be hoped that when President Burton occupies his chair at Asheville, he will face and be surrounded by all those who were at Buffalo last August. John deserves all the credit and appreciation due an honest, wholesouled man.

Arthur Dacre, for many years with Thorley, is now manager for Mr. Theo. Lang at his Sixth avenue store. There are rumors of many changes next fall.

The New York Herald of Sunday and private letters give very descriptive accounts of the great losses to European florists owing to the postponement of King Edward's coronation. Hundreds of thousands of dollars were lost in plants, flowers and fruits. Covent Garden was paralyzed. It is expected here that the most of the rich Americans who went over for the occasion will shortly return to spend some of their surplus money in America. What's one's loss is another's gain. J. I. D.

FLATBUSH, N. Y.

The 27th of June was Charles (Papa) Zeller's 75th birthday and it was very fittingly remembered by the Flatbush Florists' Bowling Club. Mr. Zeller has been ill for some time but on Thursday evening he was induced to come out and watch the boys on the alleys where they displayed their usual great generalship in leveling the wooden soldiers. After the games the party adjourned to the dining room where they enjoyed the spread, including the vintage and cigars, and at the proper time Eugene Dailledouze, acting as chairman, arose, and after a few appropriate words presented Mr. Zeller with a very beautiful silver loving cup inscribed, "Presented to Charles Zeller on his 75th birthday by the Flatbush Florists' Bowling Club, June 27th."

Mr. Zeller was overcome with the evidences of good will and the beauty and size of the token of remembrance and his response was the sparkling of a memory of the early day when he, in company with Dailledouze and Gard, established the present business in Flatbush in 1861. It was they who, in 1866, gave to commercial floriculture the two greatest helps at the time in carnations Edwardsii and La Purite. He drew attention to the immense vase of beautiful seedling carnations which the Dailledouze Bros. had placed in the center of the table and said he often dreamed of the possibilities in floriculture, but the marvelous strides made in the past 30 or 40 years had far exceeded the dreams and calculations of all the old and young workers. In finishing he asserted that he never felt old whilst among plants and such friends and he hoped to be with them on many occasions to come.

Chairman Dailledouze called upon each present to add to the verbal testimony of love for the great young old man and among those who offered the best of wishes were W. J. Stewart and J. I. Donlan, who both spoke of Mr. Zeller's part in the hearts and history of horticulture, John I. Raynor, Carl Woerner, Clem Wocker, D. Y. Mellis, Patrick Riley, Paul Dailledouze, Henry Dailledouze, Mr. Ludwig, Alf. Zeller and W. H. Siebrecht. One was absent but all thought of him; he was Louis Schmutz, who recently met with a severe accident.

Another unfortunate circumstance was the smashing of Samuel Butterfield's fingers between the bowling balls. Mr. Butterfield had to retire early to have his hand attended to. The Flatbush Club does not expect to be represented at Asheville in August.

The scores of the night were:

W. H. Siebrecht	161	166
A. Zeller	164	162
Henry Dailledouze	107	124
Paul Dailledouze	151	87
Carl Woerner	146	166
J. I. Donlan	126	122
J. I. Raynor	...	119
P. Riley	142	128
E. Dailledouze	214	131
Clement Wocker	146	108
Ludwig	90	94
D. Y. Mellis	...	144
W. J. Stewart	...	183

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Although business was hardly up to last week it was highly satisfactory and had there been enough stock there is no question but it would have been one of the best weeks of the past month. Altogether June has been a record breaker and the florists have reaped a rich harvest.

The past week has been one of rain, and wind storms. But most of the florists escaped without loss. Truck gardeners, though, in the Mill Creek valley and other low places, suffered greatly through high water.

Carnation plants in the field are looking fine, and in a few of the fields that I have seen lately they are larger and in better health than when plants were housed last fall. This is encouraging and promises a fine grade of blooms this winter.

The majority of the growers are busy planting roses, many of them having already completed this work, and at all places the stock seems to be in A1 shape. Good roses are what this market needs more than anything else, and I hope that some of our home growers will be able to supply the demand which often goes begging for want of stock.

The prices obtained during the past week are about the same as those quoted in last week's notes, and they will hold good for the coming week.

There were a good many weddings, also a few openings, but the majority of the flowers sold went for funeral work, making the demand for white and light colors the greatest. White carnations, as usual, at this time of the year, were very scarce, but white roses took the prize, as there were practically none that could be called good stock to be had.

Don't Forget the Outing.

The annual outing of the Cincinnati Florists' Society will be held at Norwood Inn Park on Thursday, July 24th. There will be something doing every minute of the day, beginning with a base-ball game at 10 a. m., and including bowling contests for both ladies and men; foot races of all description, including a fat man's race; quoit pitching, etc., for which valuable prizes are offered. Present indications point to a howling success, so be sure to make arrangements in advance to take a day off and be among those who will have a good time. Madison road cars, transferring at Hyde Park to the Edward Road line takes you direct to the park entrance.

During the recent heavy storms in this state, Geo. R. McNeil, Manchester, O., suffered considerable damage to four of his houses through hail. He is one of the unlucky ones who did not have hail insurance.

C. E. Critchell, manager of the Atlanta Floral Co.'s store and greenhouses, Atlanta, Ga., was in the city during the past week. Although he has been in the south some time he still has the northern push with him, and is making a great success at Atlanta. He made a side trip to Richmond, Ind., to buy stock for the greenhouses. He left for the south last Saturday.

L. E. Hitz of Madison, Ind., is among those florists who deliver their flowers in an automobile. Mr. Hitz is creating such a sensation with his auto, that we hear of it in Cincinnati, and we wish to congratulate our Madison brother on his up-to-dateness.

Death of Wm. G. Bertermann.

We have just heard of the death of our brother florist, W. G. Bertermann, of Indianapolis, Ind., which occurred at Sacremento, Cal., on Sunday morning. Very little can be said of Mr. Bertermann that is not already known, as he was one of the best known florists in America. He was born in Germany, but early in life came to this country. His first stopping place was this city, where he worked for Mr. B. P. Critchell. He finally settled in Indianapolis with his brothers, where they built up a very large business, having at the present time one of the finest stores in the west. Mr. Bertermann was a man who will be greatly missed, as his influence has been felt in almost every affair of moment that has occurred in florists' circles of late years. His death, though scarcely coming as a surprise, is nevertheless a severe shock to his family, and in their hour of sorrow, I wish to assure them that they have the heartfelt sympathy of the Cincinnati florists.

Gus Kohlbrand, representing E. C. Amling, of Chicago, was a visitor.

C. J. Ohmer.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The florist business has now reached summer dullness and will be in that condition for the next two months, that is, with retailers. The growers claim that they are always busy with some kind of work. If it is not business it is painting, remodeling or replanting. There is quite a lot of building going on, as most of our growers are building from one to two houses.

The good soaking rain, which has been so long looked for, came Saturday and Sunday, a larger amount of water falling than at any other one time this year, and the growers on the outskirts of the city are all happy, as this rain will save them a great deal of labor and money. The rain and wind storm of Saturday did a great deal of damage to the parks and to the World's Fair site.

The supply of first-class stock is scarce, but second-class stuff is quite plentiful and not easy to dispose of. The great bulk of stock now seen at the wholesale market consists of sweet peas, feverfew, cornflowers and hollyhocks with plenty of second-class roses and carnations.

The few good roses bring from $4 to $5 and seconds $1 and $2. The bulk of them are Brides, Maids and Golden Gates. Beauties are very scarce and for these the demand was quite good the past week.

The carnations that are coming in now are a sick looking lot. The few good ones bring $2 while the bulk are from $1 down to 50 cents per 100. Sweet peas are 35 cents for the best. The outdoor stuff is sold very cheap. Some good valley is in the market at $3, which sells fairly well. New hardy ferns are now in the market and are sold at the usual price.

Notes.

Miss T. Badaracco is spending a few weeks at West Baden Springs. Miss Badaracco will visit Chicago before returning home.

Miss Tillie Meinhardt and sister spent Sunday and Monday of the past week in Chicago, returning home Tuesday much pleased with their trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry G. Berning have visited throughout Illinois the past week, stopping a few days in Chicago. They contemplate a trip to California this summer for the benefit of Mrs. Berning's health.

B. P. Corneli, H. M. Schisler and F. S. Plant are back from Minneapolis, where they attended the annual meeting of the American Seed Trade Association, June 24 to 26.

Mr. C. L. Week, of New Castle, Ind., is in town for a short stay. Mr. Week's health is much improved.

Geo. Waldbart, Gus Eggeling and J. J. Beneke were jurors on the same jury the past week. A good time to catch us, as there was not much doing.

Mr. C. C. Sanders will this week start to build two new houses, one 100x20, on his Delmar avenue place, and the other on his Henley road place will be 100x17. Mrs. Sanders and her three children, Walter, Laura and Jessie, have returned from a three weeks' trip to Tennessee and Alabama. They report a very enjoyable time.

The club meeting next Thursday, July 10, should not be overlooked by the members and their friends. This meeting will take place at the St. Louis Carnation Co.'s plant at Central, Mo. A large delegation of florists is expected and those wishing to go in a body should not fail to be at Delmar Garden at one o'clock to take the cars which will be in waiting. Great preparations are being made by J. W. Dunford and the company for entertaining the members and their friends. The feature of the meeting will be the nomination of officers from president down. All committees must be ready to make a final report. The election will be held a month later at Edwardsville, Ill., where the August meeting will be held.

Mr. F. C. Creighton, representing H. A. Dreer, Philadelphia, is in town this week renewing acquaintance after an absence of five years. Mr. Creighton reports good trade in his line.

The trustees of the Florist Club, Fred Ammann, R. J. Mohr and Will Adels have selected Thursday, July 24th, for the date of the picnic to be held at Preisters Park, which is half way between Belleville and St. Louis. All florists will be sent invitations. The trustees are working hard to make this year's outing a grand success and any information regarding it can be had from them.

Mrs. Laura Tesson, mother of Robert F. Tesson, was granted a temporary injunction restraining the Louisiana Purchase Exposition Co. (World's Fair) from entering any contemplated proceedings in the Circuit Court for the condemnation of the Tuesson tract.

Bowling.

Eight members rolled three games Monday night. Mr. Fred C. Weber retained his lead and is champion bowler for the month of June. Mr. F. C. Creighton, of Philadelphia, was a visitor and enjoyed the sport. This ended the June series with the following scores:

	H.	1	2	3	Total
F. C. Weber	35	150	142	164	456
C. A. Kuehn	6	164	165	175	504
J. J. Beneke	10	157	145	165	467
Theo. Miller	35	172	155	171	498
John Young	35	134	185	160	489

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.

A. J. Schmutz has purchased of W. B. Arnold the greenhouse property in Arnold place and has removed the old houses and is erecting three houses and a violet pit, the houses and pit to cover 54x75. A commodious office and workroom will also be erected. Lord & Burnham Co. furnish the material, also a large sectional boiler for heating.

Geo. H. Phelps, our most successful grower of carnations, will plant his whole house to carnations this season. He will plant mostly the standard varieties, but will introduce some of the novelties of the season. Mr. Phelps is located in Blackinton, three miles from the center of the city, but he finds ready sale for all the flowers he can cut. He will rearrange the heating pipes this summer and will add to the present system so as to heat a violet house 11x30.

F. H. Pratt, the Corinth street florist, has leased the Ashland street greenhouses of Mrs. Worden and will grow carnations and a general line of bedding stock. Mr. Pratt started in the business last fall, and has been so successful with the small house which he built that he decided to lease the above houses and be able to care for his increasing trade, as he finds he can grow better stock than he gets from market. TO THE FLORISTS OF THE NEW ENGLAND STATES.

The rate of one fare for the round trip from Washington to Asheville and return makes it possible for those attending the convention from the New England states to use local excursion tickets for that portion of the trip this side of Asheville, thus getting the desirable privilege of stopping off at New York and Washington at a cost of about equal to the one and one-third fare with limitations to continuous passage, which is the best concession that the New England railroads are willing to make.

I would like to hear from any in this section who think of making the trip to Asheville and shall be glad to furnish all desired information regarding transportation, etc., to such applicants. It is desirable that the attendance from the north should be as large as possible, and those who embrace this opportunity to visit the beautiful "Land of the Sky" in congenial company and at a low cost will not regret it. CHICAGO TO ASHEVILLE.

The Chicago Florists' Club has, through President E. F. Winterson, arranged with the Big Four and Southern railways for the trip to the convention of the S. A. F. at Asheville, N. C., Aug. 19 to 22.

The party will travel from Chicago by special train on the Big Four road (C. C. C. & St. L. Ry.), leaving at 8:30 p. m., Sunday, Aug. 17, reaching Cincinnati early Monday morning. The morning will be spent in the Ohio city and at 2 p. m. the party will take a special train on the Queen and Crescent and Southern railways, reaching Asheville at 7 o'clock Tuesday morning. This train will go via Harriman Junction and Southern Railway, and will give an opportunity of passing through the famous "Blue Grass" section of Kentucky by daylight, with an early arrival at Asheville. Early risers will have an opportunity to view the famous French Broad River as the train winds up the mountains, and also to enjoy the beauties of "The Land of the Sky."

Sleeping car reservations made in advance. Send in your names, stating space wanted and number of people in your party. This is quite necessary, that all may have proper accommodations, and that arrangements may be made with the Pullman Sleeping Car Company for their very best cars. Address E. F. Winterson, 45 Wabash avenue, Chicago.

BALTIMORE.

The past week brought copious rains and a temperature abnormally low. Trade was active and good stuff of all sorts scarce. From this may be expected a few American Beauties which, the season considered, are of unusually good quality. Sweet peas continue to arrive in great abundance, and other outdoor flowers are quite sufficient for all demands.

The June weddings necessarily end with today (June 30), and the commencement season is over. The florists' windows are in their mid-summer garbs of green and all sorts of floral adornment are lacking.

Considerable interest is manifested in the forthcoming Asheville convention and from present appearances this section is likely to furnish a contingent very respectable in its proportions. The moderate fare is attractive, but it is too soon to give a list of those likely to attend.

R.

CANADIAN CONVENTION NOTES.

The time for holding the convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association has been set for September 3rd and 4th. This arrangement has been made so that the convention will be in session during the time of the Toronto Fair, and as Hamilton is only a short distance from Toronto, members living at a distance will avail themselves of the cheap fares which are in force during fair time.

The Hamilton Horticultural Society, and the Gardeners' and Florists' Club have made arrangements for holding a flower show convention week and have secured a large hall centrally located in which it is proposed to hold the trade exhibit and flower show. Already a number of trade exhibits have been promised from both American and Canadian firms.

LONDON, ONT.

The London Horticultural Society held the June rose show last week. As their shows are all free it is needless to say that the attendance was large. The popularity of these flower shows is evidenced by the increased interest taken and as there is no competition, no prizes awarded, no admission fee, it is purely a labor of love. The season has been favorable and the show of H. P. roses was the best the society has yet had.

The weather continues cold and wet with an occasional frost and snow or ice storm sandwiched in, consequently soft bedding stock is suffering.

Trade continues to hold up wonderfully well; between weddings and funerals nothing is going to waste. The quality of roses is away down and very little but what is mildewed can be seen. Carnations, owing to the cool weather, are of good quality.

Planting is being rapidly pushed ahead and from the quality of the stock going in there ought to be some good results.

Conventiou matters are being talked over by the locals and from favorable expressions of visitors who have called recently we are led to believe that the Hamilton convention will eclipse any of its predecessors.

Recent visitors: Geo. Boucher, W. M. Harburn, A. Neal, C. W. Baxter, H. Neal, Thos. Cottle and wife.

LOND.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

The weather the past month has been very unfavorable for the production of cut flowers. During the hot spell everything cooked and sizzled. Then came a wet spell followed by a cold wave, which mildewed the roses in great shape. The month has been remarkable as the wettest June on record, there having been just twenty-three days on which it rained.

Business could hardly have been better. The bedding done was certainly forty per cent in excess of last year, the principal call being for S. A. Nutt geraniums, and in vines, variegated vincas; fewer nasturtiums and cobeas being used than heretofore.

The weather affected the quality of flowers as well as the quantity, the result being that carnations are poor and roses small and poor. In fact, there are but few roses to be had at any price, as all the florists have thrown out from part to all to replant.

The varieties of carnations that have done the best and stood the stress of the past variable weather are: First, Flora Hill in white, White Cloud and Glacier coming next; in pink, Lawson, Ethel Crocker, Irene and Marquis; in red, Jubilee. The newer varieties did not seem to hold up so well as those mentioned, and Crane doesn't seem to be much good in warm weather. I forgot to say that Morning Glory, though a bit undersized, still makes a good light pink substitute for Daybreak.

Prices on flowers remained firm, but at present, on account of the poor quality, they show signs of weakening. Roses bring 75 cents to $1 per dozen; carnations, 25 to 35 cents per dozen; American Beauties, $1.50 to $3 per dozen.

Pæonies are over and outdoor roses are in their glory. Crimson Ramblers around town never looked so effective and beautiful as this spring.

The Grand Rapids Violet Co. are putting most of their plant to American Beauties, as they claim they are more profitable than any other cut flower. They will, of course, grow some carnations and violets, but their crop will be American Beauties.

The wet weather has been very unfavorable to violets and many of the local growers have had their plants go "on the bum," as we call it here, one large grower in particular having to buy his entire stock over again. A good plan to insure the best results and run the least amount of risk in failure is for those intending to plant the latter part of July or later to buy those plants that have been shifted from 2 to 2½-inch into 3-inch and given a little space on the bench. Such plants get properly seasoned, and are not only equal but really superior to field-grown stock if runners have been properly cared for. The planting of violets in benches is now under way and will be continued until all the houses are planted.

"Mum" planting is about over, Ivory, Bonaffon, Robinson, Kalb, Murdock, Shaw, Jerome Jones, Western King and Chadwick being the varieties mostly planted. G. F. C.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.

During the last month trade has dropped to summer demands and prices. Commencement week made quite a little stir, the good old fashion of presenting graduates with floral tributes not having been tabooed by our educationists. Roses are scarce but of fair quality. Carnations are plentiful and astonishingly good for the season.

Rose planting is about finished, the quantities planted being about the same as last year. The new rose Ivory is on trial at some of the establishments. Carnations in the field are looking well. The weather has been cold and wet—very wet. We had rain on 26 days out of the 30.

"In spring a young man's fancy Lightly turns to thoughts of love."

This was the trend of John R. Van Bochove's thoughts during the last spring. The culmination came on June 25, when he led to the hymenal altar Miss Minnie Hengst, one of the fair daughters of Celeryville. The benedicts of the craft extend the glad hand of welcome to their ranks.

RUTHERFORD, N. J.—Bobbink & Atkins have rented the Volmer place, adjacent to their nurseries. It has about 10,000 square feet of glass, which they will use in caring for their palm importations. They have also bought the entire palm stock, some 30,000 plants, of E. C. McFadden, Short Hills, N. J.

NEWPORT, R. I.—The annual rose show of the Newport Horticultural Society, held last week, brought out an excellent display. Numerons prizes were awarded.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y.—A. N. Broadhead has purchased the greenhouses of E. D. Spaulding, on Spring street, and is dismantling the buildings and moving the plants to the Lake View Rose Gardens.

BOBBINK & ATKINS, - RUTHERFORD, N. J.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

We are gradually emerging from a most prosperous season into the inevitable summer dullness, and after the Glorious Fourth early closing and vacations will be in order. While we experienced a few very quiet days in June, yet the amount of business was equal to that of a year ago for the same month. In the absence of decorative work we were able to dispose of all good salable stock over the counter and for the ever constant demand for funeral designs. Young people are still "pairing off" and evidently doing so without the services of the florist.

We are having regular Colorado weather and there is quite a contrast between the atmospheric conditions of the present and those of a year ago. Last summer at this time we slept on the lawn, but at this writing it is cool enough for a light fire. Rain has fallen here every day for a month and vegetation is making wonderful growth. Plenty of good outdoor material is to be had. Sweet peas are picked with 12-inch stems and retail at $1 per 100. The drop in the temperature seems to have favored the growers, who are still sending us a pretty good supply of roses and carnations.

We notice that some necessary changes have been made at Mr. Kellogg's store on Grand avenue since Fred Weber assumed the management. The store front has been newly painted and the large window is banked with finely grown Boston ferns and vases of long-stemmed Beauty roses in an attractive manner which cannot fail to draw trade. Mr. Kellogg is supplying the market with a select grade of roses, and we never before saw his stock so good at this season of the year.

W. L. Rock believes that every florist should make some improvements in his place every year and next month will renovate his Walnut street store, build a conservatory in the rear for palms and ferns and also an office for himself and stenographer. Mr. Rock is making a novel window display of garden flowers and the Auratum lily.

W. J. Barnes, of Euclid avenue, has purchased the vacant property adjoining his place and will soon tear down his old greenhouses and cover the entire space with a modern range of glass.

Billy Bastian, Mr. Kellogg's right-hand man at Pleasant Hill, spent a few days in the city last week. He was wearing his best smile and a new dress suit and looked fine. While passing around the cigars Billy told us that he believed he could travel through life best in double harness, and he left for his home with our best wishes and a beautiful Kansas City bride. H. J. M.

Denver, Colo.—Geo. C. Brenkert has found business so good that he will put up 3,000 feet of glass this summer. He is planting 5,000 mums. Mr. Brenkert now controls the establishment formerly conducted by Brenkert & Young on South University Ave.

HOLMESBURG, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

MILWAUKEE.

The weather conditions the past week were anything but favorable for the growers—cold, cloudy days with periodical showers and the night temperature going down as low as 40, making it impossible to avoid mildew and causing a shortage of stock such as was never before experienced here. Dealers accepted stock which under other conditions would not be taken by fakirs and prices were equal to midwinter. Carnations, though not so badly affected by the changes in the weather, are nevertheless scarce and supply is far below the demand. Retail dealers who last week displayed "15 cents per dozen" signs are now asking 50 cents per dozen for carnations, and roses sell at from $1 to $2 per dozen according to quality. Sweet peas are coming in fairly plentiful and fetch 50 to 75 cents per 100, wholesale.

There is no outdoor stock in the market and indications are for a very short season in this class of goods unless weather conditions improve soon. So far but little damage has been done to field growing carnations. One or two growers reported some damage from too much rain where stock was planted in low ground.

There is not much enthusiasm displayed in the coming convention of the S. A. F. Some of the railroad representatives called on most of the trade, making rates, etc., but it is not known who will make the journey from here as yet.

C. C. Pellworth Co. have completed their new addition and are planting with Ivory and Liberty. The latter variety has done very well here the past season.

Carl Johannes has completed four new houses and will plant them in carnations. His stock in the field looks fine.

Recent visitors were Leonard Lawson, Rockford, Ill.; H. B. Campbell, Davenport, Iowa; and Mrs. O. Baumann, Manistee, Mich. Incog.

ST. PAUL.

W. G. Bunde, son of A. H. Bunde, and well known in the trade, has engaged in the newspaper business, publishing the Northwestern Dairyman.

Mr. and Mrs. L. L. May entertained the following party at Mayfield over Sunday: Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Robinson, of Waterloo, Neb.; S. E. Briggs, of Toronto, Ont.; S. F. Leonard, Chicago, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Braslan, of San Jose, Cal.

The following were callers during the week: F. H. Battles, Rochester, N. Y.; A. A. Berry, Clarinda, Ia.; L. L. Olds, Clinton, Wis.; Peter Hollenbach, Chicago; J. E. Sloan, Palo Alto, Cal.; Geo. S. Green, Chicago; C. N. Page, Des Moines; E. J. Sheap, Jackson, Mich.

Cut flower trade continues very good, with a shortage in nearly all lines. Beauties are particularly scarce. The cool weather has improved the quality of stock somewhat. X. Y. Z.

Ft. Dodge, Ia.—P. L. Larson reports having had an excellent season. He is building three new houses, each 22x74. One is for roses, one for violets and one for chrysanthemums. He has also purchased a new 50-H. P. boiler.

London, Eng.—The sons of the late William Bull announce that the business will be continued under the title William Bull & Sons, at 536 Kings Road, Chelsea, as before.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

Hardy Flowers.

There is an immeasurable pleasure and a vast amount of various kinds of profit derivable from what we may call a semi-wild herbaceous garden. The great galaxy of colors there at present form a panorama of exquisite beauty, and the flowers, ferns and grasses we name here are in full glory through June and July. Very few if any of them are seen in florists' stores, or for that matter in the homes of wealthy Americans, and yet they are far superior to many of the flowers we see there. Every plant or flower we mention in this article is useful for decorative purposes. The majority of them may be found growing wild in this country. Perhaps that is why they are not more generally appreciated here, though they are extensively cultivated and constitute the principal summer cut flowers in European markets. Some of them are natives of other countries, but they are all hardy here.

A great many of our landscape engineers succeed by conjuring up for their patrons glowing pictures of native wilds. The great majority of their actual creations are absolutely failures from a useful standpoint, for in nearly every case the people who own private gardens and who have expended enormous sums to create and maintain so-called "wild gardens," have to depend upon the florist or general commercial flowers to supply materials for their decorations during June, July, August and September. We know of hundreds of places where except for a supply of annuals not a flower is obtainable when most wanted.

The city florist goes to the country woods and meadows for his best material for extensive summer decorations, while the country florist often imagines it necessary to go to the city market. Let us consider what is in bloom at present and what can be done with it.

First come all the white, French white, mauve and very light shades, which are all useful for funeral or general decorative purposes. Oenanthe pimpinelloides, Oenanthe peucedanifolium and Seseli glaucum are good for groundwork, vases, bases or clusters, with other flowers. Their long, light sprays give a very graceful effect among stiffer flowers or where great masses are used. Libanotis vulgaris is on the same order, but is more adapted to solid work. Astrantia major is good, and the common elder (Sambucus nigra) is very fine to mix with other flowers in large designs. Few florists would be able to recognize it if the foliage is taken off and the flowers properly used. It would be considered an invaluable flower if it had to be cultivated under glass.

Then there are several varieties of penstemons. P. campanulatus and P. lævigatus bear good, long spikes of white and mauvish flowers. P. gracilis is smaller and of a deeper color. They are all beautiful and very useful in any class of decoration. Such a common thing as Asperula galoides can be made most useful for feathery effects, though Gypsophila paniculata is preferable. Sidalacea candida's pure white spikes are very good, and Spiræa palmata is far grander than many of the flowers we see in the markets. Delphinium grandiflorum alba is a fine pure white type of that well-known flower, and the grounds and rocks are covered with Rosa Wichuraiana. Thalictrum angustifolium's long golden-tipped white plumes are very pretty. Chrysanthemum corymbosa is a splendid daisy-like flower and grows in great masses. And then there is a whole army of achilleas—A. lanata, A. alpina, A. commutata, A. impatiens and A. asplenifolia are all in bloom and can be used to good advantage. The last named is probably the best for general use. Campanula persicifolia is fine with its spikes of white bells.

In colors ranging from lavender to lilac, purple and blue, we see Jasione perennis, something similar to, but larger than the well-known cornflower. A great many campanulas, the best of which are C. cervicaria and C. Ruthenica. Erigeron speciosus and E. glandulosus are two pretty lavender daisy-like flowers; another is Calameris incisa. Lythrum virgatum sends out a nice spray and L. salicaria has densely covered spikes of puce. Eringium planum is a very odd blue thistle-like flower, and when used in conjunction with such grasses as Elymus glaucus, E. arenarius or Agropyron cæruleum they make a charming picture in tall dull colored vases. Monarda fistulosa mollis, Polemonium cæruleum, Veronica crauifolia, V. longifolia, V. maritima and V. incisa, Delphinium chinense, Achillea tanacetifolia, are all worthy of culture.

From light pink tones to intense scarlet and crimson colors we find the old mullein pink (Lychnis coronaria), a flower prominent among the bouquets offered in the markets of Europe. The brilliant flowers of Lychnis fulgens deserve to be better known. Silene Serchenfeldiana is a good rosy pink flower for cutting purposes. Dianthus calocephalus is graceful. There is nothing more brilliant than a cluster of Geum coccineum. Lathyrus latifolius is grand for vase or hanging effects. Althæa Keerdica and A. rosea are two sorts of single hollyhocks fine for tall vases. Achillea millefolium rubra must not be overlooked, nor Phlox pilosa. The very curious straw and white florets of Digitalis lanata are very good, and in this family we have a vast range of colors. D. gloxinoides with claret rosy trumpets, and D. grandiflorum, orange splashed yellow, are remarkably good for tall effects.

What can be more beautiful than the long sprays of the brilliant Penstemon barbatus, and how grand it looks anywhere! Hemerocallis aurantiaca major is a superb ochre orange cup, and the great masses of Lilium pardalinum are magnificent alongside the several varieties of Lilium elegans and the many sorts of irises in bloom at present.

Among yellow and orange colors there are many lovely things, such as Rudbeckia laciuata, with its pretty, curious long cones. Lepachys pulcherima is another fine flower. Also Anthemis tinctoria, Heliopsis scabra, H. Pitcheriana, Bupthalium speciosum (like a golden anemone chrysanthemum), Coreopsis verticillata, C. auriculata and C. lanceolata grandiflora, Solidago canadensis and S. californica, Galium verum, Hieraceum aurantiacum, Cephaloria alpina, and many of the scabiosas. The kneiffias—Frazeri and riparia, Lysinachia punctata, Alyssum argenteum and A. tortuosum, Genista tinctoria, Sedum Maximowiczii, form an army of flowers capable of capturing any heart.

Patches of the lake are covered with sweet water nymphs and along the banks are masses of Acorus calamus var., Avena sempervirens, melicas, airas, agropyrons, hystrix, secale, dactylis, spartina, phleum and many other common but highly ornamental grasses.

In the shade where the sun's rays scarcely reach them, but so deserving of the light of recognition and highest praise, are the beautiful ferns. The bracken, pteridium (wish we could get it in pots for winter decoration) is fine for cutting. Osmunda cinnamomea, O. regalis and O. Claytonia with their royal plumes. Then the ferns which are commonly called fancy ferns among the trade in winter—Asplenium filix fœmina and A. thalictroides, Adiantum pedatum. The common dagger fern—Polystichum aerostichioides. The shield ferns—Doryopteris spinulosa intermedia, D. Boothii, D. custata and its several varieties, form a set worthy of cultivation in any garden.

The above list is in splendid condition at present and the best of work can be done with all or any part of the list. A wild garden decoration, be it on dining table, in ordinary vase work, for church weddings, or even the most elaborate forms of house or ball decorating, can be made to exceed in variety of beauty all the tender greenhouse pets.

We have in our mind's eye a large room or series of rooms transformed into a summer woodland scene or garden. Some may call it a fairy land. We go to the swamps and cut down tall young oaks, maples and birch. We cover the walls and ceilings completely with this material, allowing a few light vines to suspend here and there. Our prettiest young trees we stick into tall vases filled with wet moss and weighted down. These we arrange so people can walk under them. Young oak trees keep well and make a pretty effect. The vases can be covered with grasses or filled with tall flowers. Then the different wild flowers can be arranged in separate colors, one color to each room or so as to harmonize. The grasses and ferns may be used as a background or to cover vases. It is wise to put as many of the flowers in water as possible, but care should be taken to hide vases that detract from the beauty of the flowers.

Ribbons should never be used in connection with wild flowers, for you are supposed to copy nature, and in that sense must avoid artificiality. Made up designs are out of place here also. The decorator's model must be an emphasis of some nook he has seen in the mountains or woods, and if his materials are such that he cannot create an ideal he must aim to do the next best thing—give a good general impression.

Often people who have had a surfeit of greenhouse plants and flowers welcome a change, no matter what it is. Florists should not always be in fashion's wake. They should anticipate and head the fickle, domineering fairy.

At present there is an epidemic of Panama hats and the great family of imitations. These and Porto Rican and Mexican straw sombreros may be used as favors at large affairs, and filled or trimmed with flowers and ribbons they form a prominent feature in the decorative scheme. Then again there are the ping pong and automobile fads, which must be recognized, and it may be lucky to suggest an affiliation with these crazes in your work for the sporty or lively set.

Notes.

Sweet Sultan and all the large flowering centaureas are very popular flowers in New York. They possess two good and essential qualities in commercial flowers—beauty of color, and they preserve it long. They occupy a prominent position in all the leading windows. The white and lavender colors are splendid for cluster work on funeral designs or table or personal decorations. The yellow sort is one of the richest colors you can get. They are all very beautiful and should be grown by all who sell their own flowers at retail.

Hydrangea Otaksa is quite plentiful at present and they make excellent outdoor decorations in tubs by themselves or mixed with other plants in vases or boxes. Immense groups of them are seen in the windows during the summer. They keep well, providing plenty of water is given, and we recommend them as a general utility flower. They come in very handy for all manner of decorations, in large basket work, or they can be used for groundwork.

Vinca minor is being used to advantage on the tops of tubs containing Bay trees. It makes a prettier effect than the bare soil.

If grass will not grow under windows, etc., try California privet. We have seen it look well planted thickly and kept cut very low. Grass in very small quantities is more or less a nuisance to the average city householder. Privet requires less attention and can be made attractive in design.

Coreopsis, particularly C. lanceolata, has been extensively grown and used this season. It is good for cheap work where you are supposed to give twice the value of what you receive, and it looks remarkably well when used in great masses with very light greens.

Some of the prettiest windows we have seen lately have been all green; mounds of adiantum, hanging effects in Davallia bullata or other ferns and surroundings of clean palms, and, once in a while a vase of some bright flower.

Aspidistras look well and are much used in windows during hot spells, but they must be kept well polished. A very little sweet oil will make the foliage look better.

There seems to be a great overstock of Bay trees this year. Is it the price or don't people want them any more? There are whole regiments still on the premises of the dealers. Wonder why more don't go west.

No artist can improve nature. The man made models we may see are naught to the nature made models we do not see. Nature laughs at the vanity of mankind. The best we can do is to try to imitate her. No matter who you are don't be foolish enough to imagine your creations are above hers.

There are those who cannot do the simplest design or decoration unless they can surround themselves with an abundance of the finest material. We have often said that the only true test of artistic merit is to produce beauty out of chaos or poor materials. Economy in the retail store is a valuable virtue when you consider the great waste that is possible. And many a person at present engaged in florists' stores would be more careful and more appreciative had they to pay for the stock they handle.

IVERA.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

With the bright, warm weather of July young roses will require copious supplies of water to keep them growing vigorously. This is one of the most important matters to be attended to during this and the next month. The plants should never be allowed to suffer the least in this respect, but should get thoroughly soaked at least once every bright day. If the drainage is perfect, as it should be, and the surface of the soil frequently stirred, there is little danger of overwatering. This applies more particularly to Beauties, Meteors and Liberty. Syringing also should never be neglected after the hottest part of the day is over; a good syringing at that time freshens up the young foliage and cools the house.

Staking and tying will now occupy a good deal of time. This ought to be done while the plants are small, as it is then so much easier to stretch the wires without damaging the plants. The neatest, best and most economical material to use for this purpose is galvanized wire, both for stakes and horizontals, using No. 16 for horizontals and No. 6 for stakes. Stakes for Brides and Bridesmaids should be about 3 feet 3 inches long; for Beauties, 4½ feet, with an overhead wire to support the longer stems.

Tying should be done in a way to give freedom of circulation among the leaves, and not bunched together in broom fashion. Neatness and taste in this operation considerably improves the appearance of a house.

RIBES.

DISEASED ROSES.

Many of our roses have got little lumps about the size of bird shot on the roots. I send you a sample. Is this club root, and, if not, then what is it? On some two-year-old plants some of the lumps are as large as a walnut. What causes this? If the lumps are all picked off would it be all right to plant these plants again and run them over another year?

J. B.

The specimens sent were so shriveled and dry when I got them that it was rather difficult to examine them properly.

These little tubercles are the cysts of eel-worms. The microscope shows each of them to contain from one to three tiny worms, very much like eels. Hence the name. They are so small as to be invisible to the ordinary naked eye. The larger callosities arise from the same cause, although at present they contain no worms.

These plants should be thrown out and burned, the benches should be thoroughly washed and given a good coating of hot lime wash, the house should be replanted with young, healthy stock. I do not believe it is safe to use stock propagated from plants affected with this trouble, however nice they may appear, as the vitality is so reduced that they easily become a prey to any rose enemy.

RIBES.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Specimen Plants.

Specimen plants, if not already potted up into their blooming pots, should be attended to without delay; 10 to 12-inch pots are, in our opinion, plenty large enough for the final shift.

These specimens are not grown to any extent by the commercial florist, who argues truly enough that they don't pay him to bother with, but they are more or less in evidence on all private places where the gardener happens to be interested in mums. The soil for this last shift should consist of two parts of good fibrous loam to one part of well-rotted cow manure, with a fair proportion of bone added. Be careful over the drainage, for if your plants get waterlogged they may as well be thrown out. Over the crocks in the bottom a little green sod turned upside down is effectual in preventing the soil from working down among the crocks. For pink and red varieties charcoal should be added. Potting should, of course, be firmly done, leaving ample room at the top for a future top dressing when the pots are filled with roots.

The principal shoots should at this time be got down into some kind of shape, so that when pinching ceases the final growths will come away straight, and not have to be bent and twisted in every direction to get them into position. Pinching should be kept up till the end of the month, running over the plants every day and stopping the leading shoots, the idea being to get all the breaks possible before stopping ceases.

Grow your plants inside if it is any way possible to make room for them, as such plants will do far better than if they had to be grown outdoors, exposed to the fury of thunder storms and the baking heat of an August sun. If the house does not have bottom or side ventilation put your plants down by the door to get all the air possible.

Single Stem Plants

for six-inch pots should also be potted up as soon as they are ready for the final shift. They, too, will be far better grown inside, where possible, as the foliage will keep better and the growth be neater and more even. It is no child's play to set up a batch of these plants, well flowered, with the foliage absolutely perfect down to the pot. Varieties like Robinson or Nellie Pockett are ideal for this work.

Stock that has been planted outside with the idea of being lifted and potted up in September, should not be neglected. The copious rains this year have kept such stock from needing any watering, but they should be kept pinched and where black fly appears dust liberally with tobacco dust. In a wet season like this plants outside are often attacked by one or the other of the leaf diseases, and we believe in keeping them sprayed with the potassium sulphide in the proportion of one ounce to two gallons of water. Prevention is better than cure.

BRIAN BORU.

CARNATION NOTES.

Some of the carnation growers are getting ready to plant their houses and we have noticed a few who are already setting the plants in the benches. We have had a very favorable season for carnations in the field and it will be found much better for the plants to be housed within the next month while they are medium sized than to wait until they are extremely large and soft. The plants will suffer very little now while they are not so large, for there is not so much foliage to be kept fresh for a few days while the roots are taking hold.

The plants are not growing quite so rapidly during this month and the first half of next month as they will during late August and September, when the nights are cool and the dew is heavy. And yet just now the plants are a trifle softer than I like to have them at planting time, due to excessive rains during the past ten days. Last year our plants were exceedingly small, considering that they were planted from 3-inch pots, on account of the dry summer, and the foliage seemed to have very little sap in it, but when they were planted in nice moist soil and kept syringed for a few days they took hold at once and grew as though they were trying to make up lost time, and they did make it up, too, before the holidays.

Some varieties, though, must make good-sized plants in the field to be profitable and these, of course, do best in a moderately moist season, but if you can lift them after a moderately dry spell I believe you will find it a benefit. The first few thousand we lifted last fall received a thorough soaking the night before they were dug and they lifted fine, but later on we lifted a lot more without watering them first and they did just as well as the others, so we discontinued the watering part of it altogether, except that the roots were dipped into a pail of water as they were picked up into the boxes. There are other varieties, however, that do far better if medium sized plants are housed early and allowed to make most of their growth inside.

Try to empty and refill a whole house at a time. You will make more headway by so doing and it will be much better for the plants if you can shade the whole house as it will be considerably cooler. We cover the bottom of our benches with about an inch of old cow manure and we find it very beneficial to the plants. Many growers object to this, preferring to put it on top or give it in liquid form, but we find it saves us a great deal of liquid feeding and the plants seem to like it. On top of this fill in your soil so as to make about four inches if the soil is well pulverized, but if it does not lay close put on a half inch more.

I have never seen the necessity of first packing the soil before planting as our soil always settles down enough to become good and solid, but possibly there are soils that are so light as to make it necessary. It would be advisable to mix in some clay soil if your soil is of this light, loose kind, and for next year try to find a good heavy loam to compost.

A. F. J. BAUR.

DECORATIVE PLANT BEDS.

We present in this issue engravings from photographs of two beds of decorative plants in Lincoln Park, Chicago, this summer.

One, as will be noticed by reference to the picture, is filled with palms, rubbers, crotons and other decorative plants in considerable variety. The effect is certainly very pleasing and we congratulate Head Gardener Stromback on the result.

The other bed contains only crotons and Pandanus Veitchii. The broad and narrow leaved crotons are well interspersed and contrasted and the effect is good. The bed is divided into sections by bands of the pandanus. In among the crotons some peperomias are scattered. The croton seems destined to take an important place among our bedding plants in time, and the sooner we know how to use them to best advantage the sooner will they be more generally used.

VIOLET NOTES.

We have had such a large rainfall all through this section, in fact unprecedented for the season of the year, that it has been very hard to get chances between showers to plant out stock. The soil is so wet that it is not fit to handle and by the time it just begins to get so you can touch it, it rains again.

However, a little at a time we have finally succeeded in getting all our violets planted and they are looking nicely. Owing to these conditions our shading is necessarily very light, consequently they will have to be closely watched and the first time that it really clears off with the appearance of staying so for a few days, the houses will have to be at once shaded.

Vigilance pays; don't think that now they are in the ground they will grow and take care of themselves, while you rest.

We find that the weeds are starting thickly among those first planted and they will have to be gone over at once. You will find those little hand scratchers most excellent tools for this purpose, if you do not already use the same. Also watch the plants closely and see that no aphis, either green or black, get a start, for if they have only a few weeks' (or even days') start now they will prove disastrous next winter. They must not be allowed to get a foothold if you expect to have good violets.

Also keep an eye out for the little green black worm that destroys the leaves in short order. And watch out for red spider, which one is much more apt to let get in, in such rainy weather than when it is dryer and you syringe heavier. Violet culture is a continual do and don't and a general vexation of spirit; really it comes pretty close to being a lottery.

Carnations are in the field and are making the most of these rains. They are looking first-class although somewhat soft, still not as much so as they would be if it were not that we have hard winds between showers.

Chatham, N. Y. R. E. SHUPHELT.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Smilax.

Amidst the midsummer heat and consequent laziness there are some crops that need their foundation laid during this month. As important as any to the general florist is smilax. Only last year one of our scions said we did not have room for it and could buy it. A big mistake for any man who has any glass. Twenty-five or fifty strings for a decoration you can buy and won't forget to provide, but you will be slipped up dozens of times during winter when you only want a string or two and have to send a mile or more to get it.

Many a time I have insisted that smilax should be planted every year, and that early in July. Old beds get bare at the bottom of the growths and do not send up successive crops so fast and require much more attention to keep in order. Most any soil will grow smilax. In a light sandy loam the growth will be weak. The best soil is a clay loam with at least a fourth of cow manure or stable manure if not too fresh. There is no need of making a bench. Right on the floor of the house is the place for it, and as it's only to last the year six inches of soil is an abundance.

I feel reluctant to repeat so often the principal points in smilax culture, but there may be a blacksmith or barber or preacher just joined the noble army of florists who will take a hint. It does not need a light, bright house; any house running north and south will do. It should be daily syringed. It should never be neglected in tying up. Two weeks' neglect of tying up the house for it to run on will give you days of most annoying work. When a string is cut before it is well matured the plant should not be watered till the young growths are well started or you will rot the tubers. That is why it is always better, when starting, to cut a bed from one end. It is most desirable to start at one end of the bed and cut all strings that are any way fit to cut; then you can manage the watering without trouble. When making a vigorous growth you can scarcely over water it. Ten inches between rows and eight inches between plants is a good distance to plant, and finally, it is not profitable unless kept steadily up to 60 degrees at night throughout the winter, and where it is made a specialty 65 degrees is better.

Asparagus Plumosus Nanus.

Asparagus plumosus is another article indispensable not only for the long strings but for the sprays. Unlike its cousin, the smilax, there is no need of making a planting of this every year. In fact it is better left several years. And we have learned from experience, and profited by the knowledge of experts with this plant that it should always be on the solid ground. For instance, if the house you intended to use for asparagus had a fairly dry surface you could dig up six inches (if fairly good soil), work in plenty of manure and with six inches of good rich soil above the ground level you would have a bed a foot deep and have just the right conditions. Never have the bed, however rich or deep, on boards or tiles. To once more use the words of Mr. Elliott, "Never divorce it from mother earth." A rather heavy well manured soil is what it wants and 55 to 60 degrees grows it well.

Speaking of manure for this asparagus tribe, and the smilax belongs to it, you know, most of you, how to make a good asparagus bed. In the old orthodox kitchen garden they were made two feet deep. Dead horses and perhaps dead ancestors were buried in them, and lots of other ingredients, and so they got asparagus shoots like a ten-cent Roman candle and that's all there is in the difference of asparagus. The "giant" varieties advertised is in the manure, that's the giant. And our ornamental asparagus are also voracious feeders.

There is another asparagus as useful as any, yes, perhaps the most useful green grown and used by the florist, A. Sprengeri. It needs a deep rich soil, a bench of five or six inches of soil will not sustain it the whole year. It is worth giving a bed as you do A. plumosus although it needs no such good and lofty house. About 60 degrees at night grows it well. Now some of you may have such a place in your establishment as that in which I saw this growing last November. It was in a range of six rose houses, equal span, all connecting and no partitions; four-inch cedar posts supported the gutters, which were six feet above grade; steam pipes hung on the posts and three or four feet above the floor; a path on each side of post. Now you will see that there was a space right under the gutter between posts in which you did not walk and which would be unused if the owner had not received some inspiration from his own brain. Between every post were glass boxes set on edge; the boxes were 16x24 and perhaps four to five inches thick. These were filled with soil and planted with Asparagus Sprengeri. I never saw better, and thousands of sprays had been and would be cut. Although the width of soil was only four or five inches it was sixteen inches deep and the Sprengeri was sending out sprays three feet long. I am not saying that this range was built with the most economical arrangement, but as it was built that way it was turned to most excellent account and a good many hundred dollars were taken from that range besides what the roses produced.

There seemed last winter far more than ever a demand for some graceful green, and to have it in abundance on your place is just as essential as to have roses and carnations. Maidenhair fern is beautiful and never can be in disfavor, but in large vases or bunches of flowers something larger and bolder is needed, and here is where plumosus and Sprengeri come in, and they never come in fast enough to meet our wants.

Mignonette.

This is very easy to grow and can be overdone and perhaps not over-profitable, still very useful, and when well grown brings a good price for the best sprays and the inferior can be used with cut flowers. If you want it by the first of November it should be sown about the 15th of this month. If not wanted before Christmas wait till August 1. Mignonette should have nothing but the lightest house. The glass may be twenty feet above it or two feet, that won't make any difference, except that a small cheap house is just as good as an expensive one. Don't go below 40 degrees or above 45 degrees at night in firing weather and you will have good mignonette. Some growers sow a few seeds every twelve inches apart on the bed and thin out to the strongest plant. Twelve to fifteen inches apart is close enough for each plant. Others sow a few seeds in 2½-inch pots, and when ready to plant divide the contents into three parts.

It is well known that the mignonette handled as we do an aster or balsam is often a failure transplanted, but with a good lump of soil they will not feel it. It is well to have three or four little plants in a group for some mishap may occur, and when two or three inches high you can thin out to the strongest, and when about three inches high is the time to pinch out the top so that they branch out. You cannot grow good spikes unless you keep the lateral growths pinched off, and, like everything else we grow, and there is any money in, it requires labor. The greatest enemy we have found to the mignonette is the green cabbage worm, the larva of the yellow or sulphur butterfly. The little worm is so precisely the color of the mignonette leaf that it would take the keen shooter's eye of a Cartledge or Lonsdale to detect them. A very weak solution of Paris green syringed over the plants will fix them, and by early October they disappear. Mother butterfly has gone to the happy hunting ground.

Pansies.

I have been watching the pansy trade in our town and vicinity this spring, and made some mental memorandums that will benefit me. Let me say here that if a bed of pansies is wanted to last all summer (just as feasible as a bed of verbenas), the seed should not be sown till end of January or even later. If you intend to winter them in a cold-frame covered with sash and have very early plants in bloom by middle of April (remember I am talking about western New York) then early in August will do.

But if you have none of these conveniences, and wish to have a lot of early pansies to sell early in May, entirely grown in the field, then they should be sown by the 15th to 20th of this month of July. If well cared for and transplanted at proper time they will be stout branching plants before winter sets in, and, if surviving the winter in good order, will be ready to open their welcome faces at the first warm days of spring. Sow in very shallow drills two inches apart, only just cover the seeds, and never let the seed bed get dry. It will not be a large plot of ground, and you can afford to give it the best of attention. The most critical time with seed is when it is just bursting through the ground. Don't bother with shade but water the seed bed twenty times a day if necessary. Never let it be dry till the plants are up.

WOOD AS FUEL.

In view of present coal difficulty, would appreciate any information you may be able to supply concerning relative efficiency of coal and wood for steam heating during fall and winter of five or six months in a greenhouse establishment of some 12,000 or 15,000 square feet of glass. How much (cords) of 4-foot wood would I need to burn to equal steam producing power of one (1) ton of furnace (hard) coal?

As I am bothered by water in cellars in fall and spring, thus making it impossible to keep the fires going, would like a suggestion as to how the houses (200x20) could be heated by some portable heaters. Have three such houses, two being connected. Would it be possible to keep out frost on such occasions by using say four medium-size oil heaters for each house? No. 404.

Replying to Correspondent No. 404, the heat producing powers of all woods when thoroughly dry have approximately the same value per pound of wood; it will thus readily be seen that the heavier the wood (when dry), the greater the heating value per cord. In general practice, 2¼ pounds of wood (dry) will give the same results as one pound of anthracite coal. Of the woods most readily procurable the heat values are in about the following order:

Hickory, white oak, maple, beech, red and black oak, poplar, chestnut and elm; thus, a cord of dry hickory is equal to two thousand pounds of anthracite coal, a cord of white oak to seventeen hundred pounds of anthracite coal, beech, red and black oak to fourteen hundred pounds of anthracite coal, poplar, chestnut and elm to one thousand pounds of anthracite coal.

The value of wood for fuel depends very largely upon its dryness, the value decreasing very rapidly with the percentage of moisture held by the wood.

I know of no portable heaters which could be satisfactorily used for temporary heating houses of the sizes given (200x20). If it is not immediately convenient to make your boiler cellar water tight, why not run a circuit of steam pipes over-head in each house, say a one-inch flow and return for such temporary heating, using a small steam boiler which can be placed on the ground level.

THE COMING CONVENTION.

It's refreshing to hear from other cities of the preparations that are making for the trip to Asheville. It's a good, long journey for those whose stamping ground is located in northern New York or Minnesota or the wilds of Canada, but think of what you will get in return for the expense of this southern trip. Many of us would kiss the well-washed feet of an earthly angel, and here we are promised when crossing the passes of the Appalachian Mountains to take a smack at the understandings of a real angel. It is hoped that Mr. Deake has ordered a goodly sized flock of these celestial cherubim, so that there will be one for each brother and that they will float along horizontally by the side of the cars, so that this pleasant incident can be accomplished without an unusual kinking of neck or vertebrae, for some of those who intend journeying to Asheville love delicacies, but are willing to refrain from them if they come with too much physical inconvenience.

Dropping these mythical and celestial features, there are many good reasons why all who possibly can should be in attendance at the annual convention of the S. A. F., and some of the reasons, with the editor's permission, I should like to comment on. At Indianapolis last February the writer was given the great honor of responding to the toast, "The Society of American Florists." I did not deserve the honor, and have many times since reflected on the poor effort made. Some men can talk better with their tongues than with their pens; others the reverse. Some have plenty of good ideas and thoughts, but would soon get nervous if talking to an audience five minutes without raising a laugh. So the opportunity to say many good, truthful and deserving things was lost and the effort petered out into more or less amusing stories.

It is the duty of all who are physically and financially able to be at Asheville. The old guard will be there sure, but we want more than that. The S. A. F. has done much for all of us; more than most realize. It may have destroyed the profits of some fakir firms, which no honest man regrets, but has made all acquainted with "who's who." It has been the medium of our getting acquainted personally not only with the leaders of the profession, but with hundreds of lesser lights whose acquaintance has been just as pleasant and just as much cherished. It has been a healthy stimulant to the whole trade. We have learned from each other. It is the parent, if not the sustainer, of our florist papers, and who will dare to say that the rank and file of the florists of the country could get along without them?

A few bright men are gifted with the inspiration to originate methods of culture in advance of what has gone before and the rest of us are purely copyists. I don't attribute the marvelous increase of glass and the use of flowers of the past fifteen years to the influence of the S. A. F., but for the labor-saving, expeditious methods of producing these plants and flowers we owe much to the national society. Ours is a profession, and, like the legitimate medical profession, has no secrets. A few men may keep a wrinkle to themselves, but the majority of the leaders are proud to diffuse their knowledge to their fellow craftsmen. There are any amount of fools, lazy and indolent men, who will not take advantage either by observation or advice. The good society may have threshed out many of the practical and more familiar subjects, yet there is an immense field of work before it.

And now we are ornamental horticulturists as well as florists, and do you realize what that rather high-sounding title implies? Unlimited is the vision before us, and instead of being exhausted for topics the field of knowledge is inexhaustible. To keep up the good work of the society, to create enthusiasm, it is necessary to have a good, lively meeting.

Help along the good cause of which you are all beneficiaries, for by stopping at home without a very substantial reason you are exercising selfishness and a lack of public spirit, as well as disloyalty to the good society to which you owe so much.

I spoke in favor of a visit to Asheville and I don't regret it, whatever the result. All our northern cities bear a great resemblance, and there is really little difference in them except size. North Carolina is truly southern. It will be an education which, for those susceptible to it, will be a great blessing. We shall meet a people with whom we are not acquainted, a people, and their offspring, who forty years ago fought valiantly for what they believed was their right, but who now are as loyal to this real republic as the farmer of Vermont. We shall see mountain slopes and green valleys clothed with a verdure new to many of us, and with nature's best blessings of a beautiful country and a salubrious climate we shall return to our homes replenished with vigor of mind and body.

The Book of Solomon contains countless admonitions regarding the blessings of knowledge. You can gain a great knowledge of the world sitting by your own fireside if you choose the right reading and sources of information. Yet there is nothing like seeing for yourself, and travel is the greatest educator, as a well-stored mind is the most continuous and lasting blessing within the reach of man. See and observe all you can, and don't think that the acquisiton of the dollar is the chief aim in life. The dollar is most useful to meet obligations, but beyond the necessities and moderate comforts of life it's not a blessing. So don't say you can't afford a trip to Asheville, and don't let's hear that you have been fishing in Muskoka that week. Fish some other day.

The president of the society is known to you all. He is one of the most earnest, substantial and capable men in our brotherhood. He accepted the presidency knowing that the society was going to the south to a location far removed from the "madding crowd" of florists and where all at first thought the attendance might be slim, although I now believe it will be good. He could have been president any time within the past ten years had he desired the honor, and now it has been given to him by the unanimous vote of the society. He, John Burton, deserves a splendid meeting and the loyal support of every member.

NEW YORK.

Club Outing.

Monday, July 7th, was a great day among the florists of this section. The summer outing of the New York Florists' Club was unanimously voted a great success, and our sympathy is extended to those who were unable to attend. Early in the morning the clans began to board the steamer Isabel, and when all the blue badges were pinned on the party was taken for a delightful sail up the Sound, as far as Execution light house, returning to Witzel's Park shortly after 1 o'clock, where a very good hot dinner was served and thoroughly enjoyed by the two hundred and thirty present. But let us return to the morning. On the boat refreshments of all kinds were there in unlimited quantities. Mr. Metz, who is accustomed to fixing up bracers and croton water for florists in the wholesale district, had charge of the commissary department. He, with numerous assistants, was kept busy all the time. Ping Pong was played on the upper deck. The experts, D. Y. Mellis and Joe Manda, were the instructors. We are unable to say who won the prize. There were two bands of music, the black and the white alternating to the stern and bow. The pleasant time on the boat was worth the money charged.

At the grove during dinner the bands discoursed the popular airs of many lands, much to the pleasure of the party. In the afternoon fun ran riot out on the fields where the following games were played: Baseball match, married versus single men, was won by the singles with a score of 18 to 2. The teams were lined up thus:

Singles.		Married.
E. Braudt	1st b	Wheeler
Kessler	3d b	Phillips
Guttman	c	Scollay
H. Schmutz	p	Traendly
J. Manda	s s	Langjahr
Fenlick	2d b	Mellis
Roth	1 f	L. Schmitz
Hayden	c f	Hillebrand
P. O'Mara	r f	Burns
Score 18.		Score 2.

Wheeler won the prize for most runs, and O'Mara was voted the star batter. Joe Manda got the sweet caps for base hits and Wheeler handed round the box of pure Rosa's given by President Sheridan.

The ladies' bowling match was a hot contest. We often pitied the official scorers. Frank Traendly's prize for married lady was won by Mrs. J. Cook. Wm. Elliot's prize for single lady went to Miss F. L. Demeusy. It was a five frame game. Following are the results:

Mrs. A. Moss	4	Mrs. P. B. Meissner.	26
Mrs. J. Reimels	13	Miss Lewis	30
Mrs. J. Cook	50	Miss M. Donoghue	11
Mrs. Kreshover	13	Miss L. Swenson	10
Mrs. J. Theilman	46	Miss Demeusy	49
Mrs. F. Traendly	8	Mrs. Elmore	1
Mrs. Bunyard	12	Miss Auer	23
Mrs. W.H. Siebrecht	26	Miss B. Koch	24
Mrs. W. Duckham	28	Miss E. Koch	36
Miss A. Elmore	33	Miss Manda	26
Mrs. F. Chapman	27	Mrs. L. Schmutz, Jr.	23
Mrs. A. L. Miller	36	Mrs. A. Schmutz	29
Mrs. J. V. Phillips	0

The fat men's race was won by Frank Traendly; John Nugent, second; Harry Bunyard, third. H. Clucas, Alex Burns, J. Austin Shaw and others did not compete. Charlie Weathered's prizes for the girls' race, 1st prize was won by Miss L. Nugent; second, Miss L. Butterfield; third, Miss Freda Schenck. Alex Bunyard's prizes for boys' race, 1st went to Joe. Douglas; 2nd Larry Schenck; 3rd, Fred Theilman. Clucas & Boddington's case of Harrisii bulbs and knife for three-legged race was won by Harry Von der Schmidt and Fred Theilman. Fat men's bicycle race was won by Frank Traendly, with Harry Bunyard a hot rival. The game of quoits between Madison and New York was won by the former in following order:

New York.		Madison.
P. O'Mara	7	A. Herrington	13
J. Manda	4	W. Duckham	8
	11		21

Alex Wallace gave prizes for the boys' bicycle race, and they were won by Alex H. Donaldson and John Duncan.

There were many other games of which we could not keep track.

On the return journey Mr. O'Mara presented the prizes to the victors with pleasant, witty remarks. Afterwards dancing was indulged in till the dock was reached about 8 p. m.

We wish to give the very highest praise to the members of the committee, Frank Traendly, William Elliott, Harry Bunyard, D. Y. Mellis and John Birnie. They worked hard and succeeded in giving the New York florists and their families one of the best outings ever enjoyed. There was not a blemish. The entire party was like one great family and any profession could be proud of them. To give a list of names would be naming the best of the business element. Many were of the opinion that such gatherings should be more frequent. Next affair may be larger but it cannot excel in the good that is required in life.

J. I. Donlan.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

It was with deep sorrow that the florists of this city learned of the death of our good friend and brother florist, Wm. G. Bertermann. His death was not a surprise to his many friends as he had been in poor health for several years, and although he had been traveling, both in this country and abroad, seeking a climate that would be beneficial to his health, he had been gradually growing weaker from day to day, until at last he was compelled to halt at Sacramento, Cal., where he died June 29.

There was no florist in the city who was better known or better liked than Will Bertermann and he was always a welcome visitor wherever he went. He has been an active member in several societies in the trade as well as outside, and his words were always listened to with interest in our club meetings. He was one of our oldest members. He was one of the leaders in our famous mum shows from the beginning until his health failed him, and last year, after several unsuccessful attempts had been made at a fall show, he undertook the task almost single-handed, and worked up the finest flower show ever held in this city. The strain was too great for his already weakened body, and he was obliged to go south soon after the show closed.

At the American Carnation Society meeting in Baltimore he was elected president of that body, but after getting the work started in preparing for the convention in this city last February he was obliged to turn the leadership over to the vice-president and our own state society president, he even being unable to attend the convention.

Mr. Bertermann was for many years a member of the Society of American Florists and seldom missed the annual conventions. Also a member of the Rose Society. Outside of the above societies he was a member of numerous fraternal societies and was very popular among the business men of the city.

Wm. G. Bertermann was born in Germany in 1857 and came to this country in ---2, but did not come to this city until 1878, since which time he has been engaged in business here. Beginning in a small way, but attending to business strictly, he, in company with his brother John, has worked up one of the largest florist businesses in the country.

He was unmarried and made his home with a widowed sister, who survives him, besides his brothers John and Edward.

The funeral was held July 5th from the home of John Bertermann on East Washington St. The florists of this city and a few from outside attended in a body to pay their last respects to our good friend and brother florist. There were perhaps more flowers than at any funeral in recent years, some very pretty pieces being sent by individual florists in addition to the large broken column sent by our state society. The funeral ceremonies were in charge of the Masonic Lodge of which he was a member.

Out of town florists at the funeral were E. G. Hill, F. Dorner and F. Dorner, Jr., Chas. Rieman and H. Hartje.

The next meeting of our state society will be a memorial meeting in honor of Mr. Bertermann. The meeting will take place on Tuesday, Aug. 5, at the regular meeting place in the Commercial Club rooms. A. F. J. Baur.

CATTLEYA TRIANEA.

This cattleya is probably the most profitable to grow of any of its genus, flowering as it does in midwinter when the demand for flowers is at its height.

The illustration shows a mass of plants of this cattleya growing on a wooden block and in full bloom. When well established the plants will produce four flowers to a spike, this being very common among plants that have been grown for a year or two.

The flowers of C. Trianæ are very large, the sepals and petals being of a delicate blush color and the lip a very vivid crimson purple. They can be bought by the thousand in the eastern markets during their season, and always figure prominently in the great midwinter functions.

There are many varieties of this charming cattleya and some very rare; C. Backhousiana being one of the most distinct. C. Trianæ is a good grower and will do well nailed on boards or fixed up in any of the usual methods, though for the beginner baskets will be found the most suitable receptacle. Do not run the plants dry at all, but keep them fairly well supplied with water all the season, more being needed in the summer than later when the growth is completed.

One of the most valuable features of C. Trianæ is the fact that its flowers do not come in crops like those of C. labiata or C. Mossiæ, but will spread over a season extending from December to April inclusive, if one has a sufficient number of plants.

C. Trianæ comes from Colombia, where it must originally have been very plentiful for a tremendous quantity of plants have been imported to this country alone in the past five years. C. T.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business for the past week was considered good. Quite a lot of funeral work was done, which with a few late weddings made trade very satisfactory for the first week in July.

Sweet peas are coming in by the bushel, the abundance being due to the recent rains. All of the light colors sell well, but plenty of the darker shades are left unsold.

Roses are plentiful, that is, of the second quality, mostly Brides, Maids and Gates. Red roses are scarce, only a very few coming in. Beauties are also scarce, not enough coming in to go around, as the demand is always good for good Beauties.

Carnations are not overplentiful, only a few fairly good ones coming in. Monday a big lot of carnations came in fast asleep, which were, no doubt, fine when they left the shipper. The bulk of carnations are small and not salable.

Good valley is still to be had, with plenty of it on hand for the demand. These, with plenty of hollyhocks, feverfews and cornflowers, make up the daily receipts at the wholesale houses, which are sold at the following prices: Roses, from $1 to $4 per 100; Beauties, $1 to $3 per dozen; carnations, 50 cents to $2 per 100; sweet peas, 25 cents per single 100 and $2 in 1,000 lots; hollyhocks, $1 per 100; feverfews and cornflowers, 25 cents per 100; smilax, scarce and poor, 15 cents per string.

Notes.

Mrs. Wm. Ellison, of Ellison & Tesson, left last week for the north to spend the summer. Mr. Wm. Ellison left the week previous. A. Y. Ellison and Miss Ellison will join them by August 1. They expect to remain until September 15.

F. C. Weber furnished 200 American Beauties for the opening of the new National Bank of Commerce, which is considered the finest in the country.

Dr. A. S. Halstedt of Belleville was in town Saturday. The doctor says that the Belleville boys will come to the picnic in a body and will do everything in their power to make it a success.

Mr. R. F. Tesson has recovered from his sickness and is around again attending to business. Robert says that should the World's Fair people succeed in condemning his mother's property he will have to move all his rose houses this summer, and this would be no easy matter.

The trustees are working hard to make the picnic a grand affair. They are arranging games of all kinds with prizes for the children and the older folks. The famous band of negro singers has been engaged for the enjoyment of the children. There will be dancing, boating, fishing, bowling and shooting. This will make it pleasant for everybody, and should the weather man be good to us on that day a large attendance will be assured, and we shall all have a good time. The trustees will meet this week and arrange for the different committees to take charge of the different sports. The florists should not forget the date, Thursday, July 24. Those who have not received programs may be supplied by addressing any one of the trustees.

Those who have made up their minds to attend the S. A. F. convention next month should send in their names as soon as they can to J. J. Beneke, 1220 Olive street, who already has quite a number of names.

A very sad and painful accident befell Mrs. John Young at her home on Sunday night. She missed her footing and fell down a long flight of stairs, breaking her arm and sustaining other injuries. Mr. Young reports that, while the injuries to Mrs. Young are very painful, nothing dangerous will result from the fall. Mr. and Mrs. Young have our sympathy.

Bowling.

The July series were begun Monday night. The weather was red hot and eight of the faithful came and rolled three games. The handicaps were somewhat changed. We now have three scratch men, one of whom was high man Monday night.

BOSTON.

Various Items.

Well, boys, business is pretty tough and no mistake! And whether all hands (except me) have made money enough to last over the Sahara of the summer months or not I hardly dare guess. Perhaps we better pass the hat.

Probably because the cool June kept flowers in better condition than usual, not so many by far have thrown out plants as could be expected and are still cutting and trying to market the crop. Next week, however, will probably witness a heavy falling off in quantity and quality. Kaiserin roses have hardly made their regular showing yet. They were quite plentiful for a few days some little time ago, then took a rest, but are now coming quite freely and quite good. So are all other kinds.

Vacations are beginning among both the florists and more ordinary people, as evinced by the number of Back Bay residences with shutters put up.

P. L. Carbone was the first to start for Europe, sailing July 2. During his absence his Boylston street place will be enlarged and thoroughly refitted, the granolithic floor, sloping on all sides to a drain in the center, being the most important change. The work is already well under way.

Gypsy moths and brown-tails are getting in their work. Did you know that an old gun loaded with an ordinary charge of loose powder and held some three or four feet away from a nest or gathering of caterpillars will blow them to kingdom-come in just about three-eighths of a second with no damage to anything else?

If you are interested in up-to-date park arrangements go and see the sand garden for the little folks near the mouth of the subway on the public gardens. Or if you want to see a small army of small people just enjoying themselves go to the same place.

The "Wholesale Bat and Ball Team" complains that the Park street nine refuses to meet them on the diamond angular field. Come, Brimstones! fire up and give them a smell of future punishment!

Mr. F. W. Clark, well and very favorably known to habitues of Park street, has been quite sick with a complicated heart trouble, but is now recuperating at Northfield. J. S. Manter.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The cut flower market is quiet, thoroughly summerlike, so to speak. The supply is decreasing, not one-half the stock of a month ago is coming in town. Beauties are falling off in quality. It is rather a difficult matter to get enough select stock to fill the orders. The features are some really fine Kaiserins (this rose is very plentiful now), a few Carnots (chiefly George Anderson), a few orchids, lily of the valley (which can be had in quantity), and some really fine carnations. The first asters have made their appearance; Leo Niessen having some fair flowers that brought $1 to $1.50 per 100. He thinks they will be quite plentiful in a short time. Centaurea imperialis makes a fine show in the store windows. Pond lilies are also in evidence.

President Burton's Address.

The July meeting of the Florists' Club was favored by an eloquent address from John Burton, president of the S. A. F. O. H. Mr. Burton gave a graphic account of the trip to Asheville, which he felt sure all the Philadelphia florists would enjoy. The fare is quite expensive—$6 for a round trip ticket to Washington, D. C., and $14.95, Washington to Asheville and return by the Southern Railroad, making $20.95 in all. But the accommodations at Asheville are excellent and quite inexpensive. The place is one well worth seeing. Biltmore being one of the finest country seats ever laid out. The people are warm-hearted and most hospitable, and while no very elaborate preparations for the entertainment of visiting florists have been made, Mr. Burton is confident that the well-known southern hospitality will more than make up for any absence of formal entertainments. It is to be hoped that every Philadelphian who reads these lines will make an effort to join our delegation to Asheville next month, and heartily support the national society and its able leader.

Marketing Cut Flowers.

It is interesting to note that many of our leading men are becoming convinced that the days of peddling cut flowers are numbered. Some favor commission houses, some a market, while others believe that both commission houses and market working side by side will prove the ideal method for the disposal of our product. Besides the arguments of loss of time and deterioration of stock caused by peddling it is thought that when flowers are cheap and plentiful the retailers might often be induced to buy good stock in quantity that now goes to the fakirs or the dump. There is reason to believe that the time is ripe for concerted action in this matter. The vast quantities of glass being erected this summer will make it absolutely necessary to cut down running expenses to a minimum if this extra glass is to yield fair returns to the growers.

Notes.

Joseph Bevis, of Limekiln Pike, will grow one house of Liberty this season.

Joseph Wolff, Sr., has gathered quite a collection of orchids in his house at Twenty-ninth street and Sedgeley avenue.

R. M. Eisenhart, of Torresdale, is remodeling his violet plant.

Richard Smith, of Holmesburg, is building a violet house 22x150. Mrs. Smith, who is a relative of the well known retailer, Robert Crawford, Jr., will attend to the business. There are several smaller houses on the place.

A. Goutrom, of Holmesburg, is starting in business with two houses 22x150.

Edward Reid is making preparations to increase the capacity of his commission house one hundred per cent. Mr. Reid does not believe in much cold storage. Flowers should be sold, not kept, he thinks. The increased space will be chiefly for packing and handling, with another of his naturally cooled rooms for carnations. Three of the crack carnation growers who ship here—Kester and Fullmer, of Cardington, and Emil Lieker, of Lansdowne—will add considerably to the capacity of their plants this summer. The former will double, the second named will add one-third, while the Lansdowne grower expects to put up about 5,000 feet more glass.

Bowling.

The third evening's play in the race for places on the bowling team to go to Asheville developed an exciting contest with the certainty of several places being in doubt until the last pin is bowled over. It is probable that even then ties will have to be rolled off. The scene of battle was shifted to the Columbia Alleys. The scores while fairly good did not reach high water mark. It is interesting to note that D. T. Connor, who made 174 in the first game, failed to secure one of the six points by a few pins. W. K. Harris and Falck were obliged to withdraw, leaving fourteen players in the race. The scores follow:

George Anderson	468	John Westcott	416
S. Dunlap	455	D. T. Connor	414
B. Starkey	440	W. R. Gibson	404
Geo. M. Moss	435	Wm. Robertson	404
J. P. Habermehl	432	Robert Kift	392
G. C. Watson	423	George Craig	384
S. Adelberger	416	Frank Polites	379

The scores by points: Moss, 3; Starkey, 3; Kift, 2; Watson, 2; Polites, 1; Robertson, 1; Connor, 1; Craig, 1; Gibson, 1; Dunlap, 1; Anderson, 1; Habermehl, 1. Phil.

ADAMS, MASS.

T. D. Brown, the popular florist, has again found it necessary to increase his plant and has contracted with Lord & Burnham Co. for a house 16x60, erected complete. He reports carnations as looking extra well in the field, probably on account of the very cold and rainy weather we have had for the past month. Business has been the best the past season of any since he started, it being impossible for him to grow flowers enough for his trade. He hopes by the addition of the new house to be in position to supply the trade that comes his way.

A. J. Boothman has his houses cleaned out of bedding and vegetable plants and has planted his houses to tomatoes, which look as though they would give a good crop of fruit soon. O. S.

THE ROSE SOCIETY'S MEDALS FOR NOVELTIES.

The executive committee of the American Rose Society at its last meeting, held on June 20, took final action upon the conditions under which its medals for novelties would be offered for competition at exhibitions of other societies. It was

Resolved, That the gold medal and silver medal of the American Rose Society be offered to the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society and to the American Institute of the City of New York for competition at the March shows of those bodies in 1903; and to the Chicago Horticultural Society for the fall show of 1902; in each case the conditions governing the awards of the medals are:

Gold medal for the best new rose not yet disseminated; whether of domestic or foreign origin. Exhibits to be judged by the official scale of the American Rose Society, and no medal to be awarded to any rose scoring less than 95 points.

Silver medal is offered at the same time and under the same conditions for a novelty scoring not less than 85 points.

It is further ordered that the complete scores of all entries in the competition be filed with the secretary of the American Rose Society before the award of any medal is confirmed. No duplicate medals will be awarded. It is understood that though the award of the gold or silver medal may be made to the same variety from one exhibitor in different centers only one medal will be delivered to the exhibitor.

The executive committee of the American Rose Society reserves to itself the right of selection of the judges who shall pass upon the exhibits in the competition for these medals.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The midsummer dull season has now arrived in good earnest. The demand has fallen off to such an extent that even what few good flowers come in move slowly and the poorest find no sale at all. On roses the range is $3 to $5 for the best and down to $1 for the poorest. In carnations really good whites reach $1.50 and even $2 for the best, but colored stock runs from $1 to $1.50 for the pick and from that down to 5 cents a bunch.

Sweet peas have improved in quality and are coming in very freely. The best bring 50 cents a 100, and from that prices range down to $1.50 per 100 bunches. There are lots of lilies in the market, both longiflorinm and auratum.

Since last report we have had considerable burning hot weather and old Sol extraeted a great deal of moisture from the soil. So much so that rains last Monday and Tuesday were not unwelcome.

But this was followed by very heavy rains Tuesday night and Wednesday that were not so welcome, and damage from too much water is again likely.

Various Items.

Kennicott Bros. Co. are making extensive changes in their establishment. The cool room under the sidewalk is being tiled and cemented, and when completed it will be an ideal place for storing flowers. Other improvements are also in progress.

Poehlman Bros. Co. are cutting some fine Crocker earnations now that sell readily at $2 per 100. They say that Crocker is a fine summer carnation, but that it does nothing for them in the winter.

Frank Holy, the Homan avenue florist, died last Saturday of pneumonia at the age of 51 years. He was born in Bohemia and came to this city twenty-seven years ago. He had established a good business. It will be continued by his widow and daughters.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Washburn are enjoying an outing at Athelstane, Wis. Mrs. Washburn will remain for the summer and Mr. Washburn will spend a few days there each week.

Chas. Erne, with E. H. Hunt, is nursing a broken arm as the result of a friendly boxing bout last Thursday.

President Winterson says out of town florists are already writing in for further information about the trip to Asheville.

Paul Swanson, a local grower of mushrooms, has begun the making of mushroom spawn at his place, 2747 Forty-seventh street.

D. C. Noble, Columbia City, Ind., was a visitor last week.

The quarterly meeting of the Horticultural Society of Chicago was held last Tuesday afternoon.

Wheeling, W. Va.—The Upland Nursery Co. has been incorporated with a capital stock of $30,000, of which amount $500 has been subscribed and $50 has been paid. Incorporators: John D. Driggs, A. H. Dondna and J. C. Dent of Bridgeport, Ohio, and J. M. Brown and E. E. Brown of Wheeling.

The meeting of this society held Tuesday evening, July 1, was largely attended. President Ward occupied the chair. A constitution governing the society was submitted and with a few minor changes adopted. It provides for a permanent organization. The annual meeting will occur the first Thursday in February, 1903. Officers will be elected for two years. The annual dues are set at $5.

The society intends to hold exhibitions at stated times, and will bend its efforts to developing in Brooklyn and district a taste for things horticultural. The field is wide, the opportunities many, and it is believed that much good work will be accomplished.

A very gratifying addition was made to the entertainment fund. The Long Island florists are responding nobly to the call for assistance along this line, and a cordial and hospitable reception to the American Carnation Society next February will be the result of this liberality. There are, however, many more to hear from, and those desiring to help along the good work should send their contributions to the undersigned.

The society adjourned for the summer months, probably till October next.

Beaulieu, Woodhaven, made an exhibit of dahlia and pansy flowers, receiving honorable mention.

CULINARY PEAS.

Some seed of the Thomas Laxton culinary pea sent us early this spring by Messrs. Laxton Bros., Bedford, England, were planted April 27th and the first crop was picked June 23d.

The variety proved to be a good grower, the pods were well filled and the peas sweet to the taste. It is a very desirable culinary pea.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.—The firm of Brown & Canfield has been dissolved by mutual consent. Mr. A. C. Brown will continue the business of the old firm, and Mr. A. C. Canfield will build a range of greenhouses in the southwestern part of the city and grow roses, carnations, etc., for the wholesale market.

COLUMBUS, O.—Miss Anna Hellenthal, daughter of J. R. Hellenthal, the florist, was married to William Leonard, a popular young business man of this city, June 29.

BALTIMORE.

Here the weather for the past week has been hysterical—away up in the nineties or away down in the shivers, with rain every day or nearly every day.

Trade for midsummer continues fairly well maintained, carnations especially being in demand and all stock cleaned up. Roses out of doors are better in quality and go off very well, white varieties being sought for funeral work.

One day last week several Federal officials in the custom and revenue departments were inducted into their new posts, or reappointed, and there was a profuse display of flowers and plants in their quarters.

To-day, July 7, carnations are in moderate request.

Robert L. Graham, of Waverley, one of our enterprising florists, his wife and numerous of their offspring are on Wednesday to make a hazardous journey. It seems to us the reverse of judicious conduct for sane people at this season of the year to forsake "the hills of Maryland" to go summering in the sirocco-swept suburbs of your windy city, but they thus tempt fate and go to sojourn for several weeks in the mild, or wild, seclusion of Fox Lake, wherever that is, and we commend them to your friendly hands in case of droughts or floods.

Philip B. Welsh of Waverley, is pulling down his barns and building greater; in other words remodeling and modernizing a number of his plant houses.

Wm. McRoberts, a florist of Govanstown, was found drowned in a shallow tank in one of his greenhouses on the evening of July 4th. It is thought that in stooping to dip up a can of water he was taken with an epileptic fit. He learned his trade with the late James Pentland, was afterwards gardener at Hampton, one of the handsomest old-time estates near this city, and later succeeded to the business of the late Archibald Brackenridge, whose widow he married, and who with several children survives him. He was at one time an officer of the Gardeners' Club, and for a number of years has been the local correspondent of one of the trade papers.

R.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

The effects of the hot weather were quickly shown in the quality of the stock coming in. Roses, with a few exceptions, are about played out. They are soft, lack substance, and open up before they can be sold. Red ones, especially, are hard to keep, and the demand for them is not very great at present. White stock is most in demand.

One of the best roses at present, all things considered, is the Marquise de Litta. This rose seems to revel in the heat, and it is in better form now than it has been at any time this season. It answers either for red or pink and there is quite a demand for it. The Liberty cannot stand the hot weather; it opens up very fast and is off color.

Some first-class Brides and Maids are still seen, but they are grown farther north and are shipped in. They meet a good demand, especially the white ones.

Carnations are scarce, especially white, which are almost impossible to obtain. Some fine Dorothy are coming in from E. T. Grave, Richmond, Ind., and are the best carnations in this market. They bring $2 per 100; other grades, 50 cents to $1.50 per 100.

Sweet peas are not overplentiful, that is, good ones, and there is a ready sale for them. There is any quantity of such stock as feverfew, candytuft, alyssum, etc., and at about your own price.

Various Items.

The programs are now out for the florists' outing, and from the looks of it there will be plenty of fun for every one. One event that is not down will be a wrestling contest between W. J. Rodgers and Ed Fries. As both of these men are now in training, a lively contest may be looked for. Thomas Jackson, who has charge of the quoit pitching, is an expert in this line. He claims to be able to throw a quoit as unerringly as a man can shoot with a rifle, and it is no vain boast, as he can do it.

E. G. Gillett's wholesale house closes at 5 p. m. during July and August.

Mrs. S. S. Skidelsky of Phitadelphia, Pa., was a visitor.

C. J. OHMER.

TORONTO JUNCTION, ONT.

Mr. A. Gilchrist, accompanied by his wife, left on June 21st for a two months' visit to Scotland. It is thirty-four years since he left the land of his birth for America, and he will no doubt find many changes.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilchrist did some work for the Canadian government this spring. He visited ten horticultural societies, also speaking to the high and public schools on the improvement of school grounds with native trees, shrubs and plants. He traveled about 1,000 miles, delivering thirty addresses in ten days, and says it was the hardest work he ever undertook. Mrs. Gilchrist had a different route, speaking to seven horticultural societies and schools on nature study. They found the people anxious for information along these lines and feel that much good resulted from the series of addresses.

FUMIGATING WITH SULPHUR.

Some one asked through the REVIEW about fumigating with sulphur now we have no hot steam pipes. We grow vegetables, potted plants, chrysanthemums, Maids, Meteors, Liberties, Perles and Gates on own roots, also grafted Brides, Maids and Liberties. They are all perfectly healthy and free from black or green fly, thrips and red spider.

We fumigate with tobacco stems and to a house 20x100 place a teaspoonful of sulphur on top of the tobacco stems.

CHAS. WINKLER.

[This may be all right if the stems are kept so well dampened that there is no chance of the sulphur ever burning with a flame but people are sometimes a little careless in the matter. Be cautious.—Ed.]

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The wedding of Mr. O. A. C. Oehmler, of Butte, Mont., and Mrs. Anna Belle Waters, of this city, will take place July 15th at the home of the bride's mother, 1520 Twelfth street, N. W. After September 1st Mr. and Mrs. Oehmler will be at home at 818 W. Broadway, Butte, Mont.

WE consider the REVIEW indispensable in our business.— D. W. WALTER, Massillon, O.

PHILADELPHIA.

Mr. W. H. Hall, who for the past fifteen years has been with W. Atlee Burpee & Co., died suddenly from heart failure on Monday night, June 30th, at his home in Tioga, near Philadelphia. Mr. Hall was in his forty-fifth year and had been connected with the seed business for more than twenty-five years. Ten years of this time he spent with the house of D. Landreth & Sons, having been employed at first by them at Bloomsdale and later traveling on the road through the south for them. In 1887 he connected himself with the house of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., where he has been ever since, and at the time of his death occupied a very responsible position as head of the Freight and Express Order Department. Mr. Hall was a widower and leaves one child.

THUNDERBOLT, GA.—The Thunderbolt Ferneries, Clarke & Ley, proprietors, have been established here, with Savannah as the express and freight shipping point. The firm is composed of John H. Clarke and Alfred E. Ley, the latter being a son of John H. Ley, of Good Hope, D. C. They expect to carry on a general wholesale and retail business, making a specialty of ferns and palms. They have just finished building their first house, which is devoted to palms and ferns.

SECAUCUS, N. J.—The old Braubach place has been leased for five years to a prominent Japanese firm. Fred Meerbott, who has been with Fritz Dressel for the past three years, is the lessee. An acre of ground, with the houses, will be entirely devoted to Japanese products.

THE onion crop prospectus for June issued by the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y., gives detailed reports on the condition of the onion seed crops of the various onion seed growing states by counties. The cold spring and heavy rains have worked serious injury in many sections.

WESTFIELD, N. Y.—J. H. Dann, Jr., son of J. H. Dann, the florist, was badly hurt on the cars July 5th and died three hours later. He was in the employ of the J. C. & Lake Erie R. R. and was riding home from his work at the time.

DES MOINES, IA.—The Hawkeye Seed Co. is removing to the building at 207 and 209 West Seventh street. The company will occupy the entire building and will do a mail order and jobbing business in addition to its retail trade.

FREDONIA, N. Y.—Foster & Griffith, a nursery firm organized last spring, report an excellent business so far. J. H. Foster, the senior member of the firm, was for twelve years foreman for Lewis Roesch.

PLEASANT HILL, MO.—Geo. M. Kellogg is building 50,000 square feet of new glass, mostly for Beauties. He reports having had a fine season for out-of-door stock. A big field of Groff's gladioli promise good results soon.

BENTON HARBOR, MICH.—The Irving Jacquay Co., nurserymen, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $35,000.

BOBBINK & ATKINS, - RUTHERFORD, N. J.

DENVER, COLO.

On Saturday, June 28, Denver was visited by one of the worst hail storms we have seen, which hit a majority of the principal growers. Those who suffered most are the Park Floral Co., Colfax Avenue Floral Co., City Park, Mrs. Mauff, at her retail place on Logan avenue; Geo. Clark, the Gallup Floral Co., Maier & Denkworth, E. E. Peterson and Thos. Chapman. Although outdoor plants suffered a good deal, still they will be all O. K. in about three weeks.

The florists' picnic of the Fourth was a decided success, if not in the great number present, yet in the enjoyment of those who were there.

Ernest Flohr has returned from the Pacific coast.

On the 4th of July it snowed all through the mountains, in some cases to the depth of eight inches, and consequently it was so cool here that overcoats and wraps were in demand. This is a bother to those who have their young roses planted in the bench, for so much glass being out from the hail makes it almost impossible to keep uniform temperature. THORNE.

THE PIERSON-SEFTON CO.

The officers of this new company, organized to manufacture and erect greenhouses, conservatories, etc., with headquarters in Jersey City, N. J., are: President, Lincoln Pierson (formerly secretary of the Lord & Burnham Co); vice president, Paul M. Pierson (the well known grower of cut flowers for the New York market); secretary and treasurer, William Sefton (for the past six years superintendent for Hitchings & Co.).

The new company has secured property on West Side avenue, Jersey City, N. J., near the West Side station of the Newark branch of the Central R. R. of New Jersey, admirably suited for manufacturing purposes, and their factories are fitted with machinery of the most approved type. They have acquired the Paul M. Pierson patents and have other patents pending.

The members of the firm have certainly had wide experience in the business of greenhouse construction and will no doubt receive their share of work of this description.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

"A grand Japanese, oriental tea garden and floral exhibition" is to be held under the auspices of the Business Woman's Club at the Liederkranz Hall, Nov. 12th to 15th. H. Nanz, the florist, will be superintendent.

A printed premium list has been issued and copies may be had by addressing H. Nanz, Supt., this city.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO.—At an enthusiastic meeting of the Horticultural Society on July 1 arrangements were perfected for the flower show to be held Aug. 20 and 21.

CINCINNATI TO ASHEVILLE.

Notice to florists attending the S. A. F. O. H. convention at Asheville, en route via Cincinnati: Diagrams of Pullman sleepers will be at the office of E. G. Gillett ten days before time of starting, where he will be pleased to make reservations for anyone desiring same. Arriving at Cincinnati, go to the Queen & Crescent office, corner Fourth and Race streets, where you can then get berths that were saved for you. Price of sleeper is $3 each way.

The fare from Cincinnati to Asheville is $12.36, or one fare for the round trip.

The Chicago delegation will arrive in Cincinnati on the morning of Aug. 18, and a special train made up here by the Q. & C. R. R. will leave at 2 p. m., taking supper at Sommerset, Ky., arriving at Asheville at about 8 a. m.

Mr. Gillett would like every florist tributary to Cincinnati to notify him as soon as possible if he will go, and how many there will be in his party. In this way it will give him more time to make necessary arrangements for the comfort of all. C. J. Ohmer.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

Business is at a standstill just now and the weather is very hot, the thermometer registering way up to 96. Nevertheless flowers are looking fine, especially carnations in the field, which are looking finer than I have before seen them at any time. They are bushy plants and promise a fine grade of bloom.

The Kentucky Society of Florists held their meeting on July 2 at 3 o'clock p. m. at Fountain Ferry Park. There was a good attendance. The meeting was called to order by President Jacob Schulz and after the meeting a grand spread was served, which was enjoyed by all present.

C. H. Kunzman is building a new greenhouse with Jennings' gutter, using 24x36 glass.

John Bohrman, who has been under the weather, is up and about again.

The premium list is out for the chrysanthemum show to be given by the Business Women's Club, November 12 to 15; Henry Nanz is superintendent.

PITTSBURG.

The Pittsburg Rose and Carnation Co., of which Fred Burki is president, is building at Bakerstown station an iron frame house 50x450 for Bridesmaids and four houses 20x350 each for carnations. These have iron gutters and bricked up beds with tile bottoms.

Hastings, Neb.—Chas. Winkler is cutting some very good Crocker and Queen Louise carnations. He finds them both excellent bloomers, the flowers borne on stiff straight stems, the habit upright. The weather the last two weeks has been rainy, cloudy and cold, with light frost on the morning of June 21st. Plants are doing well and field carnations are exceptionally good.

Elgin, Ill.—Fred E. Plagge reports business has been good the past year with all the florists. Spring stock was cleaned up in good shape. Good call for all kinds of blooming plants. Prices for both plants and cut flowers were a little better than last year.

Roses for Winter Blooming.

THE NEW NEPHROLEPIS FERN

ANNA FOSTER!

SPORT FROM THE BOSTON FERN.

Certificates of merit from the Boston Flower Grower's Association, March 8; Massachusetts Horticultural Society, March 19; Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, May 20, 1902. As good a house plant as the Boston and far more beautiful and graceful. There is no more beautiful fern for the trade than this. The fronds will be as valuable for cut purposes as the Farleyense and much more prolific.

DESCRIPTION—Origin—Found by Mr. Foster November, 1900. A sport of the Boston Fern.

PRINCIPAL CHARACTERISTIC—Original type of frond, each pinnæ unwinding as in main frond, making a miniature frond itself, unwinding indefinitely.

STURDINESS OF GROWTH—As easily grown as its parent the Boston; as free in producing plants; as good keeping qualities in dwelling.

BEAUTY AND GRACEFULNESS—Much finer foliage than its parent. Quicker in making length of frond.

PRICES—Small Plants, 3 to 4 Fronds:

Per 100 ..... $25.00
Per 50 ..... At 100 rate
Per dozen, $5.00; 6 at dozen rate; each $1.00

Larger lots at reduction in above prices on application. This will be put out in September. Orders booked now and delivered in rotation on receipt of order.

IN POTS—Delivery after September 20:

6-inch, each ..... $3.00 9-inch, each $10.00
7-inch, " ..... 5.00 10-inch, " 15.00
8-inch, " ..... 8.00 12-inch, " 25.00

9-inch, 10-inch and 12-inch, specimen plants.

The FLORISTS' MANUAL

by WILLIAM SCOTT

Is a book of 224 pages, and contains about 210 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopædia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half tone engravings. It is

A Complete REFERENCE BOOK for Commercial Florists

and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

Summer Suggestions.

What condition would our summer markets and profits be in were it not for the humble sweet pea? The retail florists have every cause to be grateful to this flower, and generous, too, to the extent that none should be allowed to go to waste without first having a chance to beautify. Many prominent florists have made more money out of sweet peas than any other flower this summer. The possibilities with them are unlimited. Last week we were among flowers in the garden, and we hope no serious consequences resulted in reading the names of the many flowers mentioned. This week we will discuss matters from the retail counter and will first run over a few suggestions in wreaths, which can be made up this month and next, and what may be charged for them. Kindly remember these are only hints; you, yourself, may fill out or extend.

A florist need never say he cannot make a wreath simply because he has not or cannot get a wire frame or even moss. Barrel hoops, willow, bamboo or hazel sticks have been and can be made into good frames, and plenty of green is a good substitute for moss; this, of course, under extreme cases, and they sometimes come. If you use tinfoil be sure to cover it with green; a bad back is bad for anything. When flowers are scarce a crescent wreath is much preferable to the common even round one, because it requires less flowers, though it is more difficult to make, for more care must be used in conforming to outlines.

When greening a wreath (and that is a most important item and should always be well done) be sure to have the foliage face from both sides to the center of the narrow part. The same principle applies to regular round wreaths. You must remember that there is a vast amount of meaning attached to the design, and even the green groundwork should be arranged in a manner to assist in bringing out the full intent and beauty. There is a difference between a pinwheel and a wreath; make it quite apparent in your work, no matter what materials you use. It is wise to use a good big bow of ribbon on summer wreaths; it need not be the expensive kind, but the color must be good to harmonize with or match the flowers. You see, flowers quickly fade in hot weather and look bad if shipped long distances or are kept over night in a hot room. A bit of broad ribbon will do much to cover up defects and make a design more attractive when most it is wanted to be so.

There is an abundance of small ferns throughout the country that could be used more profitably than they are at present if they were made more general use of in funeral wreaths. We speak of small plants in pots, from 2 to 4-inch sizes. There is nothing more beautiful than a wreath of Adiantum Farleyense. Of course it is quite expensive to use up small plants of that great fern, but often we are called upon to produce beauty regardless of price. Adiantum cuneatum or any adiantum of that type makes up finely, and for that matter a mixture of the ordinary sorts used for filling fern dishes will suit. Our method is this: Get a good wire frame, put dark green Porto Rican matting inside as a lining, or any stiff paper, with cut hardy ferns beneath to hide the color. Take ferns out of pots, after they have been well soaked in water cut half the soil off, arrange them solidly in the wreath frame, putting a little wet moss in to keep them tight, have fronds hang well over to hide frame. You can tie the plants in with green silkaline or thin wire as you go. Wreaths of adiantum so arranged keep longer than others and need but a cluster of flowers and bow of ribbon to make than look very rich. They can be sold at from $5 to $20.

Get a well high-mossed wreath (by the way, always have your wreaths mossed fairly high and round; you can make better work having them so), cover with layer of hardy ferns, then cover with green leucothoe sprays, stick end of spray in moss and pin down with wire hooks. Don't spare the leucothoe, 50 or even 100 sprays to a wreath. Make solid like a laurel wreath, then put in a solid half crescent of white sweet peas, tie bow of broad ribbon in center of peas or cluster, bows of narrow ribbon at each end of flower crescent, sell for $5 to $15, according to size of wreath and generosity of customer. This same design can be made of any shade of sweet peas, or roses, or any other flower. Sometimes we make only a good big cluster, then again a tapering crescent form, and often we almost cover the wreath, leaving only the very narrow part green.

Galax leaf wreaths should be made solid; don't imagine because you succeed in covering the moss that that is all sufficient. Accidents will happen in transit, and furthermore the leaves are cheap, and above all green or bronze foliage wreaths of any kind look better solid. You can best beautify with spray trimmings, but use plenty of foliage. There is hardly anything that looks cheaper than a scrimpy made wreath.

You can at present offer as many as fifty different kinds of wreaths, keeping in mind what we have said about first greening up well, and that we cannot too strongly emphasize that a wreath, no matter what you intend to put on it, should be first made pretty with greens.

Now for clusters and crescents. On these green wreaths, lavender and white peas, bow of lavender or white ribbon; light pink and white peas, white ribbon; purple or maroon peas, purple or white ribbon; Kaiserin or Bride roses, white ribbon; Liberty or Meteor roses, white ribbon, or half white and red, tying white ribbon between the white and red. White ribbon with pink roses of any kind or half white and pink roses. Golden Gates are prettiest by themselves and a white or pale lavender ribbon goes well. Carnots may go with white but we prefer that shade of color by itself. Lilium longiflorum and sprays of tamarix flowers, white or purple ribbon. Lily of the valley with white, mauve or lavender ribbon, alone or in part cluster with any flower. White carnations, white or lavender. Centaureas, Shasta or other white daisies for children or person named Daisy or Marguerite; they can be used separate or in conjunction with such flowers as water lilies, etc. They should never be put with rare greenhouse flowers. Narrow white ribbons in big clusters are best with such flowers. Purple, lavender or white asters or cluster of any two, white or purple ribbon. White gladiolus, antirrhinum and gypsophila, broad ribbon. Swainsona and any large white flower, American Beauties alone or with large open white roses or lilies, broad white ribbon.

Any of the above can be made up good for the prices we have mentioned. They can be made larger and more elaborate for higher prices. When it comes to a demand for all flowers, you can make up for any price above. Where you are doubtful of your customer it is best to try them on prices with a cluster wreath and then go higher on all flower wreaths. Where extra choice designs are wanted you have cattleyas, lily of the valley, stephanotis, and such flowers to suggest either in cluster or in whole, and you can go from $10 to $50 on them. When cheaper you can make up of all green or bronze or a mixture with or without clusters of such as phlox or that and gladiolus or achillea or any of the common white flowers. These you can do for from $2 to $5. We are aware of the fact that as high as $20 is sometimes got for a galax wreath, but we are writing this for the crowd, not the few.

There are plenty of bay trees standing idly around. You might pluck them to advantage once in a while. There is nothing more beautifully expressive than a well made wreath of bay leaves and you can charge from $15 to $40 for it.

IVERA.

ARRANGING SWEET PEAS.

We present herewith engravings from photographs of four bowls of sweet peas, arranged by one who is a lover of flowers but not a florist. We believe they are worthy of study by the professional. After stating that only rose bowls and other low receptacles should be used for sweet peas, tall vases being too high in proportion to the height of the mass of blossoms, the artist writes in The House Beautiful:

Sweet Peas in a Japanese Tea-Pot.

"In general, people crowd their displays of sweet peas too much. It is true that even then the flowers are beautiful, chiefly on account of the delicacy of their colors, but they are much more delightful when displayed in a freer fashion which reveals the inimitable grace of the living blossoms.

"The same love of simplicity that leads to a less crowded display than is usually seen leads also to the use of fewer colors in displays. An arrangement of one or two varieties is much more satisfactory for quiet observation than is a mixture of all the colors. And by choosing the colors of the varieties, very delightful harmonies may be obtained. This result is also possible through the selection of vases for the flowers; thus by using the lovely bluish lavendar blossoms of the Countess of Radnor variety in a low yellow jar, a beautiful complementary harmony may be arranged.

"For small receptions or other functions in which a temporary decoration is desired, delightful effects may be obtained by combining low vases of sweet pea blossoms with small bunches of other sweet peas scattered upon the table near the vase, thus repeating the bit of form and color. Two or three small bunches dropped loosely near the vase add greatly to its decorative value.

"In the carrying out of this idea it is easy to make many attractive color combinations by using one variety in the vase and another upon the table. I have thus used combinations of Peach Blossom and Lady Beaconsfield; of Juanita and Ramona, and of the Duchess of York and the Duke of York."

CARNATION NOTES.

If you are ready with your house to bring in your carnations there are a few things that you should bear in mind, and one of the most important of these is that it pays to put forth every effort to transfer the plants as quickly as possible and to have them out of the soil as short a time as it can be properly done in.

Remember that while the plant is out of the ground it is practically the same as a cut flower and you should be just as careful to keep it fresh, and very much the same treatment is required. You would not think of cutting a lot of blooms and laying them out in the sun nor even to lay them on the counter any length of time without at least wetting the stems. No, indeed, you would be likely to discharge an employe if you caught him at it repeatedly, and yet some of you will dig up carnation plants in the hot sun, throw them into boxes and have them standing in the sun until a number of boxes have been filled, and then perhaps over night in the shed with only a little water sprinkled over them, and when 50 per cent of them refuse to take hold you wonder why. Perhaps you may think this is exaggerated, but I tell you I have seen it with my own eyes.

If you divide your help up properly you can work the thing like clock-work and your plants will appreciate it. Have a man to dig and be sure to have a man who is conscientious and not afraid to push the spade down its full depth so as to get all the roots. Following him closely have another man with a pail of water and a deep tray, whose duty it will be to take up each plant, shake off the soil gently, leaving a ball about the size of your fist, dip the roots into the water and place upright in tray. A less experienced man can wheel them into the house, where there are two of your best men planting them into the bench. These last two should be experienced carnation growers, men who know how to plant and what the results will be if the plants are set too deep or the roots cramped into a small hole just any old way to get them out of sight.

After planting a few hundred water each plant well to settle the soil around the roots and spray overhead several times during the day for several days. Wet the walks and under the benches and the walls in order to keep the atmosphere surcharged with moisture and in fact do everything you can to keep the plant from wilting. Too often the fatal mistake is made of having the soil in a rather dry condition when planting, and before the plants get a good watering the roots are so badly dried out that the plants can never recover. I like to have the soil in the same state that I do for potting, i. e., moist enough to form a ball in the hand which can be crumpled up finely without leaving the hand moist. The time to look out for that is the evening before you wish to plant. If the soil is dry it will stand a good watering and be in fine shape for planting the next morning and with an occasional light sprinkling during the day you can keep it in nice shape all day. But be sure and see that it is moist all the way down before you plant.

We use less shade each year during planting time; perhaps I had better say we find it necessary to use the shades a shorter time after planting each year, and the reason is beyond any question because we are learning to lift the plants at a time when they are growing slowly and are well matured. We find a shade made of clay and water about the best thing, as it washes off with the first rain, and if it does not rain for a while you can rub it off easily. It should be allowed to remain only a few days or until you can see that the plants have grabbed root on the soil. Also keep the ventilators only partly raised to keep off draughts for the first few days, but as soon as growth commences they should have all the air they can get.

A. F. J. BAUR.

CARNATION TROUBLES.

Our carnations, which were set out early in May for summer blooming, are not budding properly. They appear to be full of those "mock" buds. Have no buds that develop into flowers. The season here is late and always slower than inland towns, but we have the plants in the same place and same soil as previous years, where they did well.

Our asters die near the root. They either rot off or foliage turns brown. Is it too wet, or what is the matter?

E. H. M.

The information furnished by E. H. M.

Arrangement of Sweet Peas.

in regard to the behavior of his carnations and the circumstances connected therewith are very meager, to say the least, and I can only guess at a probable cause of his trouble. He does not say that they have made a fair growth, but he does say that they are full of buds of some kind. If the growth is healthy and the buds are there I cannot see why they should not open up into blooms unless they are attacked by some insect. A very bad dose of thrips might possibly cause them to act thus, but we have never had them work such serious damage to our carnations. Red spider would also act similarly if they are numerous enough. Too much moisture would rather cause stem rot, but too much manure might aggravate the case.

Mr. M. says they are growing in the same soil in which they used to do well and that ought to prove that it is not the soil which is at fault. Let him examine some of the plants and buds carefully, and perhaps he will discover the cause, or let him send me a plant showing the trouble in its worst stage and I will see what I can make of it. Take the plant up carefully and wrap the roots in damp moss and send it by the quickest way direct to me at 330 W. 38th street, Indianapolis, Ind., also a good handful of the soil in which they are growing. I do not wish to intrude on Mr. Scott's territory, but I will just tell Mr. M. that the cause of his trouble with his asters is the well-known blight and the best way to fight it is to burn up every plant that shows a sign of it and never plant asters on that same ground again.

A. F. J. Baur.

CARNATIONS FOR SMALL HOUSES.

What carnations would be best to plant to insure a continuous crop of bloom, white and pink, in a small house 20x50? C. B.

I suppose Messrs. C. B. want varieties that will give them a continuous crop of fair commercial blooms, since they only have a small house to plant in carnations. Among the newer white varieties I believe that Queen Louise will give them a steadier cut than any of the others, but Lorna will produce larger blooms and longer stems during the winter months. By all means plant a hundred or two of Flora Hill. There is nothing on the market now to take its place, and although it has faults a plenty, yet it is indispensable.

Mrs. Joost, among the older pink ones, is early and continuous, and will give you a lot of fair commercial bloom, while among the newer ones Dorothy is a marvel for productiveness as well as earliness. My advice to Messrs. C. B. would be to plant Flora Hill and Queen Louise for white, and Mrs. Joost and Dorothy for pink. A. F. J. Baur.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

To get mulching material in good condition for fall and winter use it ought to be prepared now, as the manure and soil can be got in any condition desirable.

A compost consisting of two-thirds well decomposed cow manure and one-third good fibry loam should be put into a neat pile and allowed to lie for two or three weeks; it should then be chopped up fine, much finer than compost for rose planting, and turned over two or three times at intervals of ten days. When in a fine mellow condition it should be put through a three-quarter-inch screen or a fine sod crusher. It is now ready for use and should be stored where it can be protected from rain. The bone meal (if any is to be used) can be added just previous to spreading it on the bench.

Whilst in the pile and at all times the compost should be kept clear of weeds, as these attract insects, which will make it a breeding place. Material which has been lying in an unsightly, neglected heap and covered with weeds all summer is not fit to be put in a mulching compost, as it is invariably swarming with insects such as thrips, etc., which delight in such undisturbed quarters, and which multiply rapidly when taken into the genial atmosphere of the rose house. I have no doubt that this accounts in many cases for the swarms of thrips which appear in rose houses just after mulching. By getting the material ready now it may save some hours of anxious worry during the dark, wet days of winter.

It will also be wisdom to look after the soil required for potting the young stock. To have soil in good condition for this purpose constitutes one of the elements of success. Ribes.

THE ROSE CURCULIO.

Roses grown out of doors, particularly in the western states, are sometimes badly injured by a snout-beetle popularly known as the rose curculio (Rhynchites bicolor Fab.). Although pre-eminently a rose pest and an out-door species, it attacks at times ripe blackberries and raspberries, puncturing the fruit with its beak, and causing it to decay. In the Review of June 26 this insect was also reported as injuring the stems of paeony. Its appearance in different localities appears to be dependent upon the weather and as is usual in such cases its first occurrence seems to be coincident with the budding or blooming of the rose, particularly wild rose, which is its favorite natural food plant. In some localities it confines its injury to rose bushes, puncturing the flower buds, destroying the flowers and depositing its eggs in the fruit, in which the young mature. Sometimes even when it occurs in normal numbers this curculio destroys entire crops, particularly in small gardens. With the approach of cool weather the beetles disappear.

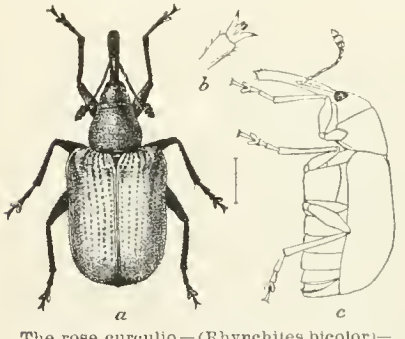
The rose curculio may readily be known by its red thorax and elytra and black ventral surface, snout and legs. In eastern specimens the colors are as indicated, but westward, in Colorado, individuals are found in which the greater part of the head is red, including most of the antennae or "feelers" and the legs. The form of the insect is well illustrated by the figure. The rostrum, or snout, is very long, nearly a third of the length of the entire body, and the antennae are slender, with a well-marked three-jointed club. The length, exclusive of the snout, is a little less than a fourth of an inch.

Although this species is well distributed from the Atlantic to the Pacific, it is found much more abundantly in the Northwest, and its injuries appear to be confined to that region west of the Mississippi valley. In the eastern states it seems to be noted only on wild rose. The insect is known to occur in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, District of Columbia, Tennessee, Missouri, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, Wyoming, North Dakota, Utah, Idaho, Colorado, New Mexico, Montana, Washington, Oregon, California, and in Canada, Northwest Territory, Vancouver Island and elsewhere in British Columbia.



The rose curculio—(Rhynchites bicolor)—a, female beetle; b, claw; c, female in outline from side; a, c, enlarged; b, more enlarged. (From Chittenden, U. S. Dept. Agr.)

The beetles are frequently seen with their long snouts buried deep in rosebuds, and they seem also to cut the stem or injure the bud at the thin portion of the stalk below the calyx. The bud afterward drops off and dies. Within the severed bud, according to the late Dr. Otto Lugger, the young mature.

In ordinary cases of attack these beetles can be controlled by hand picking and jarring them from the bushes onto inverted umbrellas or curculio catchers, but when they occur in unusual numbers this must be practiced frequently, since though every beetle seen is destroyed one day, an equal number may appear a day or two later. In this respect the insect resembles the ordinary rose-chafer.

The habit of the beetle, which it possesses in common with other curculios, of dropping to the ground when disturbed, renders its capture comparatively easy. When the insects occur in other plants than bushes bearing berries or on roses soon to be picked, they can be destroyed by spraying with Paris Green at the rate of about a pound to 150 gallons of water.

BUSINESS METHODS FOR BUSY FLORISTS.

VIII.

Sundry Expenses.

This subject covers a multitude of items necessary to keep the wheels of business in running order, and may be divided into two general groups.

First, fixed expenses, or those which can be anticipated and must be provided for or the business will become bankrupt.

Second, contingent expenses, which from their very nature cannot be anticipated and which vary from season to season and year to year, according to the climatic and other conditions and becoming necessary when least expected.

In the first group we find wages, which is at all times the largest and most important expense item in the business. If labor could be measured by so many horsepower, each day the same, as we gauge the capacity of a machine, we could pretty nearly tell what each rose would cost before we grew it. But along with the brute force necessary to plant and water our stock there must be brains to direct and ability to think, and for these important adjuncts to labor the wise business man will always be willing to pay.

The "cheapest" help is oftentimes the most expensive. How many of us have learned this to our sorrow and cost. The finest plants are sometimes ruined by a single day's inattention or overattention. A working foreman is necessary in every place, no matter how small. He should have a thorough knowledge of growing stock and an ability to command men. Success or failure will be largely dependent upon his ability. But skilled men under him are necessary for the fullest measure of success. A system of promotion in the ranks is productive of the best results. Once let the idea be firmly established in a young man's mind that he must work out his own promotion and that there are always good positions awaiting him as soon as he is able to fill them, and that moment you have a valuable man in your employ.

Wages should be paid in proportion to results, and these can only be determined individually. Experience is a good teacher, but many a young man with four pounds, more or less, of live, active "gray matter" under his hat crown and a few months' experience, is worth more than the gray-haired veteran with many years' experience who does what he is told and works for his weekly wage and 6 o'clock.

Not many months ago a friend of mine lost a valuable foreman, who left him after six or eight years of service to accept a more lucrative position. Another foreman was imported from a distant state, who after several months' trial with varying results was considered incompetent and dismissed. In the employ of this friend for five or six years was a young man who had worked along steadily, doing everything well which had been assigned him, using his brains at all times to grow good stock at a minimum expense. On the dismissal of the last foreman this young man was placed in charge and has developed into the best foreman the place has ever had, and has the reputation of being the best all-round grower in the state. The business was never so flourishing, the help never so well contented and satisfied.

Occasional promotion all along the line keeps every one doing his best. Every one is paid according to his ability and the laggards and grumblers have all been "laid off." While I do not know the figures, I venture to say that the labor bill for the year is proportionately less than ever before. "The laborer is worthy of his hire" in every line of business, and the more frequently pay day comes around the more contented your help will be. A uniform custom of paying each Saturday night will be found very satisfying to yourself and help. If you pay by check, your check is a receipt in itself and will be generally found satisfactory all around. If you pay with currency take a receipt from each one. Have vouchers made out in a form similar to the following:

Received of JOHN JONES | Time 6 Days Amt. $10.00

TEN DOLLARS. for wages for week ending JUNE 7, 1902, as per margin hereof.

JAMES ADAMS.

Don't work your help overtime unless you pay them for it, and when they lose time deduct it from their wages. Insist on promptness in arriving and be equally prompt in their quitting at night. As some Sunday work is necessary in the florist business, divide the force into squads to take turns in doing the necessary work. Don't allow beer or intoxicants on the place and dismiss a man promptly for intoxication. I am not so temperate but that I can see pleasure in a friendly glass, but a man whose brain is muddled by drink cannot do good work and a few prompt dismissals for drunkenness will have a most wholesome restraint on any would-be guzzler.

The next important item of expense is fuel. Upon your proximity to coal mines, water, transportation, sawmills, etc., will depend in a great measure the kind of fuel to use. I will not discuss the kind of fuel, or boilers or flues, steam or hot water, but will leave that to experts in that line. But every one will agree with me that the kind that will produce the best result at the least expense is the kind for him to use. Keep an accurate record of the quantity and cost from year to year.

I recently visited a grower, one of the leaders in his line, and one of the most successful in the business. He turned to his record and told me the amount of coal consumed each year and the cost of the same from the time when he embarked in the business. Another record showed the number of square feet of glass in the plant each season and the comparative cost of heating, while still another showed the total sales for each year and the percentage of cost of fuel to the sales. In the other items of expense he had the same records.

On the other hand, I once visited a grower who had quite an extensive establishment and a large and growing trade. Reverting to the subject of fuel he said soft coal was so expensive that season that he had used pine slabs from a nearby mill to save expense. At the end of the season I asked him the comparative cost, as I thought of using wood another season. He said he hadn't figured it out, but that he knew it was cheaper. At the "mum" show in November I again asked the question. He still didn't know, and I don't suppose he knows at this day, but he went into bankruptcy some time since. I don't know that the fuel question bankrupted him, but I feel confident that his unbusiness-like methods and his failure to keep track of expenses finally led to his assignment.

WE SOMETIMES WORK.

Planting asters in May is a nice little job, and those planted about the 15th of May have done so well this year. Water is the great factor towards success with these popular annuals and of that we have had altogether too much. When we were planting one afternoon, a really nice behaved boy (a rarity in a country village) came along with tripod and camera. (I think he was taking shots of the hops of frogs to see if they could be used in a brewery) and on the query, "How much for a picture of this bunch?" replied a quarter. "Let her slide," says I, and soon the performance was over. Not a quarter of the time or fuss that a $3 shot would take, and about as good.

The swarthy face on the right has just returned from nineteen months in the Philippines; the next with the rake is an old tramp gardener past hard work, but good at grading, and works for his board and nominal pay; the next is an expert with the axe and out of place at gardening; he plays the fiddle evenings and believes the whole aim in life is to have one continuous chronic state of good times; the next is a steady fellow who wouldn't even neglect his work to look up when he got the word; the next on the left is what George III. called a spade, and the next is the end and north side of a carnation house, and you will say, "How is it if it is fine enough to plant asters that the ventilators are not up?" Those ventilators are merely used in summer from about May 20 to October 1, when we put them up and fasten them up for the summer.

The proprietor was seated on the platform of the windmill fifty feet above the ground, but unfortunately the camera was not of sufficient expanse to take him in. There is nothing of great horticultural value in this picture. It is merely to illustrate the proper distance to plant asters. They may appear wide apart, yet if you will observe the feet of the man with the rake (size No. 13), the asters are ten inches between plants and fifteen between rows.

The Market.

The cut flower market is in pretty fair shape for this season of the year. There is very little local demand, but quite a lot of shipping orders to go out of town daily. White flowers are at a premium, the colored blooms being as a rule harder to sell. Beauties are becoming scarce and are rather light in color; the buds have good substance and the foliage is clean. Sweet peas are no longer selling well and at present prices hardly pay to cut or handle.

Marketing Cut Flowers.—Joseph Heacock's Views.

I have always been in favor of a market for the sale of our flowers. You may remember some years ago I called a meeting at Horticultural Hall in regard to it, but it seemed that the time was not ripe for it. I believe it is now. In conversation with what few growers I have met I find that there is a strong desire for such a market. As Horace Greeley said in regard to resuming specie payments after the civil war, "The way to resume is to resume." So the way to start a market is to start it, and almost before we are aware of it the market will be an established fact, and those growers who do not go in at first would soon see the benefit of having a central place where they could take their flowers at an early hour (say 7:30 to 8 a. m. in winter) where the buyers from all over the city would know where to look for and find what flowers they wanted instead of each grower carrying his roses and other flowers around from store to store like a peddler, unpacking at each store and packing up the rejected flowers, and then starting out in quest of another store to go through the same experience, bruising the flowers at each packing and unpacking.

Our business has certainly outgrown this antiquated method. The growers have too much capital invested to continue in this cumbersome and extravagant method of disposing of the product of our greenhouses. I understand that there is no large city but Philadelphia but has a flower market. Philadelphia is proverbially slow, but she generally gets there at last. I am ready to join with others in starting a market and if others will not join with me I am seriously considering the question of starting alone.

Notes.

Eugene Bernheimer will remove his wholesale commission house about the first of next month to 11 South 16th street, a stone's throw from his present place at 1604 Ludlow street. The new place is larger and better adapted for handling cut flowers than the old; it has floor space 16x44 feet, with additional space back 12½x16½ feet, making a total depth of over 60 feet.

George Samtman is a very popular man these days; many friends meet his train at the Reading Terminal, each one has a few whispered words with the Chestnut Hill grower and departs. It is estimated that his nods are worth from one to four dozen Beauties apiece.

A successful manufacturer of gas meters writing to a local paper over the nom de plume of "A Friend" states that in firing all boilers except locomotive, much coal may be saved by spreading fresh coal in front only, and not over the entire surface. The live coal should be pushed back each time coal is needed and the fresh coal put in its place. This is to secure perfect combustion and to avoid the waste so apparent when the surface is evenly covered.

Bowling.

The fourth and last of the series of games to decide the makeup of our team at Asheville took place on the alleys of the Belmont Cricket Club in West Philadelphia. Sides were chosen by G. C. Watson and W. Robertson, and a spirited struggle ensued. W. K. Harris showed the stuff he is made of by winning a point on the evening's play with a good score. Fourteen players competed. Starkey, who is sure to get a place, and Falck, who is sure not to get a place, did not come. Following are the scores:

Geo. Anderson	510	S. Adelberger	447
Geo. M. Moss	502	Frank Polites	439
Geo. Craig	501	W. R. Gibson	436

The Georges are right in it!

Robert Kift	496	D. T. Comor	435
W. Robertson	474	John Westcott	402
W. K. Harris	471	S. Dunlap	386
J. P. Habermehl	447	G. C. Watson	355

The scores by points follow: Geo. M. Moss, 4; B. Starkey, George Anderson, Robert Kift and William Robertson, 3 each; George Craig and G. C. Watson, 2 each. These seven players compose the team, the last two having to roll off the tie in points to decide which one shall be a regular and which a substitute player.

Base Ball.

The following description from a spectator graphically describes last Saturday's great game:

"A very interesting game of ball was played at 50th and Chestnut street Saturday, July 12th, between Robert Craig's employes and a nine picked from the retail stores and commission houses. Gray started the ball rolling by making a very exciting home run, the ball landing in an adjoining farm about two squares away. The game was won by Gray's efficient work on third base where nearly all got lost. Palmer did admirable work at second base, also at the bat; Stevens caught in elegant form; Reynolds proved a great surprise by his great pitching; Charles Hartly played first base and stopped everything in his direction; Charles Gray lost his glove in middle of the game and finished with one of Robert Craig's 6-inch pots. The score was 19—13 in favor of the store men."

Club Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club was held on Monday night in the County Sligo Men's rooms, Civic Hall. There was a small but enthusiastic and business-determined attendance. Walter Sheridan presided and John Young occupied the secretary's desk. Beaulieu, of Woodhaven (Would-to-Heaven, etc.), made an exhibit of early dahlias for which the committee, Messrs. Wallace, Rennie and Scott, awarded a cultural certificate. Frank Traendly reported for the Outing Committee—No money required from the club to pay deficit. The committee was generously praised for its work.

A communication was read from Mr. Barron representing the Plant Breeding Conference to be held in this city next September. Mr. O'Mara spoke at length on the matter. It was finally resolved that Mr. O'Mara represent the club at the conference and thus have the distinguished honor of being the representative of both the S. A. F. O. H. & N. Y. F. C. Mr. Wallace reported for the committee in charge of transportation to Asheville, N. C., and read over a list of the routes and the several attractions and inducements connected. It was finally resolved that the club go by the Pennsylvania route to Washington, as all of the members wish to meet and talk with the old veteran, W. R. Smith, and a few may want to visit the White House. Washington is a mighty dry place on Sundays. Better make a note of it. A few of the boys from wet places will congregate there on a certain day. You may get all particulars from Alex Wallace.

There isn't much talk here as yet about how many trains will be required to accommodate the crowd going from here, but it is expected that there will be the usual rush at the last moment. Bob. Bottomly hasn't been seen east for some years and here's one who'd like to see him. Messrs. Morris, Ward, Donaldson, Nash, Butterfield, Rennie and Phillips were appointed the committee to nominate officers for directing the club next year.

A special meeting of the Exhibition Committee will be held at the secretary's office on Wednesday next. The report on associate membership, and the proposed changes in the by-laws occasioned thereby, were read and laid over without discussion for action at the next meeting. Mr. O'Mara, for the committee, read the resolutions regarding the death of the late Mr. Thomas Young, Sr., which are appended.

RESOLUTIONS OF SYMPATHY ON THE DEATH OF THOMAS YOUNG, SR.

Whereas, We, the members of the N. Y. F. C., having learned that Mr. Thomas Young, Sr., recently passed beyond this earthly sphere to his rest eternal, full of years and honors, called hence by the immortal decree of an All Wise Providence, and whereas,

While we bow in humble submission to the will of the Great Ruler of the Universe, yet we cannot fail to express our deep regret at his passing away from the scenes of his useful labors. While not wishing to intrude with our regrets in the natural grief of his family, yet, having been associated so long in this association with his worthy sons, our esteemed fellow members, we respectfully and feelingly ask that we be permitted to express to them our heartfelt sympathy in their great loss and sad bereavement.

And be it therefore resolved, that we hereby and in this manner tender to the family of the deceased our sincere condolence in their hour of sorrow. They mourn the loss of a loving and loved parent. We mourn an exemplary citizen, a just and upright man, a generous and genial companion.

We desire to have it recorded that in losing him the community in which he lived has lost an honored member, the horticultural world a man who, throughout his long, useful and honorable career, played well his part in his chosen calling. To his faithful helpmate, the revered partner of his joys and sorrows for so many long and pleasant years, we tenderly offer our sympathy, coupled with it is a prayer that the God of love and mercy may lighten the heavy sorrow which has fallen upon her; that He may give her strength to bear her great affliction. We offer her such solace as is ours to give and hers to receive at our hands, not wishing to open afresh the wounds of her grief; but to aid as best we may in assuaging the pain. May the soft lullaby of merciful time soothe her and the sweet memories of her life partner sustain her. God rest his soul.

And be it further resolved, that these resolutions be spread in full upon the minutes of this club, and that a copy of the same be sent to Mrs. Thomas Young, Sr.

(Signed.)
PATRICK O'MARA.
ALEX. WALLACE,
CHAS. B. WEATHERED,
Committee.

It was a shirtwaist night. Those worn by Messrs. Young, Sheridan, O'Mara, Langjahr, Traendly and Wallace were of a most peculiar new type and ranged in colors from the 17th of March to the 12th of July. The stuff was there—and the meeting adjourned after a short session.

The Market.

The market—don't mention it or there'll be trouble. Prices are nil. Sweet peas are an unlimited quantity. Raynor is handling very fine lilies; Ghormley, some beautiful new sweet peas; Young & Nugent, extra cattleyas; Traendly & Schenck, Golden Gates; Thomas Young, Kaiserins; Sheridan, Beauties; and although the printing presses of the New York Clipper whiz and hum in the rear of Ed Horan's store there's a steady demand for the flowers in front. Charlie Millang and Alex Guttman are neighbors and hustlers for all that's bright in flowers and coin. But, alas—business is—bum.

Notes.

Charlie Weathered and a few convivial spirits celebrated his forty-third birthday July 11.

James H. Carroll goes away today for a nine weeks' golfing tour over the Atlantic Highlands.

W. W. Burnham is at Ponghaug.

Arthur Ward, of Small's, at Washington, D. C., sailed away on the Anchoria July 12. If he was going to Cove of Cork I wish I were with him.

W. P. Palmer, of Buffalo, was here last week. We were informed that he intends to introduce metropolitan talent on Main street.

Gladiolus Cowee, of Berlin, N. Y., was here also. Of course his flowers are in season and he is just as bright as they.

Charles Snell, of Thorley's, intends to take his family on an exploring expedition down the St. Lawrence shortly.

Thorley had a dinner decoration in honor of Admiral Schley to-day. A facsimile of the battleship Brooklyn, made in white and gold effects, was a conspicuous part of the decoration. The boat was made of white carnations and valley, gold and white ribbon on rigging. J. H. Carroll was the artist.

F. Thomas, assistant manager of the Waldorf-Astoria, died recently, and never in the history of hotel management was there such a display of flowers sent to a funeral. The thirty-four different departments of the great hotel vied with each other as to which could send the prettiest design. J. H. Small & Sons had the entire work, some forty designs in all, and they were all remarkably handsome. It was all noble and beautiful. We never saw better designs at this time of the year and wish to express our appreciation of the spirit that prompted and guided such a work. Arthur Merritt accompanied the remains and flowers to Utica.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The past week was quite a busy one for the retail florists, mostly funeral work. Everybody seemed busy with one or more designs, and the wholesale men were kept on the go furnishing white flowers. Fortunately, there was a good supply of white roses and sweet peas at the commission houses.

The market remains about the same as last week. Sweet peas are not quite so plentiful as they were, still there are enough for the demand. Roses are still heavy in the market. Though not first class, they are fair for this time of the year. The demand is good, but lots of them are left over after the morning sales are ended. Carnations have not been overplentiful and the best are quickly sold at top prices. The prices on all this stuff are about the same as in my last report.

Meeting of the Florists' Club at Central, Mo.

The July meeting of the Florists' Club was a very pleasant affair. This meeting was held at the St. Louis Carnation Company's large plant at Central, Mo. Mr. Dunford, Mr. Call and John Steidle met the boys at the end of the car line on the Ashby road and were escorted in the company's wagon to their place, where they inspected the machinery house and the large range of greenhouses. Nothing much could be seen in the houses, as they are only beginning to plant their young carnations. Their several hundred thousand plants in the field look well.

After a close inspection of everything on the place the meeting was called to order by President Meinhardt in the large packing shed. There were present twenty-six members, besides Mr. Skidelsky of Philadelphia and Mr. Call (Mr. Dunford's partner), who proved himself a very pleasant gentleman and entertainer. The first business in order was the final report of the old exhibition committee, which was then discharged with thanks. The picnic committee reported that everything was in readiness and the picnic would be held next Thursday, July 24, at Preister's Park. The telephone committee was continued and Henry Berning placed on same. Nomination of officers was the next business in order. The only nominee for president was J. W. Dunford. The following were nominated for vice presidents: George Windler, Henry Emmons and R. J. Mohr. Mr. Schray was the only nominee for secretary, and J. J. Beneke the only nominee for treasurer. The following five candidates were nominated for trustees: William Adels, John Steidle, Charles Juengel, F. M. Ellis and H. G. Berning. The election will be held next month at J. F. Ammann's place at Edwardsville, Ill., on Thursday, August 14.

After a few remarks were made by Mr. H. G. Berning on how to create good feeling between the wholesaler, grower and retailer, Mr. Dunford read a report showing what his carnations brought each month during the season of 1901-2. His average for the past season to date was $1.29 per 100. At this point an elegant lunch was spread, which consisted of ham sandwiches, ice cream, cake, lemonade and cigars, and which was much enjoyed by all.

Before leaving Mr. Steidle invited the boys over to look at his place. The invitation was accepted, and after a drive of a mile and a half we arrived at Mr. Steidle's place. All were surprised at the appearance of the place. There were fine looking carnations of America, Triumph, Flora Hill, Joost, Daybreak, White Cloud, Crane and Bradt in full bloom. The plants in the field were also in fine condition.

After bidding everybody good-by, the boys started home, all expressing the same feeling—that they had spent a most enjoyable afternoon, which will long be remembered, and extending many thanks to Mr. Dunford, Mr. Call and John Steidle for their pleasant entertainment to the members of the club.

On the way home the carriage containing Mr. Fred C. Weber, C. C. Sanders, Carew Sanders and your correspondent stopped at the Sanders place on the Henley road. All his nursery stock is in excellent shape, and the carnation plants in the field are the best yet seen. Mr. Sanders is just now wrecking some of his old houses to make room for the new ones that are to be built at once. Thus ended the most pleasant afternoon yet spent by your correspondent.

Notes.

Visitors in town the past week were Mr. S. S. Skidelsky of Philadelphia, Pa., with a line of samples of florists' requirements, seeds and bulbs; J. F. Ammann and Henry Blixen of Edwardsville, Ill.; Dr. A. S. Halstedt, Henry Emmons and Adolph Fehr of Belleville, Ill.; Henry Johann of Collinsville, Ill., and William Winter of Kirkwood, Mo. All the visitors attended the club meeting at Central, Mo.

Mr. Edward Guy of Belleville, Ill., was in town Friday on his way to Eureka Springs for a ten days' vacation.

Mr. R. F. Tesson left Saturday night for St. Paul, Minn., at which place the United States court placed the case of condemnation of his mother's land by the World's Fair people. Robert will remain away about a week until the case is settled, and has great hopes of winning.

Mrs. Frank Ellis and the children are off for a trip to the country. Frank says they will all come back in time for the picnic.

Found—John W. Kunz. He wishes to state to his friends in the trade that, while not engaged in the florist business just now, he is doing quite well. John reports that his wife has been very sick the past two weeks, but is improving.

The florists should not forget that next Thursday, July 24, the annual outing of the club takes place at Preister's Park. It is requested by the trustees that those who wish to go in a body in the morning should meet on the East Side at 9:45 a. m., where two of those elegant electric cars which run between St. Louis and Belleville will be in waiting and will leave promptly at 10 a. m. Everything is in readiness for a good time.

All are requested to bring the ladies and the little ones, as great preparations are being made for their benefit. The band has been engaged to play continuously from 10 a. m. to 12 m. Don't forget the date, Thursday, July 24.

Bowling.

Eight of the faithful braved the hot night and rolled three games. Some good scores were made, F. C. Weber making 239 in the last game. Some of the boys were talking Asheville, but we are not certain yet as to a team, and more will be known by the end of the month. The scores and averages were as follows:

BOSTON.

The past week has been a fine specimen of a summer week so far as floral business was concerned. I heard quite a few say they never saw a more quiet one. Perhaps this is so, and perhaps the idea comes from the fact that there is much more material coming into the city than ever before at this date. The cool weather of June still shows its effect in better flowers than usual at this time, and growers are consequently much averse to throwing out their plants. But the past few warm days are having an effect that will cause many to be cast out immediately.

It is a great time for sweet peas. Never have seen such fine ones, but I think they are sometimes even more plentiful than now.

Roper's pink, the "Fair Maid" stands out supreme among its fellows. It surely shows a surprising amount of vitality after having been cropped so heavily all winter.

Another 'phone in the Park Street Market (No. 3). This is strictly a toll line, and is put in to cut off those frisky fellows who talk to distant points and forget to call around when tolls are being gathered. The "hello girls" are not expected now to allow long distance talk on the old 'phones and the new one must be bribed with a nickel or a dime in the slot.

Rough, Watt and Leuthy are among those now afloat between here and "Lunnon."

Never so many goods for the hospital department, and Mr. Clark sick and away! Arrangements are made, however, so that such goods reach their destination. J. S. Manter.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Market conditions remain practically the same as last week. Quality of roses has possibly improved a trifle on the average. The top price is still $5, with a very few specials reaching $6, but a very fair grade for the season sells at $3 to $4, and from that the rate grades down to $1. On carnations $1.50 is the top, with very few exceptions, and very good flowers can be had for $1. On poorer grades we hear of sales at $3 a thousand.

Asters are coming in now and they sell very well at $1 to $1.50. Gladioli are being received in quantity and go at $1 to $3 per 100. Sweet peas are very plentiful and move rather slowly. For good stock $1 to $1.50 per 1,000 is the rate quoted, but some are offered at as low as 2 cents a bunch.

Though trade is slow, all the good flowers received are absorbed and conditions are very satisfactory for the season. White carnations are, as usual at this period, in rather the best demand.

Various Items.

We hear of several shipments of ferns consigned to local dealers from the East that have been seriously delayed by the freight handlers' strike. Some unpleasant losses may result.

The losses of carnation plants in the field as the result of the heavy and continuous rains of last month are now measurable. In all places where the land lay low and water stood the losses are heavy. Several growers who usually have a considerable surplus of plants to sell will this year have barely enough to plant their own houses.

After a successful season Mrs. A. M. Schafer is taking a two weeks' rest at Camp Lake, Wis. Upon her return she will start to remodel her houses and plant in her carnations. She believes in early planting.

Robert Mueller has caused the arrest of Patrick Lavin on a charge of criminal libel. Both were gardeners at the South Side parks. Mueller alleges that he was discharged from the park force as the result of false statements made about him by Lavin.

A. L. Randall and family are spending the summer at Mr. Randall's country place near St. Joseph, Mich.

E. B. Krieger, a former Chicagoan, but for the last six years at Spokane, Wash., has reached this city on his way home from an eight months' visit to Europe.

George Paget of Trinidad, Col., was a caller this week. He is on his way home from a trip East.

Mr. V. Wayman, the florist of Madison, Wis., has been spending a week in the city.

Rains are still frequent, but they are not so heavy and continuous as last month, and there is abundant sunshine in between drops.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Although our market is now on its regular summer footing—that is, the buyer takes what he can get and is thankful—it is in better condition than was expected, as there are more flowers and they are of better quality than is usual at this time of year; but each day sees the supply diminish and the quality of the stock grow worse. However, all things considered, business is very fair. The weather has been all that could be desired, just moderate summer temperature, but from present prospects we are in for another scorching spell, as it is much warmer today (July 14) than it has been at any time during the past week. Funeral work is about all that is doing and white flowers hold the lead.

In roses, white ones are of the poorest quality and scarce at that. Some nice Kaiserins make their appearance once in awhile and sell readily, but there is not a regular supply of them coming in. Pink buds are very poor, a good many of them being almost unfit for sale, owing to the mildew and small size. There are plenty of red roses and quite a lot of Beauties, but the latter are not of very good quality, although they have very fair stems. There is a good demand for them. Brides, Maids, Liberties, etc., bring 2 cents to 4 cents, and many go at $1 per 100. Beauties bring 50 cents per dozen up to $2 for the longest stems.

Carnations still hold up very fair as to quality, and there is a goodly number of all colors with the exception of white. The red ones are very good, considering the time of year. As might be expected, white ones being scarcest are most in demand, and many more could be disposed of. They bring at present $1.50 per 100 for the best quality, a very few extras reaching $2.00; ordinary grades, 50 cents to $1 per 100.

There is any quantity of outdoor grown stock, such as candytuft, feverfew, balsams, etc. Some very good gladioli are coming in and bring 2 cents to 3 cents per spike. Sweet peas, too, are in good supply, but the quality is not very good. They bring 15 cents to 25 cents per 100.

Meeting of the Florists' Society.

The first outdoor meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society, which was held at the home of Charles Pommert, Amelia, Ohio, on July 10, proved to be rather a disappointment. Fourteen of the members started for the Carrel street depot of the C. P. & G. R. R. in good style, but about five miles this side of Amelia the tender of the engine left the tracks. No one was hurt, but the train was delayed so long that the party did not arrive at Amelia until about thirty minutes of train time to return. A fine lunch was awaiting them and they disposed of it as best they could in the short time allowed. There was considerable business that ought to have been attended to that night, but there was no time, so an extra meeting was called for Tuesday evening, July 15, at the clubrooms of the society in the Jabez Elliott Flower Market.

Various Items.

William B. Lampert, son of J. J. Lampert, Xenia, Ohio, has made application to the courts to be freed from his debts. His liabilities are $1,283, with no assets.

It is rumored that Dave Knott, one of the oldest florists in this vicinity, is about to sell his business. His place is situated in Avondale, this city, and was run by his father before him. This place is a landmark in the florist business of this city, having been in existence for so many years.

Mr. S. G. Cobb of Covington, Ky., has decided to sell his greenhouse and retire from business.

The report is out that Dock Sunderbruch, who has been considered by all to be a confirmed stag, has at last decided to separate himself from a life of single blessedness and try his luck in the wedded state. The bride-to-be resides in Cleveland, Ohio; is one of that city's fairest daughters, and July 16 is the date set for the wedding. Notwithstanding all this, Dock says there is not a word of truth in the report. Well, time will tell.

The outing committee is making good progress, and all that is needed to make our annual outing a success is a good day. Don't forget the date, Thursday, July 24.

J. W. Rogers attended a wedding at Amelia, Ohio, on Thursday last.

A letter from Mr. Deake of Asheville gives the following hotels as those most desirable for the convention visitors to put up at: The Battery Park, rate $3.50 up; the Swannanoa, $2 to $3; Hotel Berkeley, $2 to $3, and the Oaks, $2. There will be no official headquarters, or at least none have been chosen so far.

C. J. Ohmer.

NEWPORT, R. I.

The rose and strawberry show of the Newport Horticultural Society was an excellent display, especially in view of the fact that there were no plants.

The silver cup for best display of cut roses arranged for effect was won by W. Barth, gardener for Hon. Perry Belmont; second went to C. Robertson, gardener for Mrs. R. Goelet; third to H.

PIPING.

We have two houses, each 22 feet wide in clear and 300 feet long, running east and west, in which we want to maintain a temperature of 58 degrees. We don't often have zero weather. The boiler pit is 9 feet deep at the east end. Please state how many pipes we need, the best size to use, how and where to place them. Will heat by steam. The houses are on a level piece of ground It is about 13 feet from ground to ridge-pole.

W. Va. D. & S.

Referring to the inquiry of D. & S., for the heating of houses described, either of two plans may be carried out. A 3 1-2-inch steam main to extend from the boiler up to the ridge pole and extending along each house with a downward grade, branches at the far end into 12 1-inch return pipes, conveniently distributed under the benches and on the side walls, these returns running together at the boiler end of each house into a 2 1-2-inch return main, separate steam and return mains to extend from the boiler to each house, or if more convenient they can connect at any point into a common steam and return, the diameter of the steam being 5-inch and the return 3 1-2-inch.

The second plan would be to place all the radiating surface below the benches and on the side walls, thus doing away with an overhead steam main, the coils to be made up of 1 1-4-inch steam pipes from the boiler end to the farthest end and 1-inch return pipes back to the boiler end, grading down hill all the way, requiring 6 1 1-4-inch flows and 6 1-inch returns.

The size of boiler necessary for this work would be not less than 35 H. P.; 40 H. P. would be better.

CHICAGO TO ASHEVILLE.

The Chicago Florists' Club has arranged with the Big Four and Southern railways for the trip to the convention of the S. A. F. at Asheville, N. C., Aug. 19 to 22.

The party will travel from Chicago by special cars on the Big Four road (C. C. C. & St. L. Ry.), leaving at 8:30 p. m., Sunday, Aug. 17, reaching Cincinnati early Monday morning. The morning will be spent in the Ohio city and at 2 p. m. the party will take a special train on the Queen & Crescent and Southern railways, reaching Asheville at 7 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Sleeping car reservations made in advance. Send in your names, stating space wanted and number of people in your party. This is quite necessary, that all may have proper accommodations. Address E. F. Winterson, 45 Wabash avenue, Chicago.

SUCH A MUCH.

The melancholy days have come, the saddest of the year,
The time Carnations look so "bum," and Roses are so queer.
It seems a long, long time since flowers bloomed fine and gay,
And yet it is but five short weeks that Mildew came to stay.

The Thrips came first upon the scene, they were a mighty host!
And myriad buds were chewed, I ween, e'er they gave up the ghost.
And now has business gone to pot, Sweet Peas are in the soup,
The weather is so baking hot that even Daisies droop.

The florist who stays in his store from morn 'til dewy eve
Sees patrons few come in the door, which causes him to grieve.
The weather is too hot to bowl at Tenpins—yet I fear
Some do go "bowling" all the same with Highballs, and with beer.

Yet there are some who like a lark, and seek Dame Fortune's graces, Breaking Bookies at Washington Park and beating all the races.
But there's a good time coming, boys, Convention week draws nigh,
In Asheville with its sights and joys I'll meet you bye and bye.

C. HERMANN.

WASHINGTON.

In the Washington Times of Sunday, June 29, appears an excellent portrait and a sketch of the life of Mr. Wm. F. Gude, the well known florist who has been elected Chief Rabban of Almas Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.

Mr. Gude is a member of the Masonic, Odd Fellow, Pythian, and Elk fraternities. He has filled the chairs and attained the honors in the subordinate lodges in Masonry, Odd Fellowship, and Pythianism, being a past master, F. A. M. and I. O. O. F., and past chancellor, K. of P. He is also past commander of De Molay Commandery No. 2, Knights Templars, and the present grand treasurer of the grand commandery. He has been president of the Washington Florists' Club, and in 1898, as is well known to the trade, he was president of the Society of American Florists.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—The Cleveland Seed Co. has been incorporated with a capital stock of $5,000. The directors are: W. J. Mandeville and F. B. King, of this city, and S. M. Pease, of Cape Vincent.

CLYDE, O.—O. P. Horton has admitted R. C. Arlin to partnership in his florist business and the firm name will be Horton & Arlin.

DES MOINES, IA.

This locality has been blessed with an abundance of rain this season, and while we have not had more than the ground needed, yet with the vast amount that fell north and west of us, it caused our two rivers, the Des Moines and Raccoon to overflow their banks, and the amount of damage has been large.

Julius Leidig's greenhouses are situated in the bottom land and the levee gave way. The water rushed upon the houses until it was half way up the sash-bars. It came with such force, carrying rubbish and timbers with it, that the side of one house was crushed in. The other two fared better and the damage to them is not so serious. On his stock the loss will be total, including his field carnations, and will probably amount to $1,500 or $2,000. It is hard to estimate it when one stands and looks at it with water five feet deep all around. Certain it is, he can ill afford to lose it, as he has had a vast amount of sickness in his family lately.

The parks never looked better than now. We noticed a fine bed of pansies at Union Park that is a great attraction, being planted in black, yellow, blue and white in order named, beginning in center of bed. The Dorothy Perkins roses are in fine effect and are a splendid acquisition to the Rambler family.

Our delegation to the S. A. F. O. H. convention will be small. J. T. D. F.

GAINESVILLE, GA.—J. E. Jackson reports a most satisfactory trade this season, it showing an increase of one-third over last year. It has been very dry and hot here. The thermometer reached 100 degrees recently, the highest ever known here.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—John DeWolf, the landscape gardener, who formerly held a position in the park department, was taken to Bellevue hospital last week suffering from opium poisoning. He was unable to explain how he had taken the opium.

UTICA, N. Y.—C. F. Baker has completed the erection of two new houses containing 5,000 feet of glass. They will be devoted to ferns. Mr. Baker now has seventeen houses with a total area of 25,000 square feet.

ST. PAUL.

Business has now reached ebb tide and vacations and early closing should be the order of the day, and night, too, but alas! are not in this town. With but one exception the stores are all kept open till 8 p. m. during the week and till noon Sundays, as though the shekels were pouring in instead of an occasional nickel for a boutonniere.

Good stock is not very plentiful and all that is good finds a market. Beauties, Kaiserins, Meteors, Carnots, Testouts, Brides and Maids constitute the principal cut. A few carnations of fair quality are still coming in. Sweet peas, corn flowers, delphiniums, coreopsis, gaillardias, etc., are quite abundant, but besides making a place showy and attractive are not very profitable.

Swanson is cutting some asters, and May & Co. have valley and auratums. These being out of the ordinary run of flowers sell quite readily.

The growers have been quite busy replanting and repairing. A. S. Swanson has one new house completed and planted to roses. It is 25x120 in dimensions, has 16x20 lapped glass, four beds underlaid with 3-inch square tiling and is a fine house for roses. Two more houses are under way. These are 15x120 and 20x120 respectively, and will be planted to mums, which are one of Mr. Swanson's specialties. All of the roses at his place are new plants, being fine, clean and healthy. Three houses are planted to violets in solid beds. Outside there is a great variety of annuals and hardy perennials in bloom. He also has a very fine lot of araucarias which are making a very vigorous growth. A batch of azaleas carried over are making good growth.

At Chris Hansen's, roses, which he grows very extensively, are all replanted, and nearly all are old ones cut back and carried over. One house contains Meteors planted for the third time. They did exceptionally well last season and are now breaking into fine new growth again. Mr. Hansen has been one of the largest and most successful Liberty growers in this section and is planting a large number again this season. He expects to sail for Denmark, his native land, in about ten days.

At L. L. May & Co.'s work is being pushed on their new houses as rapidly as possible. Roses are all planted except those to go in the new range. Old stock is being replanted here also and nothing but grafted stock on imported Manetta is used, as club root played such havoc on other stocks as to preclude their use. Three houses of mums are planted and carnations, which have made an exceptional growth in the field, will be lifted the last of July.

At Como Park the lily ponds are attracting the visitors at present, while the show of Crimson Rambler and Queen of the prairie roses is most gorgeous. About town Clematis Jackmanni is now one mass of blossoms.

The Twin City Florists' picnic will be held in the near future, either at Wildwood or Spring Park. The committees are arranging an excellent program of sports and a full attendance of all in the trade is earnestly desired.

Otto Hiersekorn is rusticating at Fertile, Minn.

Fred Schultz sailed for his old home in Germany last week.

PIPING.

Please tell me the highest number of feet of 2-inch wrought iron pipe a 10-horse-power return tubular boiler will heat with water where the temperatnre does not go below zero at the coldest.

J. J.

In reply to J. J., a 10-H. P. boiler used for water heating will give sufficient heat to supply 2,560 lineal feet of 2-inch pipes, assuming that the pipe surface in relation to glass surface is proportionately provided for.

HOLLYHOCK RUST.

The rust which attacks the leaves of hollyhocks is the hollyhock fungus (Puccinea Malvacearum) and is nearly allied to the violet fungus. Whenever this attacks a hollyhock it is nearly certain to kill it, and whenever it appears the best thing to do is to pull up the plants attacked and burn them to prevent its spreading. Half measures are not of the least use.

DENVER, COL.

Death of Wm. J. Crowe.

At the age of 32, Wm. J. Crowe died in this city on July 11th after a brief but ineffectual struggle to regain his health. He came here nearly two years ago from Utica, N. Y., in which city his father, Peter Crowe, has successfully conducted a rose establishment for a great many years. The sincere sympathy of the craft in this city goes out to the bereaved wife and the two little daughters and no less to the aged father and mother, who have made every effort and have spent money with a lavish hand in an ineffectual attempt to save this only child.

He was loved by all who knew him here and was affectionately called "Billy" by his acquaintances. Exactly one week before his death he attended a picnic of the Park Floral Company employes, where he responded to a toast and feelingly alluded to the affection which he recognized was evidenced by this nickname. He made a brave fight and was cheerful and sunny to the last. Fortunately when the end came it came quickly and without pain. Mr. Valentine accompanied the widow and the remains to Utica where the interment took place under the auspices of the Masonic order.

P.

MILWAUKEE.

Summer dullness is now with us and business is practically at a standstill. Prices reached low water mark during the week, prices on carnations going down to 5 cents per bunch to keep them cleaned up. Good fancy brought as high as $1.50 per 100, but the bulk of them will not average more than 50 cents per 100. Roses ranged from so much per bucket, which was any old price, to $6 per 100 for good Kaiserin, Gates and Liberty. Retailers and street men all displayed "10 cents per dozen" signs. The hot weather after a protracted cool spell is crowding the market with stock, much of the inferior grades of which goes to the dump. Sweet peas are extremely plentiful and sales at 1 cent per bunch are reported. Field grown plants which were retarded by cool and wet weather are now making rapid growth, and stock has improved considerably the past week.

Paul Mueller, Burlington, Wis., was a visitor.

Incog.

Hornellsville, N. Y.—The floods have ruined all of the carnations, cannas and other stock in the field at W. A. Wetlin's. The water has been higher than ever before known here.

Syracuse, N. Y.—James J. Belden has announced his intention to give a greenhouse to Oakwood cemetery. He will also fit out the greenhouse and proposes to spend in all $15,000 on it. Work on the structure will not be commenced until next spring.

OMAHA.

The very rainy and changeable weather seems to have come to an end and the hot sun is smiling over the Nebraska flower fields. The florists are walking around contented, well satisfied with their spring trade and with most of their stock planted, ready for the fall rush. Stock has been somewhat scarce and the demand has kept up fairly well.

Fred Berlinghof, who has for seven years been foreman for Henderson, has left him and is at present with Hess & Swoboda.

The new store of Hess & Swoboda with its show window is indeed a beauty.

L. Henderson has plans out for an addition to his store, 20x60 feet, which will give him the room so much needed. He has bought the plants and stock of Mr. Lecluse, who has quit the business.

J. H. Hadkinson has just finished a fine piece of landcape work at the Country Club and other places in its vicinity. Paul Floth has beautified Courtland Beach; and Faulkner has planted many fine flower beds throughout the city.

The Florists' Society is going to have a great picnic, Wednesday afternoon, July 23, at Courtland Beach. There will be bowling, bathing, boating and fishing, with many other amusements.

The Nebraska State Horticultural Society will hold its annual summer meeting at Tecumseh, July 30 and 31.

The meeting of the Florists' Society was well attended last Thursday evening. After the meeting a few of the members felt like bowling, with the following results:

	1st	2nd	3rd
J. H. Hadkinson	140	150	138
L. Henderson	130	137	145

HOLYOKE, MASS.

A. N. Pierson, the popular grower of Cromwell, was a visitor to Springfield and Holyoke July 9.

Trade in general is dull here, as is expected during the summer months.

Forestdale Cemetery has just completed a new carnation house for the sexton, Fred Bartlett. The house is 18x60.

E. A. Brainard, of Easthampton, is about to retire from the business and has offered his greenhouse for sale.

D. J. Gallivan has been on the sick list for the past ten days. Ino.

Girardville, Pa.—W. Guy Payne has built up a new place at Pottsville, Pa., of which he has taken charge himself, and his brother (Wallace G. Payne) will in future manage the old establishment here.

Detroit, Mich.—The Mayabe Nursery Co. has been incorporated with a capital stock of $5,000.

Saratoga, N. Y.—Arrangements are being perfected to hold another floral fete here this year. The program will be very similar to that of last year.

Benton Harbor, Mich.—R. A. Smythe has commenced the construction of a greenhouse 30x200 at Oak Crest farm, north of the city. He will make a specialty of carnations.

ANNOUNCEMENT!

REALIZING the large and growing demand for high grade glass structures for horticultural purposes, the undersigned have organized a stock company, to design, manufacture and construct such buildings and to supply the materials which enter into their construction. We have secured property on West Side Avenue, Jersey City, N. J., near the West Side Avenue Station of the Newark branch of the Central R. R. of N. J., which is admirably suited for manufacturing purposes. Our factories are new and equipped with machinery of the most approved type. We are in a position to manufacture and build a large amount of work of a high grade, quickly, thoroughly and economically. Mr. Lincoln Pierson has been Secretary of the Lord & Burnham Co. for the past twelve years, having had charge of the Architectural and Sales department of that company. Mr. William Sefton has been Superintendent of Hitchings & Co. for the past six years, having had charge of their Manufacturing and Construction department. During this period both have had a large and varied experience, having been responsible for the designing and construction of many of the largest and most notable glass structures in this country, including both park, private and commercial work. We have purchased the Paul M. Pierson patents, and have other patents pending which will enable us to erect a very much better appearing and more durable structure than any of the existing types of houses now on the market. While we can build a better house than any of the old companies, we can also build any of the existing types equally as well and as cheaply. To all contemplating the erection of such buildings, we beg to be allowed to submit for consideration, plans, specifications and estimates of cost for their complete erection or for any of the materials needed therein. Our best services are at your command.

The FLORISTS' MANUAL by WILLIAM SCOTT

Is a book of 224 pages, and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopædia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half tone engravings. It is

A Complete REFERENCE BOOK for Commercial Florists

and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

Price, $5.00 Carriage Prepaid. If you cannot spare the full price at once, write us for our monthly payment offer.

Giant Comet Asters.
Dwarf Comet Aster.

THE ASTER is one of the most important summer flowers, and the blooms are now beginning to reach the market in quantity. It may therefore be interesting at this time to study the ways of using these flowers. With many its principal value lies in the fact that it can be made to take the place of carnations in design work. That it has greater possibilities is, we think, demonstrated by the accompanying illustrations. The photographs from which the engravings were made were taken to show the most desirable types of receptacles to use in arranging these flowers, but they also show how the flowers may be placed to be most effective. We believe these examples can be very profitably studied by all. Writing of asters in the House Beautiful, Mr. Clarence Moores Weed says:

"The usefulness of the Comet asters for decorative purposes has been greatly increased since the introduction of the giant Comets with their long stems and large blossoms. If your garden supplies these in a variety of colors you need not envy the owners of conservatories their chrysanthemums. For these Comets are every bit as lovely and may be used to excellent advantage in the home. If you have a few simple flower jars of good form and without the objectionable decorations that are too often supposed to add to their attractiveness, you can find great pleasure in arranging the blossoms in them. The use of white and one other color always gives a pleasing effect, although you can hardly fail to get good results in any combination of the different sorts. But it is unfortunate to mix these Comet asters with other kinds of asters or other flowers. Their beauty is so distinctive that it shows to best advantage all alone.

"Even if you have not the giant varieties, the smaller sorts may be used in less pretentious but equally beautiful arrangements in your jars and vases.

"The Comet asters are particularly well adapted for use in the bamboo wall-sticks which are to be had at the Japanese shops, and which are so strikingly effective when filled with the right sorts of flowers. The long-stemmed blossoms of the giant Comets may be displayed in these holders against a plain background to great advantage, the soft and shining petals illumining the wall in a most beautiful manner. Any suggestion of stiffness or bilateral duplication in the arrangement should be avoided, the blossoms being arranged in such a manner as to give an appearance of that harmonious symmetry so much to be desired in floral compositions. These bamboo holders are inexpensive and may be used to advantage for many sorts of flowers besides the Comet asters. When purchasing them be sure there is no crack anywhere.

"One of the most satisfactory ways to use these asters for indoor decoration is to transplant them just as they come into bloom into artistic jardinieres. The smaller and medium sized plants may thus be changed without ill effect if the soil about them is thoroughly soaked with water a few hours before they are taken up. I have not tried the giant plants with this method, but presume that they could also be transplanted if sufficient care were taken. For this purpose jars without a drainage hole may be used, as it is desirable to keep the roots wet to avoid wilting. The compact masses of beautiful blossoms will remain in good condition for about two weeks, if not exposed to direct sunshine, and make a very effective bit of decoration."

THE RETAIL FLORIST.

Oleanders.

We wonder why oleanders are not more generally grown. They bloom during the summer months, and most of the varieties are grand. The cultivation of oleanders hereabouts is left entirely to a few appreciative amateurs, mostly Teutons, and they produce remarkable results despite lack of knowledge. For seaside, veranda, lawn or general decorative purposes there is nothing finer than oleanders. They are superb in the eyes of the artist because they combine all that is necessary to produce the very finest pictures.

Cycas Revoluta.

Many of the prominent importers have been offering cycas stumps, but we don't see as many of them grown as in other years. It's a mighty good thing to have a Cycas revoluta in your greenhouse or store, especially during summer. You have in them the material to do up a design in five minutes, a very pretty and most profitable design, too, and there are numerous ways to get them up. There is a lot of meaning attached to the placing of a palm leaf on the casket of the dead. You can have it one beautiful leaf or two or three. Where three are used have one shorter than the other two. Sometimes in the case of two leaves they look better if one is a few inches shorter than the other, and then again you can make a pretty cluster bunch of small leaves having one or two reversed at the end.

Then there are the wreaths. You can moss an ordinary crescent wire frame, green it well and then arrange your small cycas leaves, or you can get a heavy single wire or reed into wreath form, green it and wire on either your large or small leaves. Ribbon is essential to cycas leaves, and narrow ribbon makes your work and the material look cheap. Always try to use good broad ribbon, because it makes your design look rich. There are two leading colors in ribbon to use on such designs—royal purple and white. Purple for the old, white for young or old. Then there are the many combinations you can get up—cluster, half-crescent or crescent of red roses, white ribbon; white roses or lilies, white ribbon (we don't consider it right to put purple ribbon on white flowers; it jars the nerves and spoils the effect); small cluster of wheat with tips of ivy, purple or white ribbon; and so on all through the list of suitable flowers too numerous to mention here.

Palms.

There are a great many imperfect or scraggy palms occupying valuable room in stores and greenhouses which could be put to more profit by cutting them up for funeral work. A wreath of small Areca lutescens leaves or a combination of that and cycas looks well. And then there are the great many designs where the use of a leaf or two adds so much expression and value. The foliage of Cocos Weddeliana is extra fine for this work and small phœnix or kentias can be used to advantage. Small palms of many varieties are plentiful and dirt cheap. We use them (knocked out of pots) in bases of large standing designs; they are cheaper and richer than most flowers. Ferns can be used in like manner.

You should never hesitate to use up stock such as we have mentioned if by doing so you can make a reasonable profit and rid your premises of eye-sores or cripples, and it must be remembered that foliage, and plenty of it, constitutes a principal part of funeral designs. And while we are on plants, don't fill your houses with unprofitable stock merely because you happen to have it or can get it cheap. We will chat with you on things to grow next week.

Begonias.

Begonias are in full glow now. The tuberous rooted class are magnificent for table decoration or for select vase or cut flower work. You can use them cut with any fine fern, particularly the adiantums, as embellishment, or you can use the plants in low bowls or flat baskets. There are such a vast amount of colors in these grand flowers that you can bring out any desired effect, either in mixtures or separate shades. Then there are all the other classes of flowering begonias most suitable for cutting, such as B. nitida, B. acuminata, B. Duchartre, all white; and B. Thurstoni, B. maculata, B. Mastodonte and B. rubra, ranging from pink to red; B. Gloire de Lorraine and its types are especially grand, but even the small B. Vernon and B. Erfordæa kinds are good in fern dishes or alone. Variety is the spice of many things connected with life, and even if you have an abundance of more prominent flowers the modest and simple are delightfully pleasing for a change.

Don't despise a plant or flower because it doesn't last like leather or steel. It would be a bad day were floriculture to narrow down to the few things we see on the Greek's stand, and how can we expect to have plant lovers buy certain things if we ourselves ignore their beauty or adaptability for fine work? Take, for instance, Gloxinias. True, they will not tolerate rough handling, but can you beat them in colors? Use them in low bowls or glasses on the table or sideboards or the purple shades in funeral work. And then there are fuchsias. What makes a prettier hanging basket than the drooping varieties, or even in window boxes, or any of them cut and arranged in water with a few geraniums or begonias. We might go through the whole list of flowers which could be made prominent features of florists' places and serve on many an occasion when and where it is impossible to procure roses or carnations.

Hardy Flowers.

Many of our prettiest summer flowers are to be seen only in the herbaceous borders and botanical gardens. Yellow predominates in the hardy flowers from now on, and how beautiful are the heleniums and rudbeckias. Common stuff, some may call them. But let us have two rooms to decorate. You take one and fill it with roses. I'll take the other and use this common stuff. The difference in price and appropriateness will be remarkable.

Rudbeckia Newmanii is good, R. purpurea is odd and pretty; Helenium Boulangerii, Heliopsis scabra major and H. Pitcheriana are all aglow, cheap, and fine for extensive work. Those who cater to seaside resorts and even city hotels, theaters or restaurants need not deter people from enjoying flowers by suggesting high-priced stock. There are other colors and flowers. Platycodon jap. fl. pl. or any of the type is excellent to mix with flat funeral bunches, or for that matter in vases or base work. But purple flowers should not be introduced in house decoration unless for a funeral. The color is too melancholy. Spiræa venusta is pretty, and as for annuals they are just showing their full beauty.

Asters will be the leader from now on, and even if they be small or one-sided, you can use them for ground work. Solid wreaths of asters are all right providing you put a loose cluster of crimson, white or pink on the white ones, and white on the purple. Asters, Golden Glow rudbeckias, African marigolds, hydrangeas and gladioli are all important flowers where there is carnival work to be done, at such places as Saratoga, Bar Harbor, Newport, etc., and this material can be had in such quantities and for so little that it is almost incredible that paper flowers can be substituted on the pretense of being cheaper. Florists in those sections should take steps to preserve the intent and carry out the ideas and purposes of carnivals, which never can be associated with paper or artificial nonsense.

IVERA.

VIOLETS.

F. C. M. writes: "I notice you say in your violet notes in the REVIEW that the plants should be kept free from black and green aphis. Will you kindly tell me how to do this? My crop of violets has been ruined for the last three years by the small black aphis. I have tried tobacco in many forms, but can't get rid of the aphis without injuring the plants so that they will not bloom. I have heretofore seen them only in the fall after the plants commenced to bloom, but doubtless they are there more or less during the summer. I would be very glad to know of some summer treatment that would kill them before putting on the sash in the fall. I raise violets in cold-frames and at this season the plants are in the open ground."

As stated by F. C. M., tobacco applied at all heavily is ruinous to violets. One of the precautions that it is always well to take, but of course too late now for this season, is to make a large box and give all the stock you have in flats or pots a thorough fumigating with hydrocyanic acid gas. Then we like to give our violet houses a heavy fumigating with sulphur several weeks before we plant, and again a day or so before we plant. We do this as we do not like to use hydrocyanic acid gas any oftener than is absolutely necessary on account of its being so dangerous.

If F. C. M. has planted his stock in the cold-frames and not in the field, with some extra labor he can still fumigate with the gas. Of course, if he is growing large quantities this will be quite a task, but I know of no other method of getting rid of the aphis, and I doubt if only one application will prove effectual, as it is next to, or quite, impossible to get entirely free from them when once they have gotten a foothold. They should be watched closely, probably having to be fumigated about every month until it is too cold to do so any more.

F. C. M. has my sympathy, as has every grower "in the same boat." If after the effort he makes this year he does not get rid of the aphis to his entire satisfaction, and if he is not dependent on the violets to any great extent, my advice would be to quit growing them for two or three years and then start again with new stock that he is sure is free from aphis, in new frames or houses, on new ground if possible.

The formula for hydrocyanic acid gas has been often given, but may not be at hand, and I will quote from page 104 of "The Florists' Manual," which every grower should have if he does not already own a copy:

Hydrocyanic Acid Gas.

Water, 1 quart.
Sulphuric acid, 1 quart.
Cyanide of potash, 5 oz.

The above quantities are right for 1,000 cubic feet of air space in your houses, and measurements and quantities must be accurate. As many thousand cubic feet of air as your house contains, so many vessels you must have. Butter jars are the best for the purpose and they should be placed on the floor of the house, not among or near the plants. The house must be shut down closely and must be opened again in half an hour.

As this gas is very deadly you must contrive to let the cyanide down through a small hole in the glass, or through a crack in the ventilator. As the 5 oz. parcel is a small affair a very thin piece of string attached will do. We suspend the cyanide to the end of the string, as many as required, and divided equally in the house. Beneath place the jars, each containing 1 quart of the acid; then add 1 quart of water, and when each jar is ready the cyanide of potash is lowered into the jars. An explosion, as it may be called, immediately follows, the gas is generated instantly, and that is why you would not dare to be in the house, for you would stop breathing in an instant. This gas is death to every insect that breathes, and does not hurt the most tender foliage.

Mr. Saltford, of Poughkeepsie, who gave me the formula, showed me a Maidenhair fern that was in perfect health that had frequently been exposed to the gas. I used the gas several times last winter on violets with the best results.

As compared with tobacco smoke it is quite expensive and some trouble to apply, but if it saves a crop of violets from the ravages of that minute fly that punctures the leaf, laying an egg which destroys the tissue of the leaf and produces what we call curl leaf, it is certainly worth ten times the cost and labor. It is applied principally to destroy the almost invisible insects so injurious to violets, but while doing that it utterly destroys green fly, red spider, centipedes and all else that breathes. It leaves no objectionable odor.

Have the jar in which you generate the gas four times as large as the mixture of water and acid, and when purchasing the cyanide of potash have each 5 oz. package well wrapped in double paper.

Of course, in speaking of the sulphur fumigating, I suppose every one will remember that it will kill any plant left in the violet houses, or scorch any in any house joined to the same.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Supports.

The plants are now making rapid growth, and the question of supports comes up, for this work should be attended to before the shoots fall all over the bench, and get crooked and tangled. For the general run of stock the string system of support is usually employed and works well enough. It is particularly good at the time the flowers are being cut, as the string is cut away with the shoot and permits one to cut his flowers easily and expeditiously, without having any wires in the way. This string method simply consists of running a wire above each row of plants, keeping said wire well up into the roof, unless the house happens to be an extremely high one, then running another wire for each row along the bench, just above the soil. Run a string from the top to the bottom wire, one string to each plant, or if you are running several shoots to a plant, use more strings rather than crowd all your shoots together. Any cheap, coarse string is all right, as it is useless after one season. If the strings are put up neatly, and tightened after a few days, and the shoots kept tied up, it is a neat looking job.

If plants are dwarf and on low side benches, short wire stakes or bamboos cut to the required length will do. For exhibition flowers we think it better to use either wire or bamboo stakes, one stake for each plant. These stakes can be kept tight by running one wire down the bench for each row, say three feet above the bench, and tying each stake up to the wire. The reason we prefer stakes

White and Violet-Red Comet Asters.

White. Comet Aster Plant. In Bamboo Holder.

in this case is because the stems should be kept perfectly straight, and when a plant throws an early bud, which is of course removed, the succeeding growth does not sometimes come away as straight as one could wish. The growth can be pulled in close to the stake, while string can hardly ever be made rigid enough to serve this purpose. If four or five-foot wire stakes are used and the growth gets up above them, the stakes can be pieced out by dropping a piece of bamboo cane over the top of the wire stake.

Syringing.

In spraying your plants always remember that it is on the under side of the leaves were thrips, red spider and kindred insects make their home. Once a week at least the plants should have a good spraying, using a nozzle that throws the spray upwards. Keep the sprayer well down, working it upwards and it will dislodge caterpillars and everything else if you have force enough. We are bothered considerably by a tiny white thrips, so small as to be almost invisible to the naked eye, which works entirely on the under side of the foliage and whose presence is entirely unsuspected unless you happen to turn over the bottom leaves. Where frequent syringing fails to remove this pest, use rose leaf extract of tobacco, diluted as recommended.

Buds.

Many varieties are now throwing a bud. This should be rubbed out and when the new shoots have grown long enough to determine which is the best, all the others should be removed. It is not wise to disbud closely too early, because some of the shoots occasionally come blind after the plant has thrown a bud, and this must be allowed for.

I often think that the men responsible for sending out new varieties should, instead of saying, "take first crown bud" or "second crown," give a date, after which approximate time it would be safe to take buds, as for instance, take first bud after last of August, or whatever the case may be. If a plant produces a bud in July it may be regarded as a first crown by some who are not well posted, and every florist is not an expert in 'mum growing. July buds are useless and should never be taken, unless we except perhaps Fitzwygram or one or two of the extra early varieties, which are sometimes taken during the last few days of the month by those growers who have a mania for getting first into the market.

Brian Boru.

CARNATION NOTES.

By this time, if your carnation plants have been growing as they should have done, they should be nice, shapely plants and no severe pinching should be indulged in any longer. From now on you should merely keep them from running into bud and from wasting a lot of strength in producing a few worthless blooms. This latter part is just as important as the former and don't get the idea into your head that the only reason for pinching carnations is to cause them to branch. As I said once before in these notes you can do a great deal now in the next few weeks to make your carnations bloom continuously next winter by topping them right. Take off only those shoots that are really shooting up to form a bud, and leave all those that will be in that stage in one week, when you should go over them again and so on until you house them. You will find then that your plants will have shoots in all stages of development and a continuous crop of blooms will result.

This has been a dreadful season for weeds in this neck of the woods, brought on by the abundant rains we have had at regular intervals, and it has kept us busy keeping them down. Especially at this time you must keep your plants from being choked.

If you have already planted a house or a bench you must watch them closely and let up on the syringing, at least partly, and if it is cloudy or cool you can leave off altogether as soon as they begin to make new growth. Less shade will also be needed, and unless the rain has taken off part of it you should do it with a brnsh or a long stick. As soon as the weeds come up enough to allow you to get a good hold on them you should weed them at once. These weeds are usually gross feeders and will impoverish your soil in a very short time, and while you are pulling the weeds you should loosen up the soil about an inch deep to allow the air to penetrate. If there are any signs of stemrot take a sharpened hock made of ¾-inch iron (flat) and pull it through the soil between the rows, leaving a trench behind it a couple of inches deep and when watering water only in these and you will find them a great help.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Roses and Carnations.

This is really the season when there is much doing, not only in business but in our gardening operations. Roses are or should be planted. Only a few begin so early with their carnations and we are not all carnation specialists. This most beautiful and important plant is out of my domain, bnt I will jnst revert to a little controversy I had the honor to mix up in with Mr. Charles Allen of Long Island. I had said that early September was the time to plant carnations. He very properly said I was mistaken and that early August was a better time. I had not then had any experience with so early planting, yet we have had an abundance since and our comment is that with few exceptions they should be all on the bench by the 10th of August, and many expert growers are planting in July. Particularly does this apply to the newer large flowered varieties.

No harm here in just referring to a bed of Lawson that was planted about the 7th of last August and began flowering in October. Except a few weeks in April it has been glorious and continuous, and this day (July 21), it is a sight, giving us thousands of grand flowers. I am on forbidden ground and will collapse merely saying—plant early. It is cruel to throw away such a bed as I refer to but it's profit in the end.

Lilies.

The Bermnda lilies are arriving and the 5 to 7-inch that yon want in flower in October and November should be potted without delay; in fact whether you want to force them or not they should be got into the ground. It is an injury to them to lie around, particularly if exposed to the air. We tried once planting this size bulb in flats about 16 inches square and 4 inches deep; size of flat of conrse would make no difference, but the depth was about right. The plan was not a sneeess and we have not done it since. Planting them in boxes or even on a bench in four or five inches of soil may do very well for a late shipment of the Japan bulbs that you want in for Decoration Day, bnt for these early grown bulbs pots are much better. A 5-inch pot is large enough.

Lihes do not like fresh mannre. A good fresh loam with a fifth or sixth of well rotted mannre is all they want, and if the soil is poor you can add a 5-inch pot of bone meal to a barrow load of the loam. A greenhouse bench is liable to be a very warm place just now and we prefer to place the pots in a frame, but always where water will not stand and, after a good watering, cover with an inch of straw. It keeps the soil from baking, saves watering and keeps the soil and bulbs cooler. If you have an open shed that will keep the rain off that would be an ideal place for them. They really want little or no water till roots start and with these early dug bulbs that is often some weeks hence, so there should be means at hand to keep off excessive rains. (The very mention of rain makes yon shudder.)

Roman Hyacinths.

Roman hyacinths will soon arrive. The easiest of all the bulbs to force and of late the most unprofitable. It's well to have a few on hand but very few will answer. Lily of the valley costs us much less, occupies less room in the greenhouse, is more sweet and chaste, and much preferred by all our customers, then why not grow them instead of the expensive little hyacinth? When the French grower comes off his perch and this government (with Mr. Esler's permission) is willing to try and exist without a tariff on what we don't produce here, we may buy Romans at $5 per 1000, and then we shall grow a few thousand.

Their forcing is most simple. A flat of any convenient size holding three inches of soil, the soil from a thrown-out carnation bench would be just right. Place the bulbs almost touching in the flat and even with the surface. Give a good watering and then place the flats out of doors and cover with three or four inches of soil or sand or tan bark. In the early treatment of these Roman hyacinths and paper white and even the early tulips yon often make a mistake in not watering the soil that covers them. If two weeks of hot weather occurs, which I pray may be the case soon, the soil in the flats becomes very dry and there is not root growth, and without roots all these bulbs will not force.

Hardy Perennials.

As we are ornamental horticulturists, many of us, and not confined alone to the culture of indoor plants, I would remind you that now is an excellent time to sow the seeds of most of the desirable hardy herbaceous plants. As cut flowers to sell over the counter there is little profit in them unless their flowers are only a side issue and yon are growing them to supply your trade with the plants. There is a good and growing demand for the roots and plants and many hundreds of dollars are sent out of all our cities because no local man can supply them. Sow in flats or drills in a cold frame and when large enough to handle transplant again a few inches apart in good soil in a frame that can be protected with glass or shutters during winter. They will be good plants to either sell or plant in the field in early spring.

All genera and species that come true from seed can be sown now. Snch well known kinds as ecreopsis, anemone, aquilegia, delphinium, digitalis, Lobelia cardinalis, and many others that are most desirable and which, if you are in the business, you should grow.

Azaleas.

We now look upon the unsold plants of spring as quite as valuable as the newly imported. If plunged in pots in a cold-frame they will have grown very much since you put them out there in early June and they should be stood over and given more room or you won't be able to spray thoroughly all around them and the red spider and thrips will get a lodging. When standing them over put an inch of half-decayed cow manure on the surface of the soil to which has been added a liberal portion of bone flour. I say flour because I want it understood that you want the minutest particles. It will help the growth very much.

William Scott.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

The weather in many localities still continues dark, with an excess of moisture in the atmosphere. During such weather the surface of the soil in the benches will require freqnent stirring to prevent the growth of green scum on the surface, and to encourage evaporation. To help to destroy this scum the soil should be allowed to become moderately dry and a sprinkling of air slaked lime given previous to stirring; 25 pounds to a bench 100x4½ feet is about sufficient. This also tends to give firmer wood and foliage. The bench should then receive a thorough soaking.

Keep a vigilant watch for mildew, black spot and insect enemies and never allow them a foothold.

The roofs and gutters of the houses should be looked over dnring dry weather. See that all the glass is in good condition for winter, locate all the drip spots and have them closed. A liberal use of the putty bulb, or mastica, just now will be amply compensated for before winter is over. Ribes.

DETROIT.

Having jnst returned from a trip east, it may interest some of your readers to hear of the various eastern places which the writer visited while there. On Saturday, July 5, at 4 p. m., I left Detroit for Buffalo on the new D. & B. steamer, "Western States," by which route one can save $3 fare and enjoy a good night's sleep and arrive in Buffalo in time for all trains going east. Continuing the trip over the D., L. & W., I saw not only hundreds but thousands of acres of valley land completely covered with water, in many places only the tops of fence posts being visible, also the heads of the growing wheat just above the water.

Arriving at Summit, N. J., I spent two days in visiting the several plants for which this place is noted, the first being that of John N. May, which is a model of neatness. A place for everything and everything must be in its place, the employes being fined 10 cents for putting away a tool without first cleaning it, and a heavier fine for not putting it away at all. All hands were busy in filling and planting the roses for next season's cut. Mr. May is a firm believer in the sterilization of soil, for every particle of his soil is so treated. Mr. Harry May, foreman in charge, seems to have acquired a great measure of western push, for the rapidity with which a large house is emptied and filled is wonderful, Harry setting the pace himself with the shovel. That everything here is done in the most exact way is proved by the fact that in the grading of roses every stem is measured by a rule and must be of the required length or over or it is placed with the grade below, and there is no guesswork. Among the young men who expect to be florists some day and are doing time here are representatives from New York, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and Michigan.

On Tuesday we went over to Madison to see what Mr. Herrington was doing in the way of growing prize-winning chrysanthemums, and met Mr. Totty, who is in charge of them, and it did one good to see the magnificent stock. Such stems! Each one fully four feet high and as thick as one's thumb, clothed with foliage clear to the soil. After testing the quality of the grapes and nectarines and looking through several houses of orchids, which are in perfect condition, Mr. Herrington drove us through the park, which is composed of about 1,000 acres, most beautifully laid out and with good drives and pleasant walks. Here may be seen banks fifteen to thirty feet in height and from 100 to 1,000 feet in length, completely covered with Wichuraiana roses in full bloom, surmounted with Crimson Ramblers. In the large conservatory are some noble specimens of kentias, one of the smaller ones occupying the center of the group in the convention hall at New York two years since. In the center of the house stands a caryota or Fish Tail palm which measures 46 feet from top of tub to top of leaves, and will soon have to be moved, as it has already grown through the glass. This large estate is owned by H. McK. Twombley, who has spent millions in the beautifying and improving of it, the bulk of the land having been Jersey swamp. We would have been pleased to spend days where we spent hours on this beautiful place, but had to leave fully convinced that the hospitality of Messrs. Herrington and Totty was only equaled by the size and beauty of their surroundings.

On Wednesday we visited Flatbush and the Dailledouze Brothers, where we were received with a warmth equaled by the temperature of the day, which scored 92 points in the shade. This is the home of Prosperity and Floriana, and too much cannot be said in praise of the latter variety as a summer bloomer, for of all varieties grown on this place this seemed to take the lead both in quality and quantity of flowers. A house of Lawsons carried through under glass planted out of 3-inch pots looked exceedingly well.

After partaking of something for the inner man, that genial brother Henry volunteered to guide us to Queens, and on the route we were pleased to meet Mr. Jas. Dean, one of the honored ex-presidents of the S. A. F. A very agreeable surprise awaited us at the house of the president of the American Carnation Society, for we found Mr. Ward in his working togs, and I must say that he is really a very good-looking man in them, and he is getting results from his work, for since my visit to Queens two years ago he has transformed a large portion of the land into as fine a nursery as one can see in many a long day's travel, in which are growing all varieties of shrubs and ornamental trees, and you will hear as much about them in the future as you have in the past about geraniums and new carnations. Many of the men were busy fencing in ten acres of carnation plants with wire cloth to protect them from rabbits, which are as numerous on Long Island as are mosquitos in New Jersey.

Friday was spent in Buffalo trying to locate "Great Scott," but his son informed me that he was actually working at Corfu, and I thought, "How are the mighty fallen," so, not finding him, called on Billy Kasting, whom I found getting ready for a trip to Europe to escape the odor of a store full of flowers which he could not move at present, but thought would be cleaned out by September on his arrival home. It being close on to high noon, and knowing the generosity of Prof. Cowell, I hastened out to South Park, arriving just in time for luncheon with the genial superintendent, after which I was shown through the park and conservatories, the condition of which reflect great credit upon the competency and care of Prof. Cowell, who in his trips to the West Indies has added many new species of plants to both science and commerce.

Arriving home Saturday evening and looking around on Sunday morning found that the weeds had made a most magnificent growth during my absence of only one week, and must look up my overalls.

BOSTON.

The Market.

A growing scarcity of especially good material is making a change in the wholesale features. There is probably really not so much call for anything, but it takes practically all that comes in to supply that small demand.

The crop of roses is very irregular just now. There are practically no good Brides and Maids, and but a few good Kaisers and red roses. Poor roses of all kinds are plentiful enough but not in over-supply.

There is nothing really fine in pinks except the Fair Maid, which brings 3 cents. There is a fairly good supply of rather poor material of all colors. White is selling the best and prices run all the way from 35 cents to $1.50 per 100.

The aster crop has now probably become permanent for a few months. Richwagen now has the most and probably the best. Prices now vary but little, ranging from one to one and a half, but will naturally soon take a drop. This habit is surely bad enough in the flowers, but much worse when followed by their owners.

Just a fair supply of lilies and going a little hard at 6 cents. Quite a few auratums at same price; demand very limited on account of their heavy odor.

Sweet peas have been very good and very cheap; just now scarce, not so good and not so cheap.

Valley is plentiful enough in three grades with prices from three to five per.

Small white flowers are very plentiful and very cheap indeed; green goods also.

Base Ball.

The game is coming in good and strong. There are a number of budding, blooming teams now. For instance, the Schlegel & Fottlers have been feeling pretty warm, but the Brecks got at them on Franklin Field and pounded some of the hot out of them upon the ratio of 20 to 19. And another game at Natick between the Brimstones and Wabans is scheduled.

Notes.

Penn has sold out his lease at the old Chapman place and now confines his energies to his fine Bromfield emporium.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Edgar should have been reported as sailing with the others for Europe last week.

A lightning bolt fell from a clear sky at Dedham, striking a tree and a fence post, then jumped over two of Geo. Cartwright's greenhouses, striking the third one and rendering his brother Richard unconscious for a few minutes because he had hold of that particular iron post down which it wished to reach the ground. Then it passed into a 4-inch town water main in the garden, bursting it and making pond lilies out of a big batch of carnation plants for an hour or two, until the water could be shut off. Quite an excitement with, very fortunately, no bad results, except to the tree, the post and the water main. Of these the post was the most badly busted, being thrown thirty feet and badly lacerated.

BUFFALO.

If ever there was an excuse to fall back on the weather-beaten, worn-out but ever-present subject, the weather, it would be the present moment (strange to say, it's not raining just now). It's no use us Western New York folks grumbling, for perhaps far more serious is the damage in many other parts of the country. It has been, however, so incessant this month, as well as all the rest since the snow went, that a glimpse of the sun brings fear of sunstroke. Thunder and lightning, hail, swollen creeks and rivers, drowned out crops and cattle and people is all we see and read about. Those who live in cities with paved streets and sewers, trolley cars and electric lights and a steady salary, know little of the calamity that this strange season has and will produce. No great hailstorm has struck this neighborhood, yet we read in the Associated Press news that our friends in Erie, Pa., have lost heavily. Let us hope not so badly as the papers say. I have learned that you cannot depend on what the newspapers say, except it be the florist journals. Though farmers here and there throughout the country, and incidentally all of us, will be great sufferers, they and we must remember that the world was not made for man, but we happen to be on its surface and we must put up with its climatic conditions, or, if not satisfied, get off.

With all this inclemency Mr. Wm. Greever, manager of the W. F. Bullock & Co. store, 479 Main street, went and got married two weeks ago. The young lady who will call herself Mrs. G. was formerly Miss Emma Wagner. Good luck to Billy and let him avoid the first cross word. I understand he was not to be married till October, but fearing the flood was coming, and no ark in sight, he lost no time.

Mr. W. F. Kasting, in company with Mr. Jacob Weiss, has left for a short trip to Europe. Mr. Weiss is a Dane, but I don't think that Copenhagen will be lively enough for our Billy. He will want to see Berlin and London and a little of Paris. It's a trip that does all native-born Americans good, especially the high-strung variety and those that are not great students.

I sojourned to the city of Utica last Tuesday. It was a sad duty that called me there. Your columns have already noted the death of Wm. J. Crowe in Denver, whose remains were brought to his home and interred in the beautiful Forest Hill Cemetery of that city. The mark of respect shown to the memory of poor Billy was great indeed. To a man the florists were there and hundreds of other citizens. The bereaved widow and lonely parents receive the sympathy of all. This is no place to speak of the noble actions of a noble man in connection with such a sad event, but a man traveled from Denver and acted the part of a noble man if ever a man did in this world.

REDUCED RATES TO ASHEVILLE.

An Important Concession.

We are pleased to be able to announce that at a meeting of the Central Passenger Association, held last Tuesday, it was agreed that a rate of one fare for the round trip should be made for the meeting of the S. A. F. at Asheville, from all points in Central Passenger Association territory. This territory extends from Pittsburg on the east to St. Louis on the west, and from the Great Lakes to the Ohio river. As the Southern Passenger Association has already granted the one-fare rate, this rate will now prevail through from all points in Central Passenger Association territory.

This action reduces the round-trip rate from Chicago to Asheville from $24.80 to $20 even. And the reduction applies in proportion to all other points and by all lines in Central Passenger Association territory. It will save delegates many dollars and will undoubtedly add largely to the number in attendance at the convention.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business the past week was very quiet indeed. As one of our West End florists puts it, "The flower buying public have gone away to summer resorts and some of them have left unpaid bills for which we will have to wait until they return."

A little funeral work was about the only business done the past week. The weather has been very hot, with plenty of rain in this section, and outdoor stuff is looking fine. The flower beds in the West End and in the parks are in very fine condition and looking their best.

Most of the growers around here are making preparations to house their carnations. All report that plants in the fields are in fine condition; all the new varieties are promising to make good and the prospects are very encouraging for a good crop of blooms this fall.

Stock is still coming in quite plentifully, especially roses. Brides and Maids are in abundance, mostly of the second quality, though Perles and red roses are scarce. The best of the Brides and Maids find ready sale, while the remainder is generally dumped. Prices run from $2 to $5 per 100. A few good Kaiserins are coming in, which sell well at $5 and $6. Beauties are very scarce.

Carnations are fairly good and only the best sell, which bring $2 per 100 and from that down to 50 cents. Sweet peas are holding out good and are in good demand at 20 cents per 100 and $1.50 per 1,000.

Single tuberose stalks are now coming in at $5 per 100; asters from 75 cents to $2 per 100. Other outdoor stuff has little call, the most call being for material usable in funeral designs.

Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. John Young will leave next week for Atlantic City, N. J., to spend the summer. Mrs. Young, who experienced a painful accident two weeks ago, is very much improved.

Kalish & Sons, on Delmar boulevard, are building two new show windows, and are also making other improvements for the fall trade.

R. F. Tesson has returned from St. Paul. The injunction to prevent the condemnation of their property by the World's Fair Co. was denied, but Robert says they will appeal to the United States Supreme Court.

Mr. Wm. Bonche, the landscape gardener, is busily engaged attending to several thousand trees and shrubs near the World's Fair grounds. These are mostly to be used during the exposition. Everything is in fine shape. Mr. Bonche is very thankful for the recent good rains, which did the stuff a world of good.

At Kuehn's, Eddy and George are brightening up things and making a few changes around the place, so as to be in good shape early this fall. Up in the wire shop all hands are busy filling large orders; no layoff for the boys this year.

At C. C. Sanders' place, on Delmar, all hands are busily at work building. When through Mr. Sanders will be in better shape than ever to fill large orders for decorations and designs. His new office, he says, will be a "dream." Walter will have charge of the place while his father is away next month.

There will be quite a delegation from here to attend the convention this year, and the party has been promised a special car. The bowlers have not yet made up their minds to go. Should they do so it will swell the party considerably. The fare from St. Louis will be $20 for the round trip. Any information about the trip will gladly be furnished by J. J. Beneke, 1220 Olive street.

Last week the delivery wagon belonging to F. M. Ellis, wholesale florist, was struck by an electric car and demolished. The horse was not hurt. The damage amounted to about $100.

Death has again claimed one of our craftsmen, Josiah W. North, head of the North Floral Co., doing business at 915 Olive street. He died at 8:30 a. m., Sunday, July 20, after a brief illness at his home in Kimmswick, Mo., at the age of sixty-two years. Mr. North was born in Bridgeport, Conn. He was not a member of our local club nor of the S. A. F. He leaves a wife and four children to mourn his loss. His large circle of friends in the trade extend their sympathy to the family. The funeral took place on Monday with quite a number of the local florists present.

Comet Aster in a Brown Jardiniere.

There is great joy at the home of Emil Schray. It's a big boy. Both are doing quite well and Grandpa Schray and Uncle Julius are happy. Congratulations are now in order from Mr. Schray's score of friends.

Bowling.

Monday night the weather was fine and cool. Ten members bowled. Two teams were made up, which were captained by Weber and Beneke, the latter team winning all three games. Both teams made good scores, which are as follows:

CHICAGO.

The Market.

There is little change from last week. There is none too much good stock to meet demands and the demand is naturally very light. White carnations are the best stock to have, and the choicest of these sometimes bring $2, though ordinarily $1.50 is the top. On colored sorts the range is from $1 to $2 for the best and from that down almost indefinitely. On Brides and Maids $4 seems to be the top, while on the poorer grades rates are by the potfull instead of by count. For good Kaiserins as high as $6 is obtained. On Beauties $3 is the price for the best, but there are mighty few in this class and many poor and short ones are jobbed off at unquotable figures.

Sweet peas have been knocked out or drowned out by the heavy rains and there are few good ones to be had. Some of the bunches have a close resemblance to soaked rags and are quite useless.

The rains continue with only occasional intermissions and the injury to all crops in the field is bound to be serious. One grower who donned rubber boots and tried to capture a few blooms from his carnation field got so deep in the mire he had to be pulled out minus his boots. And in pulling out the boots afterward from between the rows the plants came with them. Under these conditions it is not surprising that flowers from outdoor plants are few and far between.

Asters are being received, but in limited quantities. Those coming in must have been from some plantations on hill sides or other well-drained situations.

Various Items.

At the meeting of the Central Passenger Association last Tuesday a rate of one fare for the round trip to the Asheville convention was granted, which reduces the rate from this city to Asheville and return $4.80, making the rate now only $20.

Kennicott Bros. Co.'s place is filled with workmen who are entirely remodeling it. The entrance is being changed and the whole interior is being rearranged. The cool room is being tiled throughout and other improvements are being made.

Geo. Anderson, the florist of 14 Colorado avenue, West Side, has secured a divorce from his wife, but upon her agreeing to raise and educate their two children he turned over his business to her and he will go west to begin life anew.

Henry Gescheidle, the florist of 128 Cortland street, has had his business incorporated under the title, Henry Gescheidle & Son, as a means of admitting his son, Peter Gescheidle, to partnership.

J. Austin Shaw, of New York, is in the city calling on the trade in the interest of the new Foster fern.

C. C. Arnold, of English Lake, Ind., was a visitor this week. He says the rains have been as heavy in his section as here. He had to cut a drain through a hill in order to prevent his pæony field from being turned into a lake.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The cut flower market has been strengthened since last report by a few new crop Beauties from John Burton. This grower does young stock wonderfully well, producing a very fine plant in small space. He is now cutting fair flowers with stems of moderate length; the best bring $1.50 per doz. Asters are improving and sell well at $1 to $1.50 per 100. Valley is choice and brings $3 to $4 per 100. Carnations and sweet peas are on the back track. The out door carnations will be welcomed. Are they not late? Asparagus plumosus in strings does not sell. Out door flowers of all kinds seem to be overdone just now.

Marketing Cut Flowers.

In last week's issue of the REVIEW one of the large growers, Joseph Heacock, gave his ideas on the establishment of a market for the sale of cut flowers in this city. The force of his arguments in favor of such a market will appeal to all our florists, both growers and retailers. Most of our small growers (I am one of them) have regular orders for their ordinary daily cut but we all know how much valuable time is often consumed in finding an outlet for our surplus cut, to say nothing of the deterioration in value through bruising. The retailers have their regular supply engaged each day, but when extra stock is needed time and worry would be saved by having a market to which they could go or telephone their orders.

To make a market successful three things are necessary: A central location, some good stock, and a capable manager. The location should be within easy reach of the two great railroad terminals, with plenty of room, but in an inexpensive building. The stock will be assured when half a dozen of our best growers agree to give the plan their hearty support; the other growers will follow when success is assured. The manager will have to be the equal in business ability of the bright young men who are developing our cut flower commission houses to such a wonderful extent.

The general method of conducting business is for the growers to rent stalls or tables on which the cut flower trays may be exposed, the rental being fixed at a price sufficient to cover the cost of fixed charges—the rent of hall, manager's salary, telephone, etc. The stock should be ready for inspection early and anything left over may be left with the manager if so desired for later orders. I am confident that such a market properly conducted would save the small growers a nice little sum each year that is now needlessly spent in selling their surplus stock.

Notes.

George Anderson has torn down a house 100x22 feet and is now replacing it with a fine house 100x25 feet.

Leo Niessen has altered his store so as to give more room for his office, a very neat and attractive room.

The young son of Adolph Fahrenwald met with a painful, though it is hoped not a serious, accident last week.

Fire caused serious loss at John A. Roebling's Sons, Trenton, this week. Loss is said to be fully covered by insurance. This firm supply wire rose stakes to our growers.

John McIntyre, with Edward Reid, is off on his vacation.

Thomas Butler's genial ha-ha manner wins the private gardeners.

Edwin Lonsdale has planted another house of Ivory, making four in all.

Wm. J. Moore expects to move from his present location some time next month.

PHIL.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Of course prices are low. Asters are sold at from 2 to 5 cents a bunch, roses at from $1 to $4 per 100 for ordinary. Sweet peas you can get at any price. Some of the bunching of these flowers is wonderful. There is surely less trouble and more profit in putting 25 or 50 spikes of peas in a bunch and we fail to see why twine is wasted in tying them in sixes and twelves. Lilies are bringing from $4 to $5, carnations from 50 cents to $1. The majority of the rest of the stock you can get at prices to suit.

There is nothing particular going on except an occasional funeral design. By the way, a tip to cattleya dealers and growers. John W. Mackay's remains will be brought to New York, and his favorite flower and his son's and daughter-in-law's flower is the dark cattleya. So look out, there will be lots of them used on that occasion. And valley will be in it too.

Notes.

Hodgson has the decorating for the Oelrich-Martin wedding in Newport this week, and quite a quantity of roses and cattleyas was shipped on from here for the occasion.

We all regret the death of the old-timer, John Bradshaw, of Sing Sing, which occurred on Friday last. His remains were interred in the family plot at Ossining on Sunday afternoon. Many beautiful floral designs were sent by the wholesalers of this city. Mr. Bradshaw was identified with the early history of the trade here. Always hospitable, encouraging and hopeful, he will be deeply regretted. He was 73 years old and death was due to Bright's disease.

John Scott, of Brooklyn, expects to sail to the land o' cakes on the 26th, and we are informed that John Nicols, the veteran geranium grower, has also gone on a short visit over the water.

We visited the Cottage Gardens, Queens, L. I., during the week and found that Mr. Ward was away inspecting the peach crop in Georgia. Mr. Ward grows peaches at his extensive place at Queens, but the fruit is not ripe yet, so don't visit there for a few weeks yet. We found his manager, Mr. Theodore Hengstenberg, very busy getting the houses ready for carnations. One house of Lawsons is already planted and from now on other sorts will follow. Mr. Ward is sterilizing his carnation soil this year. He has acres of carnation plants in the field and they are all in tip top shape. A batch of some 7,000 seedlings promise millions.

Mr. Ward has gone into the nursery business. His acres of phlox and other herbaceous plants are fine, and among the many thousands of ornamentals we saw, there is nothing more promising than his several hundred of specimen Picea pungens glauca.

THE FOSTER FERN.

We were recently afforded an opportunity to examine a plant of the new fern, Nephrolepis Anna Foster, that originated with Mr. L. H. Foster, Dorchester, Mass., and it certainly seems to be a very desirable addition to the Bostoniensis family. The pinnæ of the fronds are deeply serrated and are miniature fronds themselves, adding very greatly to its decorative value, and the growth is very robust. A plant in a 6-inch pot is a very beautiful object.

It is a sport from the Boston fern and was found in a bench of Boston ferns by Mr. Foster in November, 1900. The fact that Mr. Foster has since that date been able to easily work up a large enough stock to introduce the fern this year shows that it happily possesses the same quality of rapid increase as the valuable parent of this new variety. And the plant shown us gave ample evidence that the variety does possess this essential characteristic of a trade fern. And that this plant, which had been transported a thousand miles, and packed and repacked a great number of times, showed no effects from this rough treatment, surely speaks well for its toughness and lasting qualities.

A striking peculiarity is that each of the pinnæ unfold in the same manner as the main frond, "unwinding" being a more appropriate word than would appear so without having noted this characteristic. Mr. Foster certainly seems to have a very useful new fern.

The motive power that has transported the plant mentioned to Chicago and vicinity is Mr. J. Austin Shaw, who has been presenting the merits of this novelty to the florists of this section, and who will have charge of an exhibit of the fern at the Asheville convention.

LONDON, ONT.

Rain, thunder storms, wet, showers and more rain is about as near a description of the weather as one can come at these days. It is becoming serious, and many reports of ruined crops and inundated land are to be heard. In our immediate locality there has as yet been no real damage, excepting to a few hay crops, but should this weather continue much longer it will have a serious effect generally.

Trade has fallen flat. An occasional funeral order is about all that is going. Carnations are still plentiful and of good quality. Roses are short, but there is an abundance of outdoor flowers of all descriptions.

F. Dicks complains that stem rot is making an appearance in the field, owing, probably, to the continued wet weather.

Fred Mitchell, of Innerkip, lost 1500 lights of glass in a recent hail storm.

Gammage & Sons report a good wholesale trade in Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, Asparagus plumosus and palms. They will make a trade exhibit at the coming convention in Hamilton.

We regret to hear that Mr. Ewing's duties at his new position, gardener for the Hon. J. M. Sutherland, Cabinet Minister, at Woodstock, are such that he has to relinquish the secretaryship of the Canadian Horticultural Association. There has been considerable talk of re-establishing the Canadian trade paper, and it was confidently hoped that Mr. Ewing's versatile pen would have contributed to its columns editorially.

Seed Firm Liquidates.

The Eichling Seed & Nursery Co., Ltd., is going into liquidation by mutual consent of all parties interested. The circumstances leading to liquidation are peculiar. Last January the holder of one-half of the stock left the city to attend to other business and transferred his stock to a local seedsman, a competitor of the firm, who became secretary and treasurer by virtue of his holdings. It is plain that such a condition of affairs could not last long and Mr. C. W. Eichling, the founder of the house in 1884, insisted on liquidation. Mr. Eichling has, by honest and intelligent work, built up an enviable reputation and a fine trade. He will continue the business on his own account. With his knowledge of business and energy his success is assured.

No Rain Here.

We have had about four months of dry weather this spring, longer than ever known here before. Almost everything is dying. Flowers are scarcer than in winter. You in the north must be getting our share of the rain as well as your own.

LOSS OF BRITISH FLORISTS.

How great will be the loss of thousands who had expected to reap fortunes during the coronation ceremonies in London it has been impossible to estimate. Here is one item alone in which the losses are practically irreparable:

In anticipation of an enormous demand for roses—the coronation flower—the florists of England and the continent laid out large tracts of land with rose bushes, planning it so that the flowers would be ready in these last days of June.

It was estimated that the King's subjects would wear and use for decorations at least 60,000,000 red roses alone and would be willing to pay from two cents to four cents apiece for them. This was a moderate estimate. As coronation week approached, it was feared that the supply would not equal the demand.

The English retail florists poured in orders for thousands of blooms upon the gardeners. The fortunes in prospect seemed to be very close at hand, for the price of roses went steadily up in anticipation of a scarcity.

Now it is all at an end. Instead of great profits there will be great losses. No one wants red roses now. The florists who ordered and have literally tons of flowers coming from the continent which they will be unable to use will bear the loss in part. But most of it will fall upon the growers, in whose offices the notices of cancellation are piled high. The larger part of the rose crop will die upon the bushes, and the gardeners will be out of pocket the money they have spent on land, on plants, and on cultivation in anticipation of the profits which the sudden illness of one man has reduced to airy nothings.—New York Sun.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

The weather still continues very unfavorable for growing. It rains every few days and the soil doesn't have time to get dry before it is soaked again. Carnations are, in consequence, rather small for this time of the year. The continued wet interfered with getting soil in the benches for planting, but roses are now all planted and most of the violets.

Bruins-Slot & Son and Crabb & Hunter have lost lots of carnations by muskrats. They gnaw the plants off on a level with the ground. Bruins-Slot got after them with a shot gun and in a week's time killed three; Crabb & Hunter have traps, but no catch.

Business is very quiet. A little shipping trade and occasional funeral work serve to relieve the monotony. Carnations, 20 to 25 cents per doz.; roses, 75 cents to $1 per doz.; American Beauties, $1.50 to $3 per doz.; sweet peas, 10 cents per doz.

It looks very much as though no one from here will go to Asheville. Season is late, work backward, and no one takes any interest in the matter. We wish the boys a good time and hope to be well represented another year at the convention, which we hope will be held in Milwaukee.

COIL HEATERS.

We want to give you a bit of our experience with coil heaters, having used two different styles. They were made of gas pipe and did fairly well the first winter, but failed entirely at the end of the second year. They will not stand the soft coal fire. This we learned in the school of experience. A good heavy cast-iron boiler is cheaper at double price than any gas pipe coil heater given as at present.

JOHNSON & STOKES' Kingly Collection Pansy.

Size alone does not constitute a fine Pansy. A Giant Pansy without substance will be a failure that every florist knows only too well when it is put on sale. J. & S. Kingly Collection Pansy has been carefully selected from the choicest strains money could purchase, and this is unquestionably the largest, of the greatest substance and containing the richest colors of any strain now offered to the trade. Per 1000 seeds, 30c; 2000 seeds, 50c; 5000 seeds, $1.00; ¼ oz., $1.25; per oz., $5.00.

PIPING.

Please tell me the best way to pipe, and how much piping will be required, in a house 38x142 and 16 feet to ridge, to keep a temperature suitable for carnations, say 48 to 52 degrees, where mercury drops to zero or below. House is well put up. Has glass gables.

I thought to run five lines of 1 1-2 to 2-inch pipes down the iron supports, one in center and two on each side overhead. How many 1-inch returns would be needed? The carnations are to be planted in solid beds. D. P.

Replying to D. P., for the steam heating of the carnation house 38x142, having glass on the roof and ends only, I would suggest that he run a line of 1 1-2-inch steam flow overhead on each of the five columns, returning from each with three 1-inch returns, thus the house will contain five lines of 1 1-2-inch pipes and fifteen lines of 1-inch. The main steam pipe from the boiler will be 3 1-2 inch and the main return pipe to the boiler 2 1-2-inch. Let the point where the steam pipes enter the greenhouse be the highest and all the pipes grade downward back to the boiler. The return pipes may be placed in the walks if desired, but keep them as far from the foliage as possible.

New York. Henry W. Gibbons.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

Death of W. J. Mandeville.

Wilbur J. Mandeville, the well-known seedsman, senior member of the firm of Mandeville & King, died July 14, aged 50 years.

He was born in Webster, February 9, 1852, was graduated from the De Graff Military Institute, and came to Rochester at an early age. He was first connected with the firm of S. Boardman & Son, nurserymen and seedsmen. In 1875 he began business for himself in a small way and gradually built up the immense business of which he was the head at the time of his death.

In 1879 Mr. Mandeville became associated with Herbert S. King under the firm name of Mandeville & King, and on the death of Mr. King in 1890 he formed a partnership with Fred B. King under the same firm name. This partnership continued until a month or so ago, when the business was incorporated under the name of the Mandeville & King Company.

Mr. Mandeville was the president of the Mandeville & King Company, recently incorporated with a capital of $250,000; he was also vice president of the Cleveland Seed Company, and a director in the James Vick's Sons Company. All three companies are more or less allied and Mr. Mandeville was the controlling spirit in each concern.

Mr. Mandeville was a member of the Chamber of Commerce. He was a public-spirited citizen and a generous contributor to philanthropic enterprises. He was a vestryman at St. Luke's church at the time of his death. He was married in 1876 to Harriet King, a sister of his first partner, Herbert King. Besides his widow, three children, Edna, Lois and Arthur Mandeville, survive him.

CHICAGO TO ASHEVILLE.

The Chicago Florists' Club has arranged with the Big Four and Southern railways for the trip to the convention of the S. A. F. at Asheville, N. C., Aug. 19 to 22.

The party will travel from Chicago by special cars on the Big Four road (C. C. C. & St. L. Ry.), leaving at 8:30 p. m., Sunday, Aug. 17, reaching Cincinnati early Monday morning. The morning will be spent in the Ohio city and at 2 p. m. the party will take a special train on the Queen & Crescent and Southern railways, reaching Asheville at 7 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Sleeping car reservations made in advance. Send in your names, stating space wanted and number of people in your party. This is quite necessary, that all may have proper accommodations. Address E. F. Winterson, 45 Wabash avenue, Chicago.

Norwich, Conn.—Stephen Crane, the well-known nurseryman, died suddenly of heart disease, July 14, aged 74 years. He had resided in this city for forty years. He is survived by a widow, two daughters and a son.

In June several thousand bulbs of Lilium longiflorum from South Africa were sold in the auction rooms of London. It is said that the bulbs were of very good quality and it is predicted that in a few years South Africa will supply the bulbs now imported from Japan.

The Market.

Business is much the same as in last week's report, but, in spite of the fact that we are in the midst of the summer dullness, and everything seems awfully quiet, there is more activity than is usual in the market at this time of year. Although prices are away down, quite a lot of stock is disposed of and the aggregate sales are not so bad.

Carnations are very scarce at present. You scarcely can find a white one that could be called fair, but to help matters out some, roses are in much better supply, there being quite a quantity of white ones also, and these can be substituted for white carnations in almost all cases. Prices are the same as quoted last week.

Some fine gladioli are coming in and sell well. If the growers would grow more of one variety the wholesaler could dispose of more of this kind of stock, as then he could make a show of one color instead of the many colors, and only one or two of a kind, as now. It would pay to discard the poorer varieties, keeping only three or four of the best, and then grow them in quantity.

Meeting of the Florists' Society.

The special meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society was held on Tuesday last. The principal business before the society was the formation of a schedule for the flower and plant shows to be given by the society in its club rooms during the winter months.

It was decided to give three exhibitions. The first on the second Saturday of November, to be devoted to chrysanthemums, cut blooms and plants. There will be a first, second and third prize in each class, and all prizes will be of sufficient value to well repay the grower for his trouble.

The second show will be the second Saturday in December, and will be devoted to carnations. Prizes will be awarded same as in the 'mum show.

The third and last show will be in January, on the second Saturday, and will be the rose exhibition. At this show there will also be a special prize for violets.

It was decided that the next meeting of the society will be a "social session," to which all florists, whether they are members of the society or not, are invited, and the ladies, too, were given a special invitation to be present. Refreshments will be served.

The object of this meeting is to arouse interest in the society among those who are not members. It is the duty of every broad-minded florist to help along the florists' societies in every manner in which he is able, and the very least he can do is to be a member. Perhaps he will derive no direct benefit, but the fact that he is benefited thereby indirectly is indisputable.

Final arrangements for the trip to Asheville will be made at the next meeting of the society. At present it looks as if there will not be many from this city. But I believe that when the crowd begins to arrive that many will hastily make up their minds and go with the party.

J. T. Herdigen of Aurora, Ind., has been quite sick, but is improving at present.

CINCINNATI TO ASHEVILLE.

Notice to florists attending the S. A. F. O. H. convention at Asheville, en route via Cincinnati: Diagrams of Pullman sleepers will be at the office of E. G. Gillett ten days before time of starting, where he will be pleased to make reservations for anyone desiring same. Arriving at Cincinnati, go to the Queen & Crescent office, corner Fourth and Race streets, where you can then get berths that were saved for you. Price of sleeper is $3 each way.

The fare from Cincinnati to Asheville is $12.36, or one fare for the round trip.

The Chicago delegation will arrive in Cincinnati on the morning of Aug. 18, and a special train made up here by the Q. & C. R. R. will leave at 2 p. m., taking supper at Sommerset, Ky., arriving at Asheville at about 8 a. m.

Mr. Gillett would like every florist tributary to Cincinnati to notify him as soon as possible if he will go, and how many there will be in his party. In this way it will give him more time to make necessary arrangements for the comfort of all.

FLOWERS AT FUNERALS.

A subscriber in Amsterdam, N. Y., sends us the clippings reprinted below and says: "The clippings are from a recent issue of our morning paper, in the columns of which we are liberal advertisers. It is also worthy of note that the editor of this particular sheet is a frequent purchaser of floral arrangements. Evidently he feels the expense to be obligatory, and one that he would prefer to shun. But fortunately the largest percentage of demand for funeral flowers is from people of a superior order to that this party shows himself to belong to by his utterance in his editorial and (presumably) the follow up letter."

Following are the paragraphs referred to:

"Friends will kindly omit flowers." This request is printed in a funeral notice in another column. We do not desire to aim a shaft at the local florists, but we must insist that the craze of covering caskets with flowers, often by people who cannot afford it, has reached an alarming stage, and we are glad to find a family who puts up a barrier against the practice.

Mr. Editor:—I have noticed in the city press that a very sensible family desired that there should be no flowers at the funeral of the head of the family. This custom of filling houses of mourning with flowers has grown into an abuse—has become a sentimental practice which should be ignored in all good society. Flowers add nothing in ameliorating the pang of sorrow among the bereaved and in too many cases do not express any specially heartfelt regard to the memory of the dead and in as many cases cannot be afforded by the persons making these profuse and needless, if not senseless offerings.

IN Vol. XVI., No. 4, of the Journal of the Columbus (Ohio) Horticultural Society, Professor F. M. Webster reports the advent of the imported willow and poplar curculio west of the Allegheny mountains, it having been found by one of his assistants near Ashtabula, O. He gives a complete description of the pest, together with its history. It first appeared in America in 1882 in New Jersey. It promises to be a difficult enemy to combat.

SHAWNEE, O.—Robt. Jones reports that trade has been brisk until the past week. He also says the Review is all right.

ST. PAUL.

The feature of the trade the past week has been the scarcity of white flowers. Carnations are becoming more scarce daily. Kaiserin roses are quite plentiful, but the unusual demand for funeral flowers has quite depleted the supply. City trade has been fairly good. Country business has been very good, indeed. Sweet peas are becoming plentiful and with the general paucity of other flowers sell quite readily. Asters of good quality are now coming in. Haugen & Swanson are bringing in a large number of extra fine blooms.

Tuesday, July 21st, is the day set for the Twin City Florists' picnic, Spring Park, on Lake Minnetonka, is the place and as a most complete program of sports has been arranged an enjoyable time is assured to all who attend. The committee in charge are O. J. Olson, of St. Paul, and Otto Will and C. F. Rice, of Minneapolis.

Gus Colberg, the genial head-salesman for L. L. May & Co.'s retail store, is enjoying a well-earned vacation.

PIPING.

How many 2-inch pipes will be needed in a house 105x24 and 12 ft. to ridge? House runs east and west and is exposed to the north wind, as the ground is very high and there is nothing on the north side of the house to break the wind. I intend to heat with hot water. The middle benches will be used for carnations and the others for miscellaneous plants. House to average 60 degrees in zero weather.

J. A. B.

Answering the inquiry of J. A. B., if the house has glass on the roof and gable ends only, he will require not less than fifteen lines of 2-inch wrought iron pipes to maintain a night temperature of from 55 to 60 degrees on coldest nights. If, however, the house has also glass in the side wall, he will require not less than seventeen lines of 2-inch wrought iron pipes.

A COPY of the proceedings of the first annual meeting of the Iowa Park and Forestry Association, held at Des Moines, December 10 and 11, 1901, has reached us. It contains many interesting essays and discussions on same, and is freely illustrated. The association is evidently doing good work. L. H. Pammel, Ames, Ia., is secretary.

A heavy hailstorm passed over this city about 3 a. m. July 17 and broke a large amount of glass, the florists naturally suffering the most.

The Schluraff Floral Co. had over 1,500 lights broken and a loss of nearly $500.

S. Alfred Baur had about 700 lights broken and a loss of $100.

Clark & Robb's damage was $100; that of E. C. Hill was $75; John Trost lost about $200; Leonard A. Spoden about the same; John M. Hoeppner and H. Tong lost about $100 each; F. H. Hermann's damage will run over $200.

Ernest Neuberger's houses suffered most severely of any, nearly every light being broken, and the loss estimated at nearly $500.

The only greenhouse that escaped damage were those of John Laver, the hail there being small.

Many of the hailstones were very large and were rough, in fact more like broken chunks of ice than hail. Wherever these large stones fell they went through glass as though it were paper.

TOLEDO, O.

Krueger Bros., who are over on the East Side, have just finished two houses, each 24x100 feet.

E. A. Kuhnke, on Holland street, is hustling along a new house, 32x100 feet, and is also putting in a new steam boiler.

Out on the West Side, George Beyer is rushing, as fast as the rainy weather will permit, the work on four houses, each 375 feet long. They are the Dietsch patent construction and a 70 H. P. steam boiler and a 90-foot smoke stack will take care of the heating. All the walls are of concrete, and when finished this will be the best built range in the neighborhood.

At Auburndale, Wohler Bros. are about to put in a new 50 H. P. steam boiler.

Charles Moebins, in West Toledo, is busy with a house, 36x150 feet, for vegetables.

PITTSBURG.

Mr. H. B. Beatty, treasurer of the Society of American Florists, who has of late years been interested in the development of gas and oil companies in and near this city, has effected an organization in which nine large companies are merged, with a total capital issue of $7,180,000, and he has been elected president and manager of the amalgamated companies. This makes him a most powerful factor in the field. The several companies with which he has been connected have all prospered exceedingly under his management and the daily papers of the city pay tribute to his great skill as an organizer and in turning properties of doubtful value into dividend payers.

Mr. Beatty, though of late devoting so much time and attention to these large interests, still holds his connection with the Oakwood Rose Gardens at Oil City.

ANNOUNCEMENT!

REALIZING the large and growing demand for high grade glass structures for horticultural purposes, the undersigned have organized a stock company, to design, manufacture and construct such buildings and to supply the materials which enter into their construction. We have secured property on West Side Avenue, Jersey City, N. J., near the West Side Avenue Station of the Newark branch of the Central R. R. of N. J., which is admirably suited for manufacturing purposes. Our factories are new and equipped with machinery of the most approved type. We are in a position to manufacture and build a large amount of work of a high grade, quickly, thoroughly and economically. Mr. Lincoln Pierson has been Secretary of the Lord & Burnham Co. for the past twelve years, having had charge of the Architectural and Sales department of that company. Mr. William Sefton has been Superintendent of Hitchings & Co. for the past six years, having had charge of their Manufacturing and Construction department. During this period both have had a large and varied experience, having been responsible for the designing and construction of many of the largest and most notable glass structures in this country, including both park, private and commercial work. We have purchased the Paul M. Pierson patents, and have other patents pending which will enable us to erect a very much better appearing and more durable structure than any of the existing types of houses now on the market. While we can build a better house than any of the old companies, we can also build any of the existing types equally as well and as cheaply. To all contemplating the erection of such buildings, we beg to be allowed to submit for consideration, plans, specifications and estimates of cost for their complete erection or for any of the materials needed therein. Our best services are at your command.

The FLORISTS' MANUAL
by
WILLIAM SCOTT

Is a book of 224 pages, and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopædia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half tone engravings. It is and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

A Complete REFERENCE BOOK for Commercial Florists

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

Plants.

This is the time of the year when growers must give much time and thought to the preparation of stock for next season's trade. Variety is a necessity of course but there are several degrees of variety. The grower with either a small or large area of glass cannot afford to devote much, if any, of his bench room to unprofitable stock, particularly cripples and unattractive pets. The man with a local trade can often use up lots of plants the city buyer would refuse, but there is more fame and profit in doing a few things well than in doing many poorly.

Some growers argue that buyers like to go where all their wants can be supplied, which is quite true, but buyers will and must go where they can get the best, and they are not going to buy inferior plants because it is more convenient. The New York florists who cater to the very wealthy are compelled to get the best despite trouble or price, and they must needs go to Philadelphia for some of their stock. And these are not rare plants, but just ordinary varieties grown to exceptional quality. It is quality that counts and the grower who makes his place famous for any one thing well done has a most valuable asset. In these days one needs to go first where quality is and it is not so plentiful as many imagine.

It is to be always remembered that the plant trade in these United States is merely in its infancy. There will always be a great and continually increasing demand for well grown plants that will stand the ordinary amateur's method of keeping. And it must further be considered that the greater use of electricity as a substitute for gas permits greater longevity in the old varieties while encouraging the use of the tender plants it is impossible to keep in houses where gas is used.

By September or October there will be inquiry as to who has the best plants, even if the season is very late, and it is becoming later every year because the wealthy American is becoming fonder of country life. The store florist must needs have a showing of plants in his store, for it is the old story of the "early bird." And here is the kind of stock he needs at the season's start: Good Boston ferns in 6-inch pots, 8 and 10-inch pans and one or two in larger pots. Pans are preferable and the ferns grow best in them. Branching Ficus elastica. Pandanus Veitchii. Aspidistra (green and variegated.) Dracæna Lindenii or Massangeana and a few D. terminalis. Kentias Belmoreana and Forsteriana. Areca lutescens, Latania borbonica and a few Livistona rotundifolia. That is all he needs to start with, and he can even dispense with some of the above. As the season advances there is a call for more variety and larger sizes.

In ferns the great trouble is that most growers imagine that Pteris serrulata is all that is required to fill a fern dish. It requires from 12 to 18 ferns to fill the ordinary dish and variety is essential.

Of course there is an endless variety of ferns and small plants suitable for fern dishes, but they are not all profitable to grow, and yet a grower must not consider the individual cost or value of a plant, for often plants must be valued in the light of a necessary adjunct. A half-dozen of a quick-growing or less expensive kind can be used in the same dish, but it is necessary to have one or two of the slow-growing sorts there to add variety, and variety in this case is value. It is, of course, very desirable, but not absolutely necessary, to have an extended list.

These which are most wanted for center plants are Pandanus Veitchi and P. utilis, small kentias, Cocos Weddeliana, Dracæna gracilis and Cyperus alternifolius. Then, in ferns, Aspidium tensemense, Cyrtomium falcatum, any variety of small adiantum, though A. capillus-veneris or A. rhodophyllum types are best, Onychium japonicum, Pteris cretica albo-lineata and Pteris serrulata and cristata, with Selaginella Emiliana, S. densa and the most beautiful of all, S. Vogelii. Renica carnea variegata is excellent, and Carex japonica variegata is almost indispensable.

With the above list you can please the most critical at all times. Of course there is attractiveness in extended variety, and the additions may consist of Pteris ensiformis, P. Victoriæ, P. densa, Adiantum cuneatum, A. Bellum, A. gracillimum, A. Farleyense, A. Cunninghamii, in fact most of the adiantums, but they are mainly useful for cutting or in large sizes. Cuneatum and Farleyense continue to be the most popular kinds. Then there are Davallia hispida, D. pallida, Gymnogramme chrysophylla, Lastrea chrysolora, Doryopteris var., Aspidium hirtipes, Nephrodium Shepherdii, Pellea viridis, P. falcata, Doodia media, D. candata and small, graceful, highly colored crotons and marantas.

The above are all good in their places, which may range from the smallest dish to the largest vase or basket for table decoration. Then, of course, there will always be a steady demand for large specimen Pteris tremula, the Boston fern, Microlepia hirta cristata, Cibotium Scheidei, and we are pleased to see the old favorite Nephrolepis davallioides furcans again to the front, adorning many of the New York store windows this summer. It keeps better than the Boston fern and people have seen so much of the latter that a little change for variety's sake is welcome. We would like to see more of this type of fern grown in hanging baskets. Those who have conservatories to fill or have extensive decorations to do the coming winter could do worse than have some nephrolepis grown specially this way for them. The same is applicable to Asparagus Sprengeri, and we forgot to say that small plants of Asparagus tenuissimus are excellent for fern dishes. They keep a long time and that variety is the best of all for fine work. A. plumosus is the best for decorative purposes, but it is too dull in color to put with the choicest blooms.

In addition to the above and the usual list of palms there are such plants as Araucaria excelsa, Cycas revolnta, a few bright or extra good dracænas, such as D. fragrans, which are good for filling up, D. Bausei, D. Rothiana, and above all D. terminalis. Many of the plants will need to be made up into groups this year, because that style is in growing demand. Don't wait till late to get your plants arranged. Start now. And the best help to all plant life is cleanliness. In another note we will discuss flowering and berried plants. IVERA.

ASTERS.

The engravings of asters in this issue are a continuation of the series that appeared last week. We feel sure these will be found equally interesting. The descriptive matter printed last week applies to these pictures also.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Propagating.

There is very little propagating to do just now. There is no need of it, and conditions are most unfavorable. A few exceptions are noted. Flats of alternantheras, particularly of the best one, paronychioides major, can now be rooted. They will be strong little plants if put in the flats at once, and can remain out of doors for almost a month after being rooted. They will then be in excellent order to pass through the dark days in any place that is not too cold if they are kept quite dry.

Begonias.

Any flowering begonias that you are short of can be increased now. All begonias, except perhaps the tuberous section, delight in hot weather and root freely in sand now without any bottom heat. I am afraid to say much about that pretty plant, Gloire de Lorraine, because we have not grown it well this summer. I did not boss the job, and perhaps if I had things would be no better. If they once start to grow it is easy work, but they too often hang fire and remain rusty, stunted things. If growing freely they can be propagated from small shoots for another month and make nice little plants. It is not alone as a single plant that these are sold; we want them in various sizes. Many trays and center pieces are made entirely of this plant, and for that you want small as well as good-sized plants.

A little shade is needed during the bright, hot days, and plenty of ventilation, or the growth will be weak and soft. Here is where the correct system of shading would be of such inestimable value. Oh! for the man that will invent a shade that we can apply to plants like begonias and cyclamen and hundreds of others from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. and dispense with it during the other hours and entirely on rainy and dull days. Why, it would be beneficial even to our roses and carnations to temper the sun's rays for a few hours in the scorching days of July and August. There are several ways of doing this in a small way: Laths nailed on a frame an inch apart, or cheese cloth tacked on a frame and made a convenient size to lift off and on, will do for small batches in a very small house or frame, but what the commercial florist wants is something that can be used in large houses and that is not too expensive. A fortune awaits the man who invents some method to this end.

Chrysanthemums.

We usually put in a good batch of chrysanthemum cuttings early in August of those varieties that make good pans. They root well enough during any week of summer if kept well shaded the first two weeks and constantly saturated. Once allowed to get dry in the sand will hurt them seriously. It is only a very limited number of varieties that are suitable for this purpose—dwarf healthy but free growers. Ivory has yet no equal in white, and old Lincoln for yellow is not surpassed. It is not quite safe to take the rooted cuttings from the sand and put them in the 8, 9 or 10-inch pans, because one plant will be more vigorous than others, and you will have an uneven, ragged-looking pan. We prefer to pot them for a week or two and as soon as they start to grow freely select plants of equal strength for each pan.

Poinsettias.

We keep propagating the poinsettia up to the middle of August. They root freely any month of the summer. Don't let them wilt in the sand. The single plant of poinsettia is no longer favored; in fact our customers don't want them, and for this they can't be blamed, having once seen an 8, 9 or 10-inch pan well grown and flowered. To keep the plants dwarf with good green foliage and bracts of six or seven inches across are what you are looking for. Cuttings put in even at the end of August will make the ideal plants for the purpose. The remark I made about selecting plants of equal strength of chrysanthemums is truer still with the poinsettia. After being potted two weeks you can then sort them pretty well. Remember, although these tropical plants want shade while in the sand and for a few days after being potted, they want nothing but the brightest and lightest position after that. Shade of any kind after that would be ruin to them, for they are nothing if not dwarf and stout.

Ferns.

Are you well supplied with a good stock of young ferns for your jardiniere trade this winter? The business of raising the young seedling ferns is a specialty with a good many firms and now is the time to buy a good stock. Quite small plants, even from the flats, will make good plants in 2½-inch pots by October, and that is when you begin to use them. If you depend on buying a few hundred at a time during winter you will pay more for them and get poorer stock. A good, ordinary loam, even if it is a little stiff, with a fifth or sixth of rotted manure, will grow any of our commercial ferns; moderate shade and plenty of top ventilation is what will prepare these little plants for future use. Get a good supply at once.

Violets.

There was in these columns some months ago a most able series of articles written on violet culture. It was most complete, and the author knew what he was talking about. Many of us know "about it," but do we follow it up? Sometimes there is an excuse for neglect, or seems to be. But really I suppose there is no excuse. If all hands are building, then more hands should be got for gardening.

Now, about this time the small, black, dirty aphis will appear on the violets whether you have them planted in the beds or still in pots or in the field. There is more failure of violets from the work of this brute than all other causes, and if they are allowed to have possession of the plants up to November, you may about as well throw them out. The plants are now small, and if given a good dusting with tobacco every week you will assuredly keep the aphis away. A very sensible and successful grower told me in conversation recently that he did not like to apply the dust when the leaves were wet. Let the foliage get dry after watering, then dust them and let it remain till the next watering. Last November by two applications of the hydrocyanic acid gas, half the regular strength, and by keeping the ventilators closed all night, I killed the black wretches dead: but tobacco dust will do first-rate this time of the year and is much more easily applied. Don't trust to the rubbish you get from your local cigar maker, but get the genuine article from the manufacturer in New York.

CARNATION NOTES.

Right now while you are planting your carnation houses you have a great many things to think about, such as the temperature each variety wants, how tall it will grow, etc. But there is another thing you should take into consideration and that is this: I never knew a grower yet who did not run short of room during the spring months when his young stock needs potting just before planting out can be done, and those who grow a line of bedding plants find themselves even more cramped as the potting up and spreading out goes on.

Now, there are varieties that you must have during mid-winter but which you can do without after about April 1st and in fact some of them are almost worthless after May 1st, while there are other varieties that with proper care will remain in fine condition right up to the middle of July. These last mentioned varieties should be planted where they will be as cool as possible when warm weather sets in, for instance on the north side of a house or in the house that has the best ventilation, in fact, as I said before, the most favorable place you have for carnation growing during hot weather.

The others will do well on any bench that has enough head room, and those you can spare first should be planted on the benches that are best suited for whatever you wish to put in their place next spring. You should know by this time just about what you are going to grow in your houses next season and you can arrange for it in time if you give it your attention early enough. If you intend growing a lot of plants just for cuttings, plant them on a south side bench where they will be near the glass and get plenty of light, and next spring when you want room for your young stock that will be the best place you can find.

We still sometimes hear growers advocating the plan of planting a few plants of each variety just to propagate from instead of taking the cuttings from the blooming stock. We could never see where any benefit could be derived but we do think a great deal of harm could be derived from it. The idea is to keep them cool and growing along slowly and thereby securing a well matured sturdy cutting. That is all right, but how many of you will keep them cool and growing slowly when by giving them a few more degrees of heat you can get double as many cuttings which will apparently be just as good and I don't know but what they are if they are not kept warmer than the blooming stock.

I could never understand where you can get a better plant to propagate from than a plant that is in good growing condition and producing a high quality of blooms. In using the cuttings from your blooming stock you are likely to have plenty to select from, while in the other case you will feel that you must take every cutting that is of fair quality because the number is necessarily limited. In taking them from the blooming plants you also take your cuttings from the plants that show the best health and blooming qualities.

If you wish to follow the above mentioned method of planting some plants just for propagating it would be advisable to go over your carnation patch and mark a number of plants that show extra good vitality and health so you will not plant what is left after the blooming benches are filled.

If you have not yet begun to plant let me remind you again that all your carnations should be housed by Aug. 20 at the latest. A. F. J. Baur.

CARNATION TEMPERATURES.

Replying to L. A. G. the best temperatures for the varieties he names are as follows:

White Cloud	50 degrees
Flora Hill	55 degrees
Jubilee	52 degrees
G. H. Crane	52 degrees
Mrs. Joost	52 degrees
Mrs. Bradt	52 degrees
Wm. Scott	54 degrees
Mrs. Lawson	56 degrees
Daybreak	50 degrees
America	52 degrees
Prosperity	52 degrees
Marquis	50 degrees
E. Crocker	56 degrees

White Cloud, Scott and Crocker, on account of their length, should have center benches, while Mrs. Lawson and Daybreak should have a north bench where the sun does not strike them with full force in the spring. The other varieties will do equally well on center or side benches provided they have plenty of head room. There should be at least two feet of space between the soil and the glass where they are the closest, and three feet is not too much when the plants make a vigorous growth toward spring. You must always bear in mind that the bloom is at the top of the stem and is the first to be injured when there is not sufficient head room, so give them room at the top.

A. F. J. Baur.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

Those houses which were planted early (March or April) should now be giving a good cut. To improve the quality and keep them up to size during this exhaustive weather, a light mulch three-quarters of an inch thick should be applied. A sprinkling of bone meal added will give firmer stem and better quality of foliage and bloom. This should be renewed every three or four weeks as by reason of the heavy waterings needed at this season it soon becomes exhausted. After the mulch has been on for a couple of weeks an application of weak manure water once a week will strengthen them wonderfully. This will also apply to Meteors which are being carried over for a second season.

It is now time to look to those benches of Brides, Bridesmaids, etc., which are intended to do work a second season. If a cut from them is not particularly needed at present, they should be allowed to dry off gradually, taking care not to allow them to approach wilting, and using the syringe often enough to keep down spider. After giving them a partial rest for three weeks, all the small blind wood should be carefully cut out and the longer stems trimmed back. By bending them down and tying them in that position they will break readily from the base and give a good crop of wood for fall blooming. Resume watering gradually, increasing the quantity as the plants develop more foliage. Keep the house rather close and moist for the first week till the eyes show signs of breaking, when more air can be given gradually as the fresh leaves begin to expand. Ribes.

DISEASED ROSES.

We send samples of diseased rose leaves. Please tell us what it is and prescribe a cure. Have no mildew and we think we have given the plants the best of care. Not all the leaves are affected. J. A. S.

This is one of those innumerable and minute fungi which live and thrive in a moist and stagnant atmosphere, particularly where the drainage is deficient. While clogging the pores, it does not attack the leaf tissue. J. A. S. need apprehend no real trouble from this.

Run the benches dry for some time, give plenty of ventilation and syringe early enough in the afternoon to give the foliage time to thoroughly dry before sundown. A dusting of flowers of sulphur once a week, applied on bright days, will also be of benefit. If the plants are otherwise healthy they will soon outgrow this trouble. RIBES.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

The program for the convention to be held at Asheville, N. C., Aug. 19 to 22, has been issued. The meetings and exhibition will be held in the Asheville Auditorium, the exhibits occupying the stage and the right and left wings of the main hall.

The opening session at 3 p. m. Tuesday, will be devoted to an address of welcome by Mr. A. S. Barnard on behalf of the city of Asheville and the Board of Trade, the annual address of the President and reports of Secretary, Treasurer, State Vice Presidents, committees and other officials of the society. The judges will examine and prepare their reports upon the trade exhibits on Tuesday afternoon. The President's reception will be held in the parlor of the Battery Park Hotel on Tuesday evening.

On Wednesday morning following the reports of the judges there will be discussions upon the following subjects: "The Needs of the Commercial Florist in the North," opened by F. R. Mathison, Waltham, Mass.; "Remarks on the Bulb Situation," by Wm. R. Smith, Botanic Garden, Washington, D. C.; "Possibilities in Bulb Culture in the South," opened by Prof. W. F. Massey, Raleigh, N. C. The location of the next place of meeting and the nomination of officers for next year will take place at this session.

The bowling contest will take place Wednesday afternoon. Entries should be made with Robert Halliday, 11 E. Baltimore st., Baltimore, Md.

Wednesday evening will be devoted to a lecture with stereopticon views, by J. K. M. L. Farquhar, of Boston, illustrating the methods followed by foreign growers and dealers in the cultivation and shipment of bulbs for the American trade.

The subject for discussion on Thursday morning will be "Marketing Cut Flowers." The wholesale phase of the subject will be treated by Edgar Sanders, Chicago, and the retail division by Geo. W. Wienhoeber, Chicago.

The election of officers will follow, and action on the proposed changes in the constitution and by-laws.

On Thursday afternoon the meetings of the Hail Association, Chrysanthemum Society of America and the American Carnation Society will be held. The shooting contest will also take place Thursday afternoon.

Thursday evening addresses will be made on The Proposed Appalachian Forest Reserve, by Dr. C. P. Ambler, Asheville, and The Humorous Side of the Florists' Business, by J. D. Carmody, Evansville, Ind.

On Friday morning the visitors will be entertained with a ride to Overlook Mountain, on invitation of the Idlewild Floral Co., of Asheville, and in the afternoon Biltmore, the famed estate of Mr. George W. Vanderbilt, will be open by special invitation to the society. The drive through the extensive estate will be provided by the Asheville Board of Trade.

Displays for the trade exhibit should be shipped in care of Ernest Kirstein, Asheville, N. C., charges prepaid.

The following hotels are recommended as convenient and desirable at rates as quoted, American plan:

Battery Park, $3.00 to $4.00 per day.
Swannanoa, $2.50 to $3.00 per day.
Berkeley, $2.00 to $3.00 per day.
The Manor, $2.00 to $3.00 per day.
Glen Rock, $2.00 per day.
The Oaks, $1.40 per day.

There are a number of smaller hotels at $1.00 per day and upwards.

Anyone who has not received a copy of the program may obtain one by addressing Wm. J. Stewart, Secretary, 79 Milk st., Boston, Mass.

The secretary has issued the following announcement:

It is most desirable that members should express their preference as to the selection of the local vice-presidents to represent their respective States for the coming year. It is the duty of each State vice-president (or in his absence some one who represents him) to call together the members present from his State at the convention for the purpose of electing a vice-president. If this is not attended to it devolves upon the president to make the appointment according to his best judgment and if such appointment should be not entirely satisfactory the responsibility rests solely with those who failed to attend to the duty at the proper time.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business conditions remain about the same, with the demand still fair for first-class stock. Funeral work has been quite plentiful and some of the dealers report some large orders for big designs. This kind of work is all that is looked for at this time of the year. In other kinds of work the florist business is at a standstill. The bulk of the stock that comes in now is sweet peas, asters, gladioli and a big lot of second quality roses.

The prices on this stuff are low and the man with a big job can make some money, as stock can be bought very low in big lots. Roses are quoted from $1 to $4, with Kaiserins in the lead at $4. Brides and Maids are very poor at $2. Reds and Perles are still scarce. Carnations are very poor with a slow demand, except whites. $1 to $1.50 is the price.

Asters are improving in quality and some very fine ones are seen every day at the wholesale market, but there are more for which $1 per 100 is hard to get. The largest call is for white and purple.

Peas are very plentiful and are of good color but short-stemmed; 20 cents per 100 is all they bring.

Gladioli are a great glut and can hardly be disposed of at any price. Some very fair smilax can be had at 15 cents per string.

Florists' Picnic.

On last Thursday, the 24th, the St. Louis florists enjoyed the best outing ever held by the club. Most of the craft left early in the morning for the grounds, but quite a few came in the afternoon, making in all about 100 florists and their friends. The band was one of the features of the day and the music, the singing and the dancing were enjoyed by all.

The fun started at 2 p. m. with a game of ball between Tesson's team and a team of florists. Rain interfered after the second inning, with the score standing: Tesson, 11; Florists, 0. Charlie Kuehn and Frank Ellis lost the game after two men were out. Both ran into a corn field after a fly ball and lost it. After this the Tessons piled up eleven runs. Dr. A. S. Halstedt was the umpire. After the refreshing rain had stopped, the little girls' race was run. This was won by Miss Ammann, and Miss Gutzman got second prize. The married ladies' race was won by Mrs. J. W. Dunford, and Mrs. F. M. Ellis came in second. The young boys' race was won by Mr. Carrick's boy, and young Cuendt came in second. In the 100-yard dash for young men Mr. W. Hurt won first prize and Oscar Kuehn, second. A race was made up of growers, in which Fred Ammann won first prize and E. W. Guy came in second.

After this the event of the afternoon was pulled off—the tug of war, captained by Fred Ammann and J. W. Dunford. After a hard pull which lasted fifteen minutes, Ammann's team won the prize of fifty very fine cigars, which the winners very generously divided with the losers.

After supper the ladies' bowling contest began. There were twenty entries. Owing to the large number only seven frames were rolled and the following scores were made:

Mrs. Klaus	81	Mrs. Adels	30
Mrs. F. C. Weber	65	Mrs. Beneke	29
Miss Dora Weber	54	Mrs. Guy	28
Mrs. Pilcher	50	Mrs Schuette	27
Mrs. Paules	49	Mrs. Kuehn	26
Mrs. Ellis	45	Mrs. Outly	25
Miss L. Meinhardt	41	Miss Mohr	24
Miss Gusosky	37	Miss Bokern	21
Miss M. Meinhardt	31	Mrs. Steidle	21

Mrs. Klaus won first prize and Mrs. F. C. Weber, second prize.

In the gentleman's bowling contest there were fifteen entries. E. W. Guy won first prize with 166, and J. J. Beneke second with 126. Only seven frames were rolled. The other scores were:

F. C. Weber	117	F. Weber, Jr.	75
C. Britshoe	117	Fillmore	75
Kuehn	102	Herman Weber	70
Adels	102	Oscar Kuehn	62
Frow	94	Pilcher	57
Kindler	79

This ended the programme of sports and the rest of the evening the younger folks spent in dancing and boating. At 10 o'clock everybody was ready for the trip home.

Great credit must be given the trustees, Messrs. Mohr, Ammann and Adels, for the very able manner in which they handled the outing. This was the expression of all the members and their friends, and all say it was the best picnic yet given by the club.

Echoes of the Picnic.

R. F. Tesson and R. J. Mohr were known as the long and short of it.

George Windler and Walter Sanders were always surrounded by young ladies and never missed a dance.

C. C. Sanders and Theo. Miller were looked for but never came.

Fred Ammann brought his whole family from Edwardsville and went back with two prizes. Fred says he was born lucky.

Fred Meinhardt had his hands full taking care of his mother, wife and three sisters.

Alderman Halstedt and wife, of Belleville, looked happy watching the young folks enjoying themselves.

Frank Fillmore and his wife, who never miss an outing given by the club, came with a number of friends.

A Group at the picnic of the St. Louis Florists' Club.

Frank Ellis and Charlie Kuehn locked up and brought out their whole families and had a good time.

J. W. Dunford (our next president) came all the way from Central with his family. His next door neighbor, John Steidle, with his family, was also seen enjoying himself.

E. W. Guy, Adolph Fehr, Gus Grossart and Henry Emundt, of Belleville, were on hand, accompanied by their families. They will never miss another picnic by the club, so they say.

Fred Weber and his family came early and had a good time. Miss Dora Weber and Charlie Britshoe came as their guests. Fred, Jr., and Herman Weber came in time to enjoy a pleasant evening.

Rudolph Mohr had his mother and sister come all the way from Omaha to attend the picnic.

Will Adels brought three ladies, and between attending to his duty as trustee and pleasing the ladies, had his hands full.

Otto Koenig came alone and looked lost, but says he had a good time with old acquaintances.

Max Herzog, Dick Frow, Frank Gutzman and Fred Gobel were talking over old times. They were all accompanied by their wives.

Mr. Pilcher and his wife were the only ones from Kirkwood. They enjoyed the sports very much.

Oscar Kuehn and Miss Bokern were out for an afternoon's fun and they had it.

World's Fair Notes.

The World's Fair directors report that the Horticultural Palace will be 1,000 feet long and 5,000 feet wide. The building will be erected on the wooded hill to the south of the Agricultural Palace. The whole hillside where it slopes down to the Agricultural Palace will be treated in the highest form of landscape art. South of the Horticultural Palace and immediately adjoining has been reserved for an extensive outside horticultural display.

The H. G. Berning baseball team, made up of employes and outside florists, will play a game with the R. F. Tesson ball team Sunday afternoon on the latter's grounds. There is considerable betting on the result, and each team is training hard for the battle. The result will be given later.

Bowling.

At the bowling club only eight men were on hand when the bowling started and two teams were made up of four on a side. Weber and Ellison were captains, Ellison's side winning two games out of the three played. Kuehn, being in excellent form, won the championship for July from Weber by 28 pins. The following is the score:

Ellison's Tm.	1st.	2nd.	3rd.	Total.	Ave.
Kuehn	207	205	159	571	190 1-3
Sanders	176	177	135	488	162 2-3
Miller	149	162	183	494	164 2-3
Ellison	133	148	189	470	156 2-3
Totals	665	692	666	2023	168 7-12

Weber's Tm.	1st.	2nd.	3rd.	Total.	Ave.
Weber	169	177	153	490	163 1-3
Sturtz	183	164	182	529	176 1-3
Beneke	166	173	156	495	165
Meyer	162	171	165	498	166
Totals	731	685	656	2012	167 2-3

This ended the July series, with Kuehn as champion, with an average in twelve games of 176 4-12; Weber, 174; Beneke, 167 8-12; Sturtz, 167 2-12; Meyer, 163 6-12; Ellison, 160 8-12; Miller, 154.

Trade Conditions.

This chapter could be made as short as the famous one concerning the snakes of Ireland, except that its reliability might be more questioned, because there is some little floral traffic here. But we are handling all of it easily, but the October-like weather keeps everything so scarce that there is no waste of material. Kaiserins and new American Beauties are coming in more freely than last week, which keeps the rose question up to the mark; sweet peas and pinks just about hold their pace and asters are quite rapidly increasing, so that price upon the latter is melting a bit.

It is said, "No one knows what a day may bring forth," but almost any florist can make a broad guess as to what a very few days of summer sunshine will bring forth just now, especially in the matter of sweet peas and asters. But as yet there is hardly a sunny sign in this the strangest of July months.

News and Rumors.

There is the usual amount of summer repairs going on, more noticeable at Sutherland's than elsewhere, with the exception of Carbone's, already noted. W. E. Doyle is occupying his new store on Beacon street.

Naturally there is much anxious comment and inquiry concerning the coal situation. With ordinary success in growing there is none too much margin in growing the "smiles of nature" now, and when the heavy coal bill looks in a fair way to be doubled for the coming winter, it is small wonder many glass farmers look aghast.

D. Iliffe, the popular pipefitter to the Park street market, is rejuvenating Paul Richwagen's, R. Montgomery's and Sutermeister's heating apparatus and installing new boilers with his special fittings for Thomas Capers. It is an ill wind that blows nobody any good, and what is chaff to the florist is wheat to Piper Dan.

Fellows Bros., of Hyde Park, Mass., and Bristol, N. H., have dissolved partnership, L. H., of Hyde Park, continuing the business at that place and the brother building two large new houses at Saugus.

J. Newman & Sons are also quite heavily rebuilding at Winchester.

The Brimstone Corners seem to be right angles all right. They went out and did up the Natick Wabans again very deftly, 18 to 14.

This time blood was shed and one scalp lifted. Sam Beck was hit in the eye by a hot ball and knocked into a hospital a mile away, where at last accounts he was doing very nicely.

The generally accepted theory is that his nationality made him think he saw three balls coming and was too long deciding which one to catch! A high ball in the eye tastes worse than one in the mouth, but may not be more dangerous.

Death of President Burton's Son.

The sad death of President Burton's third son, John Burton, Jr., has cast a gloom over the entire florieultural world. John Burton, Jr., was canoeing on the Delaware river last week with his older brother, Alfred. The young men were going to join their family at the Delaware water gap, when near Lackawaxen the canoe was upset. Both brothers swam well, but the younger, who was 22 years old, was drowned. Mere words cannot express the feelings of deep sympathy which every member of our profession feels for Mr. and Mrs. Burton in their terrible loss.

The Market.

Beauties and Meteors are in active demand, but with a moderate supply coming in. Kaiserins and asters are very plentiful, the latter moving fairly. Carnations are, as a rule, rather poor. A few field-grown flowers are seen. Business generally is quiet.

For Asheville.

John Westcott, Robert Kift and G. C. Watson, forming the transportation committee of the Philadelphia Florists' Club, announce that this city's delegates to the national society's convention at Asheville will leave Broad street station on Monday, August 18, at 12:29 p. m., arriving in Asheville early the following morning.

Instructions to those who intend going: Notify G. C. Watson, 211 S. Juniper street, Philadelphia, how many sleeping car berths you will require, price $3 each. Purchase a ten-day excursion ticket for Washington before starting, price $6 each. An agent of the Southern Railroad will be on the train to arrange details of the trip from Washington to Asheville. The fare for this part of the trip will be $14.95 for each excursion ticket.

Marketing Cut Flowers.

The market scheme is meeting with considerable encouragement. A number of the leading retailers are for it. An informal meeting has been called to talk over the matter.

The Finest Place in America.

A cordial invitation to visit the Dreer place, at Riverton (aptly described as above), signed by the man who has made that place famous, is a pleasure indeed. You will not wonder that the invitation was promptly accepted, and two countrymen crossed the Delaware one bright July afternoon for an outing over in Jersey.

The first spot visited at the new scene was the site of the new range of glass soon to be erected. The houses, twelve in number, are to be Dietsch pattern, 150 feet long by 13 feet, 10 inches wide, even span, 10 feet high at the ridge and 6 feet, 6 inches high at the gutters, open clear through, virtually making one house, 150x166 feet, in twelve sections. These houses will be devoted entirely to azaleas this season. They will have neither tables nor beds. The plants are to be set right on the ground in blocks. This range will be a great convenience, as no space will have to be cleared in the other houses for the newly imported stock next fall. The old azalea houses are now being utilized for palms.

The next place visited was a tract of sixty-five acres of ground on the east side of the railroad entirely new to us. This tract contains a lot of low, swampy ground, part of which was drained last winter and planted with Japanese irises. The irises have thriven on this low land and present a fine appearance. On every side evidence is seen of the increasing popularity of hardy perennials. The quantity of hardy phlox grown will be enormously increased, reaching to something like 90,000, a startling number even in these days of large quantities.

A curiosity was a row of pæonies in flower at this time, more than six weeks after they are usually done blooming. The explanation is very interesting. The demand for pæonies comes chiefly after they have started into active growth. The young shoots are easily injured in shipping and the buyers are disappointed. Last fall a lot of pæonies were lifted and packed in dry sand in boxes, 100 in the box. These boxes were sent to a cold storage warehouse and kept there some seven months until needed in May. The results were excellent. It is some of these plants that we saw in bloom. The flowers the first season after lifting do not generally amount to much. A great bed of pæonies that had not been disturbed flowered at Decoration Day. The blooms went to half a dozen Eastern markets and sold well. It would not have been possible to time them better.

Hollyhocks are a source of pleasure instead of worry. Skill and brains have, it is believed, mastered the disease and plenty of stock seems assured.

Cannas are looking well. A great many are planted out. Some of the latest Crozy introductions are of special interest. They are on trial. Two plants warmly recommended to florists for summer cut flowers are Tritoma Pfitzeri, useful for decorative effects, and Stokesia cyana, a pretty blue flower. A large patch of English ivy was planted out. The space devoted to petunias, a specialty here, was a fine sight; every plant full of excellent blooms. An interesting fact mentioned is that the best petunia plants always come from the weakest seedlings. The commoner and single varieties make strong seedlings, while the choice varieties are the weaklings, sometimes overlooked or carelessly thrown away.

Azalea Bernhard Andreas alba, carried over plants, were making superb growth in this Belgian weather, planted out in pure peat in cheese cloth covered frames. A promising looking lot of Latania Borbonica was planted out in the same way, not, of course, in pure peat. They were from 3-inch pots and will be ready for 6-inch by fall.

In the houses the kentias, about half each of the two leading varieties, were in fine condition. The firm's collector of kentia seed on the Lord Howe Islands has advised them that the price of kentia seed will probably advance next season, as the Government intends controlling the exportation of these seeds. It is thought their policy will be to force higher prices by restricting the output.

It has been decided to postpone sending out Pandanus Sanderi from January next, as previously announced, until November, 1903, the idea being to work up a good stock so as to offer the plants at popular prices. The little 3-inch plant of this novelty brought over in January, 1901, is now in an 8-inch pot, measuring thirty-two inches in height, with a breadth of forty-eight inches. The stock is increasing fast and looks well.

Now the writer gives way to a better man, and asks you to fancy yourself wandering among the water lily ponds and snuffing the Victoria Regia with the genial Father Neptune himself. Wm. Trieker, while he tells of his aquatics.

The following water lilies were included in the unique collection in the Court of Cypresses, Pan-American Exposition, 1901, the grandest ever seen. While many of them are of French origin, none exceed the American varieties.

Nymphaea arethusa. One of the newest introductions, also one of the best of the hardy group. Flowers brilliant crimson. American origin.

N. Andreana. Flowers cup shaped, dull dark red with bright orange stamens; very attractive; medium size.

N. Aurora. As the name implies, color fiery yellow. On opening the flower is yellow, shaded red, changing to deep red; medium size.

N. Chrysantha. Somewhat similar in color to N. Aurora, but of different build and shape; also medium size.

N. Ellisiana. This is a very choice nymphaea, in high esteem in Europe and will be in America when sufficiently known; flowers bright purplish carmine.

N. gloriosa. A superb water lily and ranks with the best of the hybrid lilies, possessing every good quality; color, deep carmine rose.

N. lucida. A distinct and beautiful variety; rosy vermillion with darker center.

N. Marliacea rubra-punctata. This in the near future will become a standard variety; flowers, deep rosy purple, spotted or sanded carmine; free flowering.

N. James Brydon. This variety heads the list of American and French hybrids; distinct in color, of largest size, very floriferous, vigorous and in every way desirable; the only hybrid water lily awarded a silver medal; color, a rich rosy crimson; American origin.

N. Wm. Falconer. The largest and most brilliant dark hardy water lily in cultivation; American origin.

N. Wm. Doogue. A magnificent lily of chaste and delicate coloring, beautifully cup shaped, and of a pleasing shell pink in color; a symmetrical and distinct flower of great substance; American origin.

Bowling.

G. C. Watson defeated George Craig in rolling off the tie for sixth place on the Asheville team by 22 pins in three games. Pretty close! Mr. Craig will be first substitute. The regular team of seven was unexpectedly downed by the unsuccessful competitors, seven in number, by 122 in a three-game contest at Horticultural Hall. Well! Well! The regulars were minus Starkey, playing an outsider in his place. They led by 70 pins at the end of the second game, but the irregulars made a phenomenal finish, winning the third game by 198 pins, or 122 net lead. The regulars are going to have another try and great sport is expected. PHIL.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Conditions have changed but little from last week. Demand is very good for the season and there is none too much stock of fair grade. Beauties and Meteors are especially scarce and poor. On teas the rate ranges from $3 to $4 for what is classed as good, with some selects reaching $5, but a lot of them are sold at $1 to $2. In carnations the best whites reach $2 but the range is generally $1 to $1.50 and some go below the dollar mark. Asters are coming in quite freely now. On select goods the range is $1 to $1.50, the white ones leading in price. No outdoor carnations seem to have been received yet.

Sweet peas are still very poor in quality, as was to have been expected in view of the continuation of the rains. Gladioli are arriving in large quantities and move very slowly. The whites and light shades go best and the selects in these shades sometimes reach $3 to $4 per 100. Others sell at $1 to $2, and it is very difficult to sell mixed colors. The buyers insist on having the colors separate. Water lilies are coming in and sell readily at $1 per 100.

Various Items.

The autumn exhibition of the Chrysanthemum Society of America and of the Horticultural Society of Chicago will be held jointly in the Art Institute of Chicago, November 11th to 15th inclusive.

The annual picnic of the Chicago Florists' Club will be held at Bergman's Grove, Tuesday, Aug. 12th. There will be prize races and other entertainment in addition to bowling and boat riding and a game of base ball between the wholesalers and retailers. Take Metropolitan elevated (Garfield Park line) to end station and La Grange cars to grove. As many as possible will meet at Randolph and Wabash and start from there at 10:30 a. m. Contributions of prizes are solicited by the committee.

R. Q. Gwynn, formerly of Nyack, N. Y., is starting into the nursery and landscaping business at Glen View.

J. and E. Kalisch, secretary and manager of Wm. Kalisch & Sons, St. Louis, are spending a week visiting the trade in the city and vicinity. They will also visit points in Wisconsin and Michigan, making a three to four weeks' trip in all.

C. M. Dickinson has returned from his eastern trip looking well and hearty.

Henry Payne, the green goods man, is going on a fishing trip. It is rumored that he will put a large hook on the end of a string of smilax.

The rains are still frequent but not so steady and continuous as previously. The exact amount of damage to carnations in the field can not be accurately determined until the work of filling the houses is undertaken, but it is certainly heavy in some cases.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Horticultural Society last Saturday afternoon action was taken resulting in the change of the date for the annual exhibition from the first to the second week in November.

Mr. J. W. Hanford, Carbondale, Ill., was a visitor this week.

J. Austin Shaw has returned to New York, calling at Detroit, Cleveland and Buffalo on the way.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Last week proved, in more respects than one, that summer business this year is going to be away above the average of other years.

The general supply of stock keeps just about the same, the majority of it being of very fair quality. Roses from the new stock are beginning to come in, but are very short stemmed, and, as a rule, are hard to dispose of, except in white, which go well for funeral work.

A few good carnations are still to be had, but not nearly enough to go around, especially in white. Some field-grown are to be seen, but the frequent rains spoiled the greater part of them, especially the white, which are spotted badly.

Asters are rapidly making a place for themselves, and as there are not too many of them as yet, they sell well. Prospects are that there will be a very large supply of these flowers later as they seem to be doing remarkably well this year.

Notes.

Mr. J. T. Conger has been on the sick list but is able to be about again.

Large funerals brought several out-of-town florists to this city to buy during the past week. Mr. C. P. Dieterich, of Marysville, Ky., had four large funerals at once, and he had about all he could do.

Mr. Weltz, of Wilmington, O., was also a caller, looking for cut stock for a funeral.

Annual Outing.

July 24th, the day of our annual outing, proved to be all that could be desired as to weather. Some 300 florists journeyed to Norwood Park, and when the day was over all were very tired, but were unanimous in saying that they had had a fine time. The outing committee kept things rolling from the start to the finish and all events went off without a hitch.

The greatest event of the day was the ball game in the morning between the young florists. For amateur players there was some first-class playing. And the victors, headed by Heller, had all they could do to win, the score being 7 to 6. A feature of the game was the catching of Lew Murphy and the pitching of R. Witterstaetter.

The foot race for young ladies was very exciting, as there were over fifteen entries.

Many were disappointed in that the ball game for the old florists was not played owing to the lack of time.

Mr. Jas. O'Malley deserves the prize for the fat man's race, for, although he did not run, he was the only one who was ready to go. The others were careful not to show themselves when that race was due.

All in all, the picnic was a success and the committee is to be congratulated on its good work.

C. J. OHMER.

NEW YORK.

Nothing disturbs the serene quietness of summer except the tolling for the dead. That is, looking at things from behind the florist's counter; of course there are other view points. For instance, some few of the craft are on the way to Europe, and quite an army of the boys and girls are away 'mong the mountains or at the sea.

There promises to be many changes this fall, all, we hope, for the better. Willie Hanft is out from Thomas Young's. Some boys are leaving Broadway to adorn other stores, but we'll speak of that later.

We were out to South Orange 'tother day and met several good people there. Mr. Hemming, from Meehan's nurseries was after rarebits in the way of herbaceous plants. Mr. Adolfsen, Superintendent for Spencer Trask, Saratoga, was spending a few dollars on old favorite plants, and Mr. Wm. Craig, of Philadelphia, was buying all the rare and new plants he could see. It's always a great pleasure to meet a man like William. He is one of a cycle of young men who have a brilliant future before them and know how to meet it.

We regret to learn that Mr. Robert Craig is not very well. He has been spending a few weeks with Mr. John N. May and others along the Jersey coast. Mr. W. A. Manda, of course, was up to the neck in priceless little bits of novelties. He reports an unprecedentedly busy season.

Everybody is talking about Pierson's new fern. All are anxious to get it and we hear of some big orders being placed for it by the most critical of our buyers.

The first shipment of Harrisii looks very good and the bulb men report good trade in them.

Walter Sheridan is busy putting a hopeful tint of paint on his store, and John Raynor is considering an extension to his already large store.

Coal—that's the word. There is a vast amount of anxiety among growers as to coal. This is the usual time for filling up the bunkers, but no dealer can supply, or even quote prices, and with the cold, damp nights soon to be, and even now, it's a mighty serious matter, this coal, even if it is black.

We don't hear much about Asheville. Only the bowling clubs, the old guard, a few of the very wealthy and, of course, the representatives of the press are talking about the trip. Milwaukee, where art thou? Pollworth, you'd get quite a crowd out your way next year. Try it again. Needn't employ a professional spouter. J. I. D.

BALTIMORE.

Various Items.

The cut flower trade keeps fairly good, its volume being somewhat heavier than last year, though the bulk of it is, as a rule, limited to funeral work. Good stuff is scarce. Mrs. Chas. Held, who has a fine class, as well as an extended clientage, of customers, succeeded last week in getting several hundred handsome Beauties and Liberties from Washington, after exhaustive efforts proved Baltimore and Philadelphia barren of these varieties. Just now a great staple is the white Cochet rose. This is coming in in great quantities, but generally with short stems. Asters are already abundant, and gladoli more in evidence than usual. A good many lilies are seen also.

We are having a summer of extraordinarily pleasant weather, the days warm, but without the excessive humidity so trying to human patience and endurance, and with nights perfect for rest and reinvigorating. An episode not so agreeable was a violent local wind storm on Sunday, the 20th, which wrought much damage, especially in the city and river, blowing over church steeples, tearing off roofs and upsetting boats. A number of lives were lost. The florists suffered to some extent, but the path of the storm was, fortunately, a narrow one. S. Feast & Sons, at Catonville, lost considerable glass, and Black & Bro., Chase street, Baltimore, report damages to their greenhouses to the amount of $500. The rain was light and there was no hail.

There is considerable building going on and much renovation and enlargement of plants. John M. Rider, of Brooklyn, Md., is building a new carnation house, 30x100 feet, a water tower, etc. F. C. Bauer, Govanstown, is putting up a house for carnations, about 18x75 feet.

It is understood that the delegation to Asheville will reach about twenty members from this locality. R.

BUFFALO.

The Picnic.

We are going to have a picnic, and more elaborate arrangements have been made than for any event of that kind in the history of our club. President Braik is a hustler when he takes hold of anything in earnest, and when he takes hold of your body you would think Jeffries was around. And have we not a splendid worker and good all-around manager of anything he works at in our treasurer, Charles H. Keitsch? And there are others. Now florists of the vicinity, Mr. Stroh, of Attica, and Mr. Wise, of East Aurora, and Mr. Gould, of Middleport, and all the rest of you—come. Don't say you were too busy. I notice in other cities that those men who have time for a little recreation are quite as prosperous as those that go groveling along with their heads on the ground, looking for the dollar 365 days in the year.

Free Barrels.

The stores will close that afternoon. We shall go to a most respectable and pleasant place. The supper is promised to be great in both quantity and quality. We shall be in the middle of the broad and rapid Niagara a few miles above the falls, and those wishing to go over the falls in a barrel can do so. The barrel will be furnished by the committee on sports, and if returned in good order no charge for use. The Bedell House band will furnish music for the giddy lads and lassies. The committee on sports has a fine programme. And last, but most important of all, you city dudes of the florist trade, don't think you (any of you) are too good to mix with the crowd. Lend this occasion the light of your countenance. The date is Wednesday, August 6th, and the Bedell House grand stand is the place.

"Business, there is no business," so we won't enter into it this chapter. We get a shower every day, so we can't kill weeds, but we can navigate the village roads again without high rubber boots.

W. S.

ST. PAUL.

The event of the week in florist circles was the Twin City picnic held at Spring Park on Lake Minnetonka Tuesday, July 22. Florists and their families to the number of 300 resorted thither and enjoyed a most delightful outing replete with pleasure from morning till night. The committee on sports arranged an excellent programme, most of the prizes being captured by St. Paul as usual.

Katie Hansen captured first honors in the young ladies' race. Mrs. Fred Topel was an easy winner in the married ladies' race. Wm. Conner captured first money in the men's free-for-all. E. P. Holm proved the fleetest fat man on the ground, with E. Nagel a good second. In the tug of war the lusty St. Paul team pulled themselves an easy victory. F. Dowdney secured first money in the shooting contest, with Hans Berg a close second. St. Paul had a walk-away in baso ball by a score of 9 to 4. H. Berg won an easy first in the boat race and scored high in the bowling contest.

P. Clausen, of Albert Lea, and Mr. Epps, foreman for L. J. Stuppy, of St. Joseph, Mo., were the outside visitors.

J. O. Zimmerman, of Pueblo, Col., was a recent caller. He is spending a vacation here, this being his former home.

Carl Peterson has erected two houses, 16x120 feet, on Stryker avenue, and is now glazing them. In addition to growing carnations for the trade and bedding plants for his retail business, he will do landscape work, having had several years' experience in that line in European countries.

Ludwig Anderson will superintend the building of the new houses being erected by Holm & Olson, having been engaged by them as foreman.

Notwithstanding the incessant heat, trade has been fairly active and flowers pretty well cleaned up each day. The shipping trade in funeral flowers is especially good. Asters are becoming very plentiful and are of good quality. Sweet peas are abundant and of extra choice quality. X. Y. Z.

CLEVELAND.

Business Quiet.

Business is at a standstill and has been for some time except for a little funeral work now and then. The members of the craft are busy tearing down, repairing and rebuilding.

The Club's Outing.

The Florists' Club gave its annual picnic last Tuesday, the 22nd, at Euclid Beach Park. About twenty-five members gathered there with their families and spent a very pleasant afternoon. It was a very quiet affair, each and all providing their own lunch and partaking of it at their own pleasure.

Some passed the time at the bowling alleys, while others played pedro to pass the time away.

Various Items.

There will not be many from here who will attend the convention, only three or four having expressed their intention of going, there being but very little interest shown here regarding it.

The F. R. Williams Co. has remodeled several of its houses and has them all planted to roses, which are looking very fine indeed. This firm is going in very strong for flat houses, putting a 14-foot and a 12-foot rafter on a house 25 feet wide on centers.

A. Schmitt, of Glenville, has been delayed in his rebuilding by the freight handlers' strike in Chicago, being unable to get his lumber shipped. He will rebuild three of his houses this summer.

R. Addicott & Son have taken down two houses and are rebuilding them at right angles to the way they used to stand.

John Smith & Son are building a violet house and also a show house for palms and ferns, attached to their store.

The J. M. Gasser Co. is hustling its new houses and expects to have the best arranged plant in this section when completed.

Some of the florists here expect to house their carnations early this year; the stock outside with most of them is looking very well, except on the low land, where some have been drowned out. The stuff that has suffered most has been the small seedlings, which were beaten down by the heavy rains and could not get up again. Carnations have held out well this year, and although rather small now, there is still a good demand for them.

Roses are very small and of poor quality. Asters are now becoming quite a prominent feature and, in fact, are about the only flower that is available that can be called good. Gladioli very good here this year, some growers showing some very fine ones both in size and color.

Tenep.

THE CORFU BELL.

Our Country Estate is Adjacent to a Swamp.

The Corfu tolls the knell of parting day,
The piping frog is all the music left for me.
The hard worked florist plods his homeward weary way,
And sleeps and dreams of crops that are to be.

Now fade the glimmering sash bars from the sight,
And all the swamp a solemn stillness holds,
Save where ten million skeeters buzz their buzzy flight,
And leave us but a skeleton of punctured holes.

William of Normandy, alias William the Conqueror, alias William the First, he that conquered the savage Saxon at Hastings, instituted the Curfew Bell, when everybody except his chums had to be indoors and lights out at 8 p. m., Greenwich time. We think that would be a good thing yet for all people under 25, and we have also found that the modern spelling is incorrect. It should be Corfu. Of course Thomas Gray, in his immortal classic, was not aware of this, even if it did take him fourteen years to compose his matchless poem. Froggy.
